Grapplers show improvement

"Best team effort we've had all season, but once again we just came out on the wrong end of the scoreboard."

That was just about the way UNC-W wrestling coach Charles Sproles phrased it after he had watched his Seahawks lose to Pembroke State University, 30-18 in a wrestling match at Hanover Hall this past Thursday night.

This loss marked the fifth time the Seahawk grapplers have come out on the wrong end of the scoreboard as they now stand at five losses and no wins. The Seahawks will visit the Buccaneers of East Carolina University tonight for their next match.

Although the Seahawks lost the match, there were some really outstanding individual performances for the Hawks, and much needed improvement made in many areas.

Ed Weddington and David Hughes both rebounded from their defeats at the hands of the Appalachian State wrestlers last week to post 4-1 records in dual matches. Hughes convincingly beat his man, 11-0 in receiving a major decision as he showed much better work in his offensive skills while Weddington did his usual thing in pinning his man two-thirds of the way through the second period. This marked Weddington's fourth pin of the year in as many wins.

Two other fine efforts were made by Randy Sullivan and Pat Cannady in the individual matches for the Hawks. Randy Sullivan wrestled to a 7-7 tie in his match. Cannady pinned his man with 1:36 left on the clock in the second period to highlight the Seahawk's performance.

A summary of the individual matches follows:

118-PSU wins by UNC-W forfeit, 126-Lynch (PSU) decision Hickman, 3-2, 134-Bridgewater (PSU) decision Wilson, 8-2, 142-Beasmore (PSU) major decision over Webb, 150-Hughes major decision over Christie (PSU), 11-0, 158-Weddington pin Hutchins (PSU), 4:10, 167-Sullivan tied Edwards (PSU), 7-7, 177-Hudkins (PSU) pin Griffin, 190-Cannady pin Frex (PSU) #26, Ullm-Turner (PSU) pin Pogolowitz, 4:13.

GOT 'CHA - Seahawk wrestler David Hughes (on top) does have his Pembroke opponent Jack Christie in quite a predicament in an individual match this past Thursday at games, Prince scored 35 points and got 20 rebounds. Mike Cherry contributed his usual outstanding performance in both games. Cherry collected 40 points in the two contests and rebounded excellently. Cherry pulled down 19 rebounds in the game against Atlantic Christian.

Ricky Brock was slowed down quite a bit in the game against Baptist but came on strong against ACC with 18 points, hitting a sizzling 75 per cent from the floor with 9 for 12.

It's very hard to spot a person's value when he is sitting on the bench, but for the past two games, Greg Kemp has not been sitting, but playing. Kemp came off the bench in both games to give the Hawks the lift they needed. Kemp scored 20 points in the contests and rebounded very well especially against the Bulldogs where he grabbed 10 rebounds.

SEAHAWK Spotlight

by linda ford

Mike Cherry, a 6-2 junior from Ahoskie, is this week's Seahawk in the spotlight. Cherry, a motivating force on the basketball team, is perhaps one of the most exciting members on the Seahawk squad in several years.

In the loss against Pembroke State University, Cherry exhibited his excellence at playing both offense and defense scoring 21 of 47 points. The Seahawk wins over Wesleyan and St. Andrews allowed Cherry to again display his talents by scoring in double figures in both contests and leading the team in rebounding.

When asked how he felt about the play of the team so far this season Mike said that he felt the team had played good and he felt that the Seahawks were a good team. He also said that good team work was exhibited, but the Seahawks were a young team with a lot to learn.

Mike, who began playing basketball his sophomore year in high school, was an outstanding high school and junior college player. At Mount Olive College he averaged 22 points and 10 rebounds a game. While at Bertie Central High he teamed with Brent Belch to lead the team to state 3-A championship honors.

Library listening gives choice

Tired of Music by Muzak? Students who are may hear Cream, Stephen Stills, Arlo Guthrie and others at the Randall Library's listening center.

At present, the audio collection contains 491 records. The spoken selections include drama, poetry, and foreign language recordings. In the music category, classical, easy listening, and popular records can be found. A selection of tapes is also available.

The center equipment is made up of two turntables, two tape players, and 10 head sets. Located on the first floor in front of the reference collection, the center provides seating space for up to 18 persons.

The use of the center is simple. Find the desired selection in the record card catalog. Then give the number of the recording to a student assistant at the circulation desk. A head set will be issued and the recording played.

The library recently received a $500.00 grant from the office of higher education to increase the record collection. A portion of this money is still available and Miss Helen Hagen, Head Librarian, is open to suggestions for new recordings.

The listening center is an opportunity for the student to acquire knowledge beyond that of the written word.

by lewis musser

Ever since its avalanche inception in 1968, hard rock has retained a haranguing stigma. Some have called it the music of limited artists with limited musical prowess, a sanctuary in which musicians unwilling or unable to broaden their musical horizons could lounge, a mecca for non-innovators.

This argument carries a certain amount of weight. Consider the fact that the form has indeed harbored quite a few schmuck-rock specialists such as Cactus and other rip-off bands, too humorous to mention.

But, indisputably, two bands rose from hard-rock's golden era as legitimate masters of the form—Cream, of course, and Mountain.

With the formation of West, Bruce and Laing, a cycle of sorts seems to have been completed, for this may well be the last band of seasoned hard-rock veterans from the old school.

Two former Mountain men, Leslie West and Corky Laing, have teamed up with Jack Bruce, formally of Cream. The three make for a hard rock ensemble of par excellence.

Their first release "Why Dontcha" embraces every characteristic (thunderous chords, excessive riffs, gutsy bass, hard and heavy drumming) associated with hard-rock in its classic form. The result is some fine music, however, familiar it may be. It accomplishes in great fashion its end: it gets ya movin'!

West's gravelly vocals along with his usual exuberant guitar work give the sound that same gusty presence which characterized the music of Mountain.

Jack Bruce lays down the same robust bass that distinguished him during the Cream era. He also once again utilizes his trusty friend of bygone days—the harmonica. Bruce's compositions (he has 3 on the album) are outstanding, reflective works. "Out Into the Fields" is just beautiful.

Corky Laing is never at a loss for thunderous percussion which rallies to meet West's scorching, soaring lead. The combination sounds similar to an eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, with Bruce supplying the needed moderation. "Love is Worth the Blues" is a first class rocker, as are "Shake Ma Thing" and the title cut.

"Third Degree" is a great blues rendition with West providing an intense guitar solo and Bruce tellin' the story like it ain't NEVER been told!

With "Why Dontcha", West Bruce, and Laing usher in 1968 all over again, but it's entirely forgivable. Because these artists give hard-rock the justice it is entitled to, but rarely receives.

Sorosis gives annual $100

by brenda knowles

North Carolina Junior Sorosis will donate $100,00 annually to the University Poetry Contest, sponsored each fall by the English department.

Sorosis will sponsor the reception to announce the winners of the poetry contest, as well as the spring reception for the Jesse Rehder Short Story Contest winners.

They provided $100 in awards to the winners of the '72 poetry contest. Mike Church, first place winner, received $50; Linda Goldman, second place, received $30; and Peter Smith, third, received $20.

The club sponsored the reception held on Oct. 19, 1972, to announce the winners. Contestants and faculty members were present for the announcements.

Delta Upsilon held its annual provincial convention in Atlanta, Georgia this past correction

Atlanta, Georgia this past week, Alpha Delta Upsilon sent three delegates to participate in seminar type training. They were Vice-president, Corky Hanovich, Treasurer, Johnny Bullard and Chapter Relations Officer, Rocky Moore.

Delta Upsilon is in the process of upgrading its standards as an international fraternity. Within the next year there will be a reevaluation of many of its chapters and colonies. Minimum standards are not met, Delta Upsilon will be forced to revoke charters previously granted.

The UNC-W ADU colony has worked hard at obtaining a charter from the international headquarters. It has all the potential of achieving chapter status next fall. Presently, ADU has 25 active brothers and 6 junior actives. Assuming 100% induction and a successful rush, this will place ADU within reach of the 40 man minimum required by the international headquarters.

The brothers of ADU realize the importance of the fraternity experience in their lives. ADU thinks of itself as being much more than a social drinking club. Scholarship and the diffusion of liberal culture are essential principles of the fraternity. ADU has tentative plans to sponsor an art exhibit, and a series of skits to be performed by members of the drama department.

The most important advantage of the fraternity experience is that it allows individuals to test their abilities in a group setting. This advantage is realized in later life where one could possibly make a mistake that could cost him his career. The fraternity offers all the challenges of life without the consequences of failure. ADU extends an invitation to you to join their fraternity. Keep posted on the upcoming rush later this spring.

Jessie Rehder story contest opens door to literary career

by robin starry

The fourth annual Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest, sponsored by the Department of English, will, perhaps, open the door to a literary career for a student attending UNC-W.

The contest is open to any person who is enrolled in at least one course at the University. Students may enter no more than two stories and these are to be submitted to Mrs. Treanor, secretary for the English department, no later than noon Monday, March 19.

Members of the English Department faculty will do the judging for the contest. All contestants are then invited to attend the reception provided by the Junior Sororists. This will be held in the Randall Library conference room on Thursday, March 22 at 1:30 a.m. At this time winners will be announced and awards presented.

Prizes are as follows:

First Prize - $ 100

Second Prize - $ 30

Third Prize - $ 20

and

First and Second Honorable Mention

The winning stories are also published in the ATLANTIC, the UNC-W literary magazine.

In the past, prize money has been provided by the Jessie Rehder Memorial Fund, Chapel Hill. Last year the money was donated by the Rehder family, here in Wilmington and by the Memorial Fund in Chapel Hill.

Last year, prizes were presented by Sam Ragan, poet, and former editor of "News and Observer." It was the first time in the history of the contest that there had been a tie for first place.

Mr. Ragan presented first place awards to Michael Church for his story "Cats Belong on the Floor" and to Kenn Keffer for his work entitled "Digging the Basement." (Keffer also took first place honors in the 1970 contest.)

Third place went to Tim Sims for "Reasons" while Kathi Beall and Ed Boylan received honorable mention for their stories, "Satan's Passion, Angel's Breath" and "The Abandoned Fort," respectively.

Jessie Clifford Rehder, a native of Willington and head of the creative writing program at Chapel Hill, was a novelist, poet, and short story writer. She is best known for her novel, "Remembrance Way."

Miss Rehder had that rare quality of being a student's friend as well as instructor. She was concerned about her students and wanted them to feel at ease with her. In fact, she insisted they call her "Jessie."

Dr. C. Hugh Holman of Chapel Hill said this about Jessie Rehder: "She had an explorer's eye for latent talent among her students and friends and a passionate earnestness in bringing that talent into the light of day and encouraging its growth and its flowering."

The Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest is a tribute to a woman who, it carries on the ideas and ideals that Miss Rehder followed. It finds talent and certainly brings it "into the light of day."

Variety key to homecoming success

commentary by kathi beall

"Variety" was perhaps the key to last weekend's successful homecoming.

The weekend really got into swing Thursday night with the Dr. Hook/Billy Preston concert. Dr. William Malloy, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, stated that he was pleased with the cooperation of the University police and the members of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity in watching the doors, clearing aisles, and preventing smoking.

Also indicating satisfaction with the concert committee and students compliance with the concert guidelines set up, Malloy said "If this conduct continues, I see no problem in having other on-campus concerts."

The success of the concert is attributed by Malloy and others to a lot of hard work by concert committee chairman Wes Knappe, and the students on the concert committee.

Friday at 6 p.m., there were 200 people hungry and waiting to experience UNC-W's first attempt at dinner theater, which, according to homecoming committee chairman Liz Buffington, was a "tremendous success." The Alpha Omega Players of Dallas, Tex., presented Mark Twain's hilarious "Dairy of Adam and Eve" to a well-fed sellout crowd.

Ms. Linda Moore, Director of Student Activities, was instrumental in the success of the theater. "She was just terrific!" said Liz. Also due thanks for their contributions are Alpha Chi Sigma, Phi Mu, Zeta Tau Alpha sororities and Alpha Phi Omega fraternity.

Dr. Malloy emphasized the work that Liz and the other members of the homecoming committee put in--coordinating the events, taking charge of halftime activities, conducting the homecoming queen elections.

After the dinner theater, there was a dance in the Pub, with music provided by Pegasus. There were good crowds at both dances, which is a reflection of hard work by Barry Asbury and the dance committee.

Liz stated that the effectiveness of this year's homecoming was due to the variety of activities--the "something for everybody" concept, and she feels that the success was reflected by the attendance at the weekend's activities and in election turnout.

Saturday night, there was the Homecoming game, with Homecoming Queen Jo Hilton crowned during halftime activities. "All the girls did really well," Liz stated.

And following the game, there was a "fantastic" dance with music by the Catalinas.

There was music for the listeners, dances for the dancers, theater for the watchers, comedy for the laughers, people for other people, sports for the sports fans. Something for everyone.

Thanks from a lot of students who had a good time to Liz, Jack Paul, and the Homecoming committee; Wes and the concert committee; Homecoming Queen Jo Hilton; homecoming queen contestants and sponsors; Barry and the dance committee; the University police; APO, ZTA, Alpha Chi, and Phi Mu; Ms. Moore; the cafeteria folks; and everyone else who worked to make Homecoming '73 special.

Feedback!

To the Editor:

On February 19, 1973, a letter was received from the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity by Jo Hilton, our newly elected Homecoming Queen. As a responsibility to our student body, we feel that it should be made public.

Dear Jo:

We, the Brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon, would like to congratulate you on your election to Homecoming Queen. Contrary to popular belief, we do not condone any bad sportmanship. We also hope that any actions by a minority do not reflect in your opinion upon the majority.

Due to misinformation that we received, we felt that there were some discrepancies in the election; however, after confrontation with the facts we realize that we were in complete error. We wish to apologize for any inconvenience that this may have caused you.

We wish for you to understand that any words spoken or action taken by any member of Tau Kappa are now considered water under the bridge.

Once again, congratulations and best of luck during your reign.

Sincerely,
Marvin Ingram
President - TKE

For those of you who are wondering why a formal apology was necessary, here is your answer. Our school was blasted with Fraternity "power" and on February 17, Homecoming Coronation, the circuit blew a fuse and lost its power. Jo Hilton, sponsored by "Friends," triggered this reaction when she became the Homecoming Queen of UNC-W. From the moment she was crowned, a chain of grotesque events began. These events began with the TKE's "walking out" when Jo was crowned and ending with an extremely provocative display of Jo's picture accompanied by a vicious and vulgar letter. Apparently the TKE's have realized their misconduct and are on the road to redeem themselves through a letter of apology. Stated in the letter was that TKE did not condone any bad sportmanship. We presume that malicious slander of character and hideous and crude name calling is not considered "bad sportmanship." In the eyes of the TKE, the TKE have also stated that "any words spoken or action taken by any member of TKE are now considered water under the bridge" - Stagnant water which will never be able to erase the humiliating experience that Jo Hilton and her friends have encountered.

Novices use microfilm

by kathie corn

So you aren't a technical genius. That's no reason to shy away from the microfilm room at the Randall Library. Microfilm can be a very valuable reference tool, but many students are still afraid of the rather formidable looking equipment.

Microfilm is an economical investment both moneywise and spacewise. It is easily stored in a small area and costs much less than bound volumes.

It is also less susceptible to mutilation and theft. A humorous exception to this rule occurred when the microfilm of "Playboy" disappeared from the library at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Located at the rear of the first floor, the room contains several cabinets of microfilm and microfiche holdings. Microfiche differs from microfilm in that it is printed on flat cards rather than on a roll.

Microfilm equipment at the library includes four blowing machines, one printer-viewer, and one microfiche viewer. Illustrated instructions accompany each machine. The general procedure is to insert the microfilm reel into the viewer and then adjust various knobs until the desired selection appears on the screen.

Five huge shelves house prints of every issue of the New York "Times" since its inception, September 1, 1851. If you've always been curious about other important events that occurred on the day of your birth, the New York "Times" would be a great place to find out.

"American Economic Review," "Arithmetic Teacher," "Russian Quarterly," and "Sociology of American Education" are just a few of the periodicals currently on microfilm. There is also an excellent collection of writings on the Civil War and on military tactics.

To the Editor:

The actions of a few TKEs were really disgusting and belittling to those concerned at the crowning of the Homecoming Queen Saturday Night.

Poor sportmanship is usually found among the younger, immature people--not the college students that are considered to be mature and responsible. Defeat should be accepted, not evaded by immature actions.

For a fraternity that proclaims love, peace, and brotherhood, they really made fools of themselves!

There was no dishonesty in the elections or the counting of the votes. The winner won fairly and her accomplishment should not be begrudged nor should she be made to feel that she should not have received the award.

Almighty TKEs should polish up their ideals and live up to them, or forget their club of ego trippers!

Again, supported by

Automated banking NCNB extends 24-hr service

North Carolina National Bank introduced a 24 hour automated banking facility for obtaining cash in Wilmington Feb. 20 when an NCNB 24 unit became operational at the bank's Hanover Center office at 3315 Oleander Drive. To help introduce UNC-W students to the conveniences of 24-hour banking, NCNB will sponsor an open house Wednesday, Feb. 28 at the Hanover Office from 6:30-8:30 p.m. Free beverages and pizza will be served.

"We hope that many UNC-W students will take advantage of our invitation to see NCNB 24 in operation and enjoy our hospitality during the open house," said Michael C. Brown, senior vice president and NCNB Wilmington city executive.

"North Carolina National Bank has always welcomed the valuable business given us by UNC-W students," he said.

The NCNB 24 may be used by anyone possessing an NCNB BankAmericard and a personal identification number. BankAmericard applications for college students will be available at the Wednesday function.

A customer may withdraw currency from the unit by inserting his magnetic-stripped BankAmericard and keying in a personal identification number known only to him and the bank. Withdrawals may be made in amounts of $25, or $50, for up to $100 daily. The transaction may be credited to the customer's personal checking or BankAmericard account.

French and Spanish students of UNC-W hosted 30 similar representatives of Coastal Carolina Community College in Jacksonville here Tuesday.

The visitors, through initial efforts of CCCC student Senas Howard and Dr. Violeta Fischer of CCCC, observed foreign language facilities and general campus structure.

After a brief session and introduction to the campus, they viewed French and Spanish films in the Modern Language Laboratory. The E. E. Williams Spanish Club and several French majors hosted a reception.

Visiting students met with Dr. William M. Malloy, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, and Ralph Parker, Assistant Director of Admissions. They discussed requirements for transferring from CCCC, a two-year school, to UNC-W.

Drug books added

by kathie corn

Drug use and abuse is a controversial subject, not only at UNC-W but on many college campuses across the country. Students probing the question of drugs may find helpful information in two new books at the Randall Library.

"The Use of LSD in Psychotherapy and Alcoholism" is an in-depth study of the therapeutic research of LSD done in the past twenty years. According to the editor, Harold A. Abramson, LSD "is perhaps the greatest breakthrough in psychotherapy in the last sixty years," Dr. Abramson feels that the "most experienced and responsible investigators" agree with him.

The book is based on the writings of fifty doctors, scientists, and psychiatrists who attended a conference on LSD in May, 1965. Included in the book are thirty-six of the papers presented at the conference.

While the first volume presents a purely scientific picture, the second book, "Drugs, For and Against," tries to show objectively both sides of the drug issue. Edited by Harold Hart, the book contains twelve original essays by men knowledgeable in the drug field.

"Drugs, For and Against" presents differing opinions on the question of drugs. On the extreme right is the essay by Max Rafferty, former superintendent of Public Instruction for California. He describes drugs as "a perfectly hellish evil."

The extreme left is represented by Michael Aldrich, editor of the "Marijuana Review." He believes that some drugs are "most beneficent."

These additions to the library present great information on the timely topic of drugs.

Pi Kappa Phi

Pi Kappa Phi has tentative plans for acquiring a new house. It is located 5 miles from the campus near the extension of N. Kerr and Castle Hayne. It is of old Colonial Style with 1 1/2 acres surrounding the house. It has an outdoor Bar-B-Q pit. The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi are expecting big things for the house.

Saturday night the Pi Kappas have a costume party planned for pledges and brothers. The theme for the party is for Veterans' of foreign wars. All wars the U.S. has participated in will be represented. The attire will be old army uniforms. It promises to be a fun evening.

Also fraternity elections are coming up in early March. All brothers who are contemplating election to the different officers are encouraged to begin planning their campaigns.

Zeta Tau Alpha

Zeta Tau Alpha welcomed two new members into their Sorority, February 18. Newly initiated are Pam Gravino and Suzie Yeo.

Zeta sponsored a Valentines party in honor of their "sweetheart," Marvin Ingram, president of TKE. After the party, the Zetas were invited over to the TKE house for a Midweek party. Special guests were TKE's and a new colony of Zeta's from Pembroke University.

Delta Upsilon

DU is planning a weekend at Ocean Drive. They have obtained a house for the brothers within easy access of the Spanish Galleon.

The Pledge program is continuing with five pledges: Jim Herren, Greg "Bear" Guthry, Dennis Williams, Wayne Sharp, and Mike Atkinson. The Pledgemaster was quoted as saying, "I feel this pledge class is one of the best in the history of the fraternity. There is a lot of enthusiasm and a great deal of pride."

The pledge class will make its pledge trip to the Chapel Hill DU house. Chapel Hill is renowned as having one of the most outstanding DU chapters in the United States.

ADU is in the process of making plans for installation into the DU international. DU needs more junior activists in order to make its bid for going national next Fall. Interested persons are invited to the second Formal Rush which will begin in early April.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

The TKE's would like to congratulate Jo Hilton for election of homecoming queen. Congratulations are also in order for Kathy Zegarac, TKE Sweetheart, for being 1st runner up.

The TKE's have started their spring pledge class consisting of seven pledges: Joe Jones, John Jordan, Joe Maskey, Charlie Roberts, David Wychel, and Steve Griffin.

The TKE's also welcome seven new brothers to the bond: Russ Cook, Tojle King, Pat Johnson, Leonard Sibley, Bob "Tut" Kincaid, Linwood "Junior" Carter, and Glenn "Magilla" Tew.

The TKE's had an alumni weekend during homecoming where there was a cookout and a band party Saturday night. Ski weekend is being planned for this weekend, where TKE brotherhood has rented a chalet at Seven Devils Ski resort. All brothers are to contact FUBAR for directions.

Grapplers readying for Districts

Two matches are scheduled this weekend for the UNC-W wrestling squad as they begin getting ready for the NAA District 29 tournament to be held Wednesday, February 28 at Pembroke State University.

Seahawk wrestling has not done as well as was expected of them at the first of the season, but they have been a young, maturing club all year and should be on their way to ultimate success by tournament time.

UNC-W grapplers have not won a team dual meet all season as they have suffered six losses. However, the Seahawks have a very good chance of winning their two dual meets this weekend as they tackle Pfeiffer College at Pfeiffer on Friday, and then go up to Elon College Saturday for a meet with the Elon grapplers.

Wrestling coach Charles Sproles has already picked out the nine men that will fill nine of ten weight divisions for the Seahawks in the upcoming matches this weekend and for the District tournament. The Seahawks will place a man in every weight category except at the 118 division which they will have to leave open.

The nine men that will be wrestling in the District and their weight divisions are as follows: 126 - Bruce Hickman, 134 - Chris Wilson, 142 - Ted Webb, 150 - David Hughes, 158 - Ed Weddington, 167 - Randy Sullivan, 177 - Steve Griddin, 190 - Pat Canady, and at UNLined Linwood Carter.

Of these nine men, David Hughes and Ed Weddington have the best chance of bringing home district titles as they both have wrestled extremely well this season.

Hughes is the defending champion at his weight division while Weddington is a former district champ from 1971.

Another wrestler that could bring home district honors with him is Chris Wilson. Wilson was the runner-up in the districts last year at the 126 weight division, and now has moved up to 134 and improved a great deal.

In talking with coach Sproles about the District tournament, he said that probably Pembroke had the best chance of winning the title and repeating last years two district champions that are still on their squad.

However, Sproles is not abandoning the thought of the Seahawks winning the District 29 title.

"If we could just get some breaks in the tournament, we could very well win the title," Sproles stated, "It just depends on how good we wrestle as a team."

Sproles emphasized the point that no team would win the title by a large margin, and that Campbell, Pembroke, and the Seahawks would all win at least two individual district titles, but it would depend on how many second, third, and fourth place winners a team would have that will determine the team District Champ.

Spring fever hits high

As the superficial snow finally begins its recession, and slightly warmer temperatures enter this coastal college area, the time is right for the big "spring fever" to come upon us and bring with it three other types of fever that warm the cockles of the heart in any knowledgeable Seahawk sport fan.

It's not that that Seahawk hasn't enjoyed his hibernation during the long winter months, but moreover, it is a time for the Seahawk to come out of the winter quarters and begin to swing either a bat, or racket, or even a club.

The three other fevers that have been mentioned earlier are baseball, tennis, and golf. All of which require some type of utensil for hitting three differently shaped and materialized balls.

Of these three fevers, UNC-W will probably fare best with baseball where much time will be spent trying to create the ultimate "Green machine." The baseball fever season begins with the Seahawks playing the N. C. State Wolfpack here, Monday, March 5. This game will be followed by 37 more feverish games, and 27 of the 38 game schedule are at home.

The baseball fever promises to bring with it many high hopes for a great season for the Seahawks as they have the outstanding hitting strength and some good sound pitchers.

With all of this baseball fever going around, one might find it hard to catch the golf and tennis fevers, but still many will come in contact with golf and tennis and will undoubtedly conduct one or possibly both fevers.

So, be on the look-out for "spring fever" and the other fevers that come along with it.

Seahawks outscore Monarchs, 96-77

A superb performance by the UNC-W cagers in the later stages of the second half catapulted the Seahawks past Methodist College, 96-77 in action at Hanover Hall Saturday night.

Trailing Methodist by as many as 10 points with 13 left to play, the Seahawks quickly began their uproar that didn't cease until they had soundly beaten the stunned Monarchs much to the approval of the UNC-W Homecoming crowd.

"It took a lot of praying to pull this one out but it was worth every prayer," said Coach Mel Gibson after his Hawks had beaten the hot-handed Monarchs.

"I've never seen a team shoot any better than this Methodist team did for the first 30 minutes of a game," declared Gibson after his team's next to final contest. "We called time out and made a few defensive adjustments that were effective in helping us win the ball game."

The win was especially nice after the Hawks had played so poorly in the game with Pembroke State losing 64-48 last Wednesday night. It (the win) marked the 9th of the season for the Seahawks while they have suffered 14 losses. The season finale for UNC-W came Wednesday night at Hanover Hall against the Atlantic Christian College Bulldogs.

"This was probably the best offensive ball we've played all season," Gibson pointed out about the Seahawks final 13 minutes of play. "But overall on defense, we were reaching and not trying to contain the offensive game of Methodist throughout the game."

As far as for the hot hand went in the game, the Seahawks had it when it meant the most as the Monarchs cooled off toward the end of the contest. Both teams were right around the sixty percent mark with the Seahawks taking the advantage of 39 for 65 from the field for the 60 per cent mark while the Monarchs hit for 59 per cent from the floor.

Big six-foot-seven-inch freshman center Ernie Lynn, and superstar Mike Cherry lead the individual performances for the Seahawks as they combined together to score 54 points and handle the boards extremely well.

Cherry canned 29 points-21 of them coming in the final period while Lynn pumped in 17 points during the initial period enroute to a 25 point night.

Gibson commented on Lynn's performance after the game, saying that this was definitely Lynn's best performance of the year. "Ernie's scoring in the first half kept us in the ball game, and he got some big rebounds in the second (half)."

Two other Seahawks scored in the double figures, and contributed much to the Seahawks' success. David Prince pulled down some key rebounds and scored 12 points while big Ricky Brock tallied 11 points in helping the Seahawks win.

Consolidation

WHAT ARE THE BASIC ADVANTAGES OF THE PROPOSED CONSOLIDATED GOVERNMENT OVER THE PRESENT TWO GOVERNMENTS?

PROS -

Some of the basic advantages of the new government are:

1. One government responsible and accountable to all citizens of our county.
2. Elimination of conflicts between two separate governments having overlapping authority and functions.
3. One consolidated government that will be more sensitive and more responsive to the needs and wishes of its citizens. Every two years the citizens of this community can take a hard look at its government in order to see that all funds are expended carefully and wisely and that the basic needs of the community are met.

4. The Mayor will also be elected every two years by the people. He will be the "people's man." The resources (human and physical) of the city and county can be combined to meet the problems of citizens on a county-wide basis.

5. Elimination of costly present and future duplication of facilities, functions and services and equipment between two separate city and county governments.

6. Greater convenience to the individual citizen in receiving and using local government services.

7. Greater financial equity in the distribution of tax and financial burdens. Let it be emphasized that citizens living outside the city will not have their taxes increased by reason of consolidation unless such citizens demand services they are not now receiving. Then they will only pay for the costs of such additional services. This protection and assurance is written into the new charter.

CONS- Absolutely none. Since New Hanover County and Wilmington are already the most consolidated two governments in the state, potential savings would be very limited. All offices now are reporting capacity work loads, therefore the additional burdens placed on the various offices would require even more personnel for the transition. This would be true particularly in the finance and auditing offices as each tax bill would have to be individually screened so the taxpayer would only be charged for the services received.

One of the biggest disadvantages is that the ten man governing board would be less responsive to the individual taxpayer. With part time commissioners meeting every week or two, they could not possibly hear every complaint brought before them. This would mean that rather than getting the attention of elected officials they would be talking to full time governmental workers who tend to be less responsive to the feelings and wishes of the people, thus a local bureaucracy would be created.

As to the election by non-staggered terms every two years, this would not permit the average elected official really to learn what is going on before he would be involved in another election. Thus the commissioners would have to rely more and more on the advice and decisions of the manager, who would become a "super manager", again taking the government away from the people.

Another disadvantage to the two year non-staggered terms proposed is that it permits a handful of affluent people to finance an enormous campaign for a "selected" slate of candidates, thus making it virtually impossible for a little man to get elected, unless, of course, he agreed to be a "yes" man to the "king makers".

It would give the commissioners even greater control over the lives of the county residents in the areas of street improvements and sewer and water hook-ups. Under the proposed charter, the powers of the commissioners become even more dictatorial than those presently possessed by either the council or commission.

At present, if a person in the city becomes disenchanted with actions of the city council, they can move into the county. If consolidation passes, there is no escape,

Actors expand characters with physical, vocal exercise

by Jean Ianier

Presentation of "Orestes" by the University Theater began yesterday. It will be presented through Sunday beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the SRO Theater in Kenan Hall. General admission is $1. Students are admitted free.

Neal Bell is assistant director (to Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon) and is Pylades in the play. He is quite involved in the work backstage. During the rehearsals the main emphasis is on extensive physical and vocal exercises. The idea is to expand the actor into the character he portrays.

They work with sounds, trying to obtain an essence of the Greek sound--mainly soft vowels. Much stress is placed on the idea of sound so the actor will learn to feel the work. During the exercises, they work more with sounds than the actual connotation of the words.

Bell says one of the amazing traits of the play is that although it is thousands of years old, it is still applicable. The Trojans and Greeks are lost in the middle of a war that has lingered for so long that the people have forgotten why the fighting began.

As the whole of Greece was beginning to split, states Bell, America is affected by grave splits in allegiance, by revolutions, and by inner conflicts.

Directly, the story deals with Orestes and Electra, who kill their mother. Although this is a "crime of passion," they have broken the law. There is emphasis on whether the laws should be enforced and whether Electra and Orestes should be punished.

'The Poseidon Adventure'

by spence focus

While sitting here waiting for some divine inspiration to gather me in its arms and transport me to the land of unfettered and uncluttered critical writings, I discovered two main points about THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE.

The first was the obvious Hollywood facial treatment of its glamorous setting, reminding one of the epic, Titanic, and its profusion of stars, most of whom have won an Academy Award. The second point is, despite all of this, THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE, from beginning to end is an exiting motion picture.

Like TITANIC, THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE (a name which does nothing for the book or the movie), contains those things which tend to send films to an early grave or an early showing on prime time TV--the ocean liner heading for inevitable disaster, the staunch captain, married to the sea and his ship, and a cast of characters too stereotyped to mention.

But POSEIDON manages to salvage itself. With deft acting by actors who otherwise might have yawned their way through their parts and fine technical realism, THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE, comes off well.

Nothing is wasted in set design -- every turn down the ship's upside-down passageways brings a new danger or a new death. The characters fight valiantly on--through seemingly unsurmountable odds and sometimes unbelievable lines. Only sheer acting talent keeps them all from drawing laughs. Gene Hackman, the leader of a brave little band of survivors through the S.S.

Good salvage job

POSEIDON, capsized by a ninety-foot tidal wave, is given the worst lines and pulls them off the best. Whenever one character meets danger, another comes to his aid. This works the same way in the acting department. Ernest Borgnine, playing a too-tough detective seems to lose his way through the part. Red Buttons, with insecurity written all over his face, plays a lonely, inconspicuous man, and plays him well. Shelley Winters is the big, fat, Jewish woman ably supported by Jack Anderson, playing her husband.

Following the tightly written book to a tee, THE POSEIDON ADVENTURE, lapses only momentarily, when the final irony shown in the book is left out. POSEIDON does not drag the moviegoer down and meets only the disaster shown on the screen.

I Solisti deserves applause

by angel williford

From Yugoslavia to Kenan Auditorium, as a part of the University Music Series, the world famous chamber orchestra, I Solisti di Zagreb, performed in concert Feb. 15.

The enchantment of these twelve string musicians was perhaps doubled by the beauty and sweetness provided by the flute soloist, Tinka Muradori.

The program included masterpieces by J. S. Bach: Suite in B minor for flute, harpsichord and strings, and Concerto for harpsichord and strings in F minor. After a brief intermission, Sextet for Strings by B. Martinu and Roumanian Dances by B. Bartok were also magnificently played.

It is no wonder that this group of musicians receive praise all over the world. They are serious and talented musicians. They deserved the applause the audience gave and more.

The twelve stringed instruments consisted of seven violins, two violas, two cello and a double bass. Added to these were a continuo and a flute. A Steinway concert grand piano, rented and transported from Charleston, S.C., added beauty and grace to the strings.

No doubt the composers of the works performed in concert by this string ensemble would have been pleased at the quality displayed.

ATLANTIS

Submissions due Mar. 19

The quality of the literary magazine is largely dependent on the number of essays, short stories, and poems submitted to the ATLANTIS staff. Thus far this semester just a few writers have given material to the magazine editors, and the staff is concerned that students are reluctant to submit because their work may be rejected.

The editors must publish only the best material, but the ATLANTIS staff is eager to discuss pieces with their authors for possible revision and resubmission. Students are reminded that in any case, their anonymity is protected.

Please drop poetry or prose by the office of the English department secretary.

March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon plans are in full swing on campus. Registration cards are available for students interested in participating in the walk.

Early birds have already begun to gather pledges on sponsor sheets, and Chuck Kalaf, who is heading the county-wide walk, has stressed his hope that UNC-W students will raise the $15,000 in pledges.

The individual who brings in the most money for the MOD as a result of the walk will receive a 1973 Pontiac automobile.

The theme for the March 31 trek is "Walk a mile for the life of a child," and Kalaf stressed that the money

State offers work

This summer, the NC Department of Correction will offer to selected students an opportunity to learn about one of North Carolina's largest and most dynamic state agencies.

These students will become actively involved in the work of an agency which is charged with the containment, control, and correction of some 10,000 individuals. The Department of Correction will offer an interesting and rewarding experience this summer; in turn they are looking for young people who are willing to offer time, ideas, and enthusiasm.

Interns will be compensated at the rate of $2.50 per hour for the duration of the 12-week program. Interns will be expected to work a 40-hour week. Working time dates May 28 - August 17, 1973.

For further information concerning this program, please contact North Carolina Department of Correction, Summer Intern Program, 831 West Morgan Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27603.

HOW TO APPLY

1. Complete a North Carolina State Government Application for Employment. Placement office can furnish application.
2. Write a brief "Statement of Purpose". This statement should give your reasons for desiring an internship with the Department of Correction, and should be no longer than two type written pages.
3. Send the application, the "State of Purpose," and a copy of your college transcript to the N.C. Department of Correction, Summer Intern Program, 831 West Morgan St., Raleigh, N.C. 27603 Deadline for receiving applications is March 23, 1973.

Fine Arts Comm. Slates 'Bullitt'

Bullitt will be shown in Kenan Memorial Auditorium March 6 at 8 p.m. It is sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee.

Johnny Ross (PAT RENEL- LA) is a hoodlum on the lam, pursued by his own brother, Pete (VICTOR TAYBAC), and members of their underworld syndicate after Johnny has defrauded the organization of millions. Escaping his pursuers in Chicago, Johnny jets to San Francisco where Walter Chalmers (ROBERT VAUGHN), an ambitious politician, has promised him protection if Johnny will be the star witness at a Senate subcommittee hearing on crime. A man named Renick (FELICE ORLANDI), looking enough like Johnny to be his twin, has agreed with Ross to impersonate him. Chalmers knows nothing of the impersonation.

In San Francisco, Captain Bennet (SIMON OAKLAND), at Chalmers' request, assigns Detective Lieutenant Frank Bullitt (STEVE McQUEEN) to guard the phony Johnny Ross, now registered at a broken-down Embarcadero hotel. Bullitt assigns detectives Delgetti (DON GORDON) and Stanton (CARL REINDEL) to the first two shifts. Stanton, taking the first is to call Bullitt at home if he is needed. Meanwhile, Bullitt stops in to see his girl, Cathy (JACQUELINE BESSET).

Through a ruse, two goons gain entrance to the false Ross's room and shoot both him and Stanton, who is badly wounded. A young surgeon, Dr. Willard (GEROGE S. BROWN), tries to save Ross. Chalmers arrives at the hospital, and he is seething because Bullitt has apparently goofed. Bullitt points out that Ross was set up for the kill and demands the particulars of Chalmers' deal with Ross.

Bullitt chases one of the killers, Mike (PAUL GENG), out of the hospital. The false

Need for spirit

Why is it that students sit around and complain about the record of the basketball team, yet refuse to support the team? Of course it's not only basketball they refuse to support - it's also wrestling, soccer and baseball.

Basketball season is over, and it's too late to do anything about that now. But with baseball and spring soccer seasons soon to begin the students should really show their interest.

The baseball team, one of the best in the state, is going into their season with a championship team. The squad, comprised of practically the same players as last season, won the summer championship by defeating UNC-Chapel Hill for the title.

The soccer season should also prove to be exciting with the team playing such teams as St. Andrews and arch-rival Pembroke.

Students should realize that if the teams have no support they lack the needed incentive to win. Our teams are chosen representatives of this school and we, as students, should care enough to back our boys. Sure, we have cheerleaders, but what purpose do they serve if there are no students to cheer along with them?

It looks bad when one fraternity from another school can show more enthusiasm and school spirit than a hundred of our students.

Anyone who regularly attends games has noticed that the majority of the crowd is comprised of our fraternities. Students put fraternities down, but at least the Greeks turn out en masse to back the teams. Fraternity members are present at every home basketball game, most wrestling matches and, no doubt, they will be at the majority of the baseball games. Fraternities, however, are not the only ones who go to games. The rest of the crowd is composed mainly of dorm students.

Those of you who attend games regularly show your enthusiasm--yell!!! Cheer along with the cheerleaders. If you don't know the cheers, learn them.

We have good teams who deserve the total support of the students. Dedicated athletes need to know that behind them is a student body who gives a damn whether they win or lose. And if the students support the teams they will win more games because they will want to please their supporters.

Ross dies after an operation. Fighting for time, Bullitt persuades Dr. Willard to release the body and has it taken out of the hospital to an ambulance as though Ross were still alive.

Chalmers arrives at the hospital with a crony, Capt. Baker (NORMAN FELL), and demands to see Ross. He calls Bullitt at home and gets no more information than he got at the hospital. He orders Baker to "nail" Bullitt.

The desk clerk at the Embarcadero hotel tells Bullitt and Delgetti that Ross arrived in a cab. Bullitt tracks down the driver, Weissberg (ROBERT DUVALL), and retraces Ross's movements, including a stop at a phone booth from which he made a long distance call. Bullitt orders the call traced.

Chalmers, thinking Ross is alive and being hidden by Bullitt, serves Capt. Bennet with a writ of habeas corpus after Bennet refuses to interfere with Bullitt. The two killers now attempt to assassinate Bullitt, who turns the tables on them in an exciting chase through San Francisco streets that ends when the hoods crash.

In Capt. Bennet's office, Bullitt is forced to reveal that Ross is dead and that Ross's phone call was to a woman at a San Mateo motel. Bennet says he will hold the habeas corpus writ only one day more. That is all the time Bullitt has to clear up the case.

Cathy drives Bullitt to San Mateo, where he finds that the woman has been murdered. A search of her luggage reveals $30,000 in travelers checks made out to Albert E. Renick and Dorothy Renick. Bullitt has Immigration in Chicago checked and, at the morgue, Ross's fingerprints taken. A photo transmission from Chicago reveals Ross as Renick. The murdered woman was his wife. Bullitt tells Chalmers that he sent them to guard the wrong man.

Bullitt, learning the Renicks had reservations on a flight that night for Rome, checks the airport. No Ross. Bullitt, on a hunch, then checks the London flight and is told that a passenger named Renick switched to that flight. Chalmers tries to persuade Bullitt to give up the new, and real, witness, but Bullitt tells him off.

The London jet is recalled from the runway. The man who resembles Renick--the real Johnny Ross--leaps off the plane. Bullitt pursues him in a deadly chase throughout the airport.

Recently purchased by the Chemistry department, a $14,000 Proton Nuclear Magnetic Resonance Spectrometer (NMR) will help researchers by determining chemical structures of newly prepared compounds.

The function of the instrument, which was purchased from the Perkin-Elmer Company through a Title VI grant from HEW, is to determine the detailed environment of hydrogen nuclei in chemical compounds as an aid in determining their structure. It is especially useful for organic compounds.

By the positions of absorption of a valuable radio frequency in a fixed magnetic field, the chemical structures can be derived.

A small sample of the hydrogen - containing compound is dissolved and placed in the sample chamber. After the necessary information has been obtained, the whole sample is recovered.

Even using samples as small as 10 to 20 mg, (2 grains of salt weigh 1 mg), significant amounts of information can be obtained about the compound.

NMR is a major tool in organic chemistry allowing the student to obtain precision results for quality research from an easy-to-operate machine. In the chemistry department, students will be introduced to the phenomenon of NMR. The instrument will be used by both students and faculty after they have been properly instructed on the operation of the instrument.

When the umpire shouts, 'play ball,' this coming Monday afternoon at Brooks Field, it will mark the beginning of the UNC-W baseball season, and with this, a Seahawk baseball dynasty will hopefully have been formed.

After coming off a very successful campaign in capturing the North Carolina Collegiate Summer League baseball championship, the UNC-W Seahawks should be ready to continue their winning ways under head coach Bill Brooks, and assistant coach Dave Miller.

With almost the entire championship squad returning from last summer, the Seahawks have an awesome amount of power at nearly every position except in the pitching department, where they are having a few problems in filling two vacancies that have come about through the course of graduation.

In talking with head coach Bill Brooks about the upcoming season, he was very pleased with the way the Seahawks have come along up to this point and said that he believes that the Hawks have a good sound ball club in all phases of the game.

UNC-W will have at least five experienced pitchers they will be able to put on the mound. Dave Sandlin, Bob Becher, Harry Kincaid, Carroll Bickers, and Paul Fulton are all pitching returnees from last summer.

"We are going to be two deep in every position and will have eight or nine pitchers to go with this season," Brooks noted.

As far as the Seahawk pitching staff goes this season, Brooks feels that the pitching will come along as the season progresses.

"Pitching is about 75 per cent of how well a team is going to do in a season," Brooks pointed out. "If a team gets the good pitching, that team is going to win, and if a team doesn't get the good pitching, the season is going to be rough."

Sandlin, Becher, and Kincaid all figured to be in on the action at the beginning while Bickers, and Fulton are having some early season arm trouble but should soon be rid of this. Another fairly experienced pitcher that the Hawks can use if needed is Bill Warmack.

Newcomers to the Seahawk pitching staff will be Duke Sanderson, a junior college transfer, and two freshmen, Randy Brouser, and Tommy Davis.

In the defense departments besides pitching, the Seahawks will have much experience and should be strengthened by this.

The infield will be comprised of the same lineup as last summer, with either Sandlin or Warmack at first, Greg Dalton at third, and then the great double-play duo of Eric Higgins at second and Bill Hutchinson at short-stop. Catching will be done by Bruce Cavanaugh who is probably the best two-way (offensive-defensive) backstop in the south.

None-the-less said, this infield will be one of the best in the state.

Turning toward the outfield, there is Howey Edgerton, Billy Smith, and Robert (Bo) Pittman who should have enough experience to handle this area while freshman Joe Miller will receive much playing time.

In any case, the defensive unit, pitching and fielding, will be tremendous for the Seahawks, and one would think that a team of this defensive caliber would not need the offensive power, but this is where the Seahawks excel the most.

It is in the offensive department where the Hawks will use their big bats and big runs to supply the edge for victories.

All in all, the Seahawks baseball season should turn out to be a tremendous one, and it will all begin when the Seahawks play the N.C. State Wolfpack at 3 p.m. this Monday at Brooks Field.

STEELYARD BLUES - clumsy

by spence focuse

Jane Fonda seems to be getting a bit weary as a prostitute and Donald Southerland a little more awkwardly ridiculous than in M*A*S*H*.

There is a good word to describe such motionpictures as STEELYARD BLUES -- clumsy. This is evident because the only facet of this picture which stumbles more than the actors is the directing. Alan Myerson might as well have kicked all the scenes into a pile on the floor and arranged them blindfolded.

Jane Fonda, who personified prostitution brilliantly in KLUTE, seems to tear down everything she had worked for in her STEELYARD role. Southerland, and Peter Boyle of JOE, who has the only rare moments of humor, slovenly support her. Southerland plays a demolition derby driver who is also a three-time loser and Boyle his self-committed insane friend. Together, with cast straight out of the Three Stooges, they attempt to act and make a movie which has no humor in it.

Somehow, though, you have to feel sorry for Fonda, mainly for wasting her talent in a movie such as this. Obviously she played this part only because her friend and associate producer, Donald Southerland, intrigued her to do it.

STEELYARD BLUES is only worth viewing for the pleasure or displeasure of seeing three fine talents at the mercy of a truly bad motion picture.

Greek Lines

Saturday night the brothers of Alpha Delta Upsilon searched the city for punctured beach balls, October issues of Playboy, coke bottles made in Atlanta, Georgia, birth control pills, and 45 other similar items that are difficult to find. The reason? It was twenty-five dollars offered as a prize to winners of a scavenger hunt. Contestants were divided into four main groups and were given 2 1/2 hours to gather the items on their lists.

The first item on the list was an acorn from the Oakdale Cemetery. Each team had to arrive at the cemetery during the first half hour in order to receive credit. As it happened, when one car arrived at the cemetery, another car attempted to block its exit. This only served to add to the fun and heighten the excitement.

After the cars left the cemetery, each began a frantic search for hula-hoops, duck feathers, or dead cockroaches. Some of these were easily found; however, to the dismay of some scavenger hunters, it was discovered that not all items were obtainable. Any one who looked for Berlinda Hardie (who was on the list) obviously did not know she was out of town. Similarly, hunters who looked for Pam Gravin's meatballs found she was not available.

At the 10:30 deadline several cars arrived at the same time. Contestants ran for the front door. Once inside, the judges ushered contestants into different rooms. They were told to remain there until after the judges had made their decisions. David Smith, who coordinated the entire activity, was amazed at the percentage of items that were found.

One group found a dead skunk in the middle of the road at Gibsons which the judges accepted, even though it was not a dead skunk, but a recording of a popular pop tune. All groups managed to find snowballs. Only the brave were able to get hair cut off a horse's mane in the pitch black of night. But the fun really came when the judges discovered one hunter went to the police station and asked the desk sergeant to write him a ticket for speeding - a compliment of his ingenuity and perseverance in obtaining that particular item.

David Smith, who judged the event, kept suspense mounting as he announced the winners. They were David Hunt, Rocky Moore, and Gene Green. All in all, it was a fun evening and an extremely successful social event.

ATTENTION sororities and fraternities please submit information from your social calendars to the Seahawk Greek lines Editor Thursday morning the week before publication.

Clark to conduct parking survey

A parking survey will be conducted March 12-17 to determine if the available parking spaces are being used to their greatest advantage. Col. James K. Clark, Director of Auxiliary Services, is in charge of the project.

During the hours from 8:15 to 3:15 p.m., each lot will be manned by one student who will count the number of empty spaces twice each hour. The student surveyors were recruited from the dormitory, and will be paid $1.60 per hour.

Lack of adequate parking spaces has caused quite a controversy between commuting students and the administration.

Godey's man hijacks subway train

by robin starr

Could someone actually hijack a subway train? Sounds absurd, but then whoever suspected that skyjacking would become a common occurrence in our lifetime? John Godey has created a thrilling novel based upon the unlikely idea of hijacking a subway train. Yet, by the end of his novel, one is indeed convinced that such a crime could take place.

Godey's novel, "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three," was chosen as the February book - of - the - month by a leading book club.

Godey, whose real name is Morton Freedgood, suggests that only two elements are needed to actually pull off this caper: technical know-how plus a willingness to kill, and both can be found in this realistic novel.

A conglomeration of life-like characters are isolated when one car from the subway train is cut loose; sixteen passengers and its motorman are held as hostages. The author uses this isolation very effectively to show the striking contrasts of personalities found in a typical New York subway. He reveals to us the innermost thoughts of a young black militant, a pathetic female who, an old man who won't scare, a cop, and a hustler named Anita Lemoyne.

Clifford Fadiman, who served on the Editorial Board for Book-of-the-Month-Club, says that "the details of Miss Lemoyne's life and loves do not exactly make family reading. (Standard warning: Mr. Godey uses all the mandatory bad words and includes one or two "frank" sexual scenes."

The four villains of the trainjacking are described as "updated Jesse Jameses," Ryder, the leader, is the cold killer. He joins with an exmotorman whose knowledge of the subway improves their chances of successfully hijacking the train. The two assistants are musclemen Steever and "the under-world's gift to women", Joe Welcome.

John Godey has created a thriller, but a very realistic one. He has come to realize that people want to read, see, and hear of violence and that is what he has given them in "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three."

Keffer to interview French poet

Senior Kenn Keffer will travel to Paris for a two-week visit in late February. The visit will include acquaintance with the French country and culture and an interview with Raymond Queneau, French poet and mathematician.

The Multiple Abilities Program under which Keffer is working will provide financial coverage for the trip. MAP, instituted by way of an anonymous contribution, hopes to stimulate creativity in students with abilities in art, science, languages, or any other field. Stipends are given to finance the projects chosen by the students.

Keffer first began research on Queneau as part of his senior honor's work. He is compiling biographical information for this program. MAP will receive Keffer's own works of poetry and his translations of Queneau's works. Queneau, editor of one of the larger publishing firms in Paris, writes about the common Frenchman. His extensive use of tavern dialect makes translation of his poetry and prose quite difficult.

Keffer is a double major in English and French. Having attended UNC-CH intermittently, he has been at UNC-W four years.

MUSIC

by berry sabury

Wes Knappe has announced that on Apr. 4 Blood, Sweat, and Tears will be on the campus of UNC-W in concert (pending the success of the Tranquility concert). Tranquility and Jo Jo Gunne will be here Mar. 13. Tranquility has two albums out and if you haven't ever heard of them you better dig up their albums and catch up. More on the concerts later.

The SGA Dance Committee, the Phys. Ed. Majors Club, and Budweiser are planning the First Annual Alfred E. Neuman Commemorative Dance on Mar. 9th. Benefit will play from 9 until 1 in the Pub. Don't ask us what this is. We don't know either.

There have been mixed emotions about the Homecoming Concert. I'd say that mostly everybody dug on Billy Preston who brought a little reenlightened "Soul Power" to UNC-W. Also, he won the audience on some Beatle numbers such as "Get Back", "Let It Be", and "Blackbird".

Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show tried to pass vulgarly off as talent. If they had played their music and left out the trash, they would have come off a lot better. By the time Preston was half way through, though, Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show was forgotten until the next morning.

At their eighth consecutive sold-out concert on their current by-popular-dema d tour, Grand Funk Railroad broke the all-time attendance and gross record for Little Rock's 10,000-seat Barton Coliseum, Feb. 11.

Previously set by Elvis Presley, the attendance record was established despite a fire marshall's order that five hundred tickets in the over-sold area be returned. In addition, some two thousand Grand Funk fans who had been unable to obtain tickets thronged about the Coliseum hoping to catch a glimpse of the arriving group.

In the radio scene. . . Let's do something about FM in this area. FM is supposed to have a better fidelity. There are presently choices of sleepytime music, dead air, outdated, junky, and sickening promos and I.D.'s; old shag music being pawned off as "the finest in Rock and Roll Music", tin-can sound; or listening to a stereo (which is a lot less displeasing to the ear). Do the radio people here not care for the Rock 'n Roll market? It takes a station with an open mind for new ideas, but it can be done!

Thanks for the cigar, Dr. Malloy. Was that Brahms' Lullaby we heard as we drove by your house last night?

Students may study Spanish lit translation

Masterpieces of Spanish literature in translation will be offered by the Department of Modern Languages beginning next fall.

R. Terry Mount of the Spanish faculty will teach the course, which will deal, in the first semester (SPN 209) with the period of literature from the earliest works of the 11th and 12th centuries until 1700.

The first semester will deal with POEM OF THE CID, the epic story of the Spanish national hero who lived in the eleventh century; the BOOK OF GOOD LOVE by Juan Ruiz, a verse narrative of the bawdy activities of a fourteenth century priest; the CELESTINA of Fernando de Rojas, the story of a tragic love affair that predates Shakespeare's ROMEO AND JULIET; LAZARILLO DE TORMES, the first of the picaresque novels.

It also deals with THE ROGUE OF SEVILLE by Tirso de Molina which introduces the Don Juan character to world literature; Cervantes' DON QUIXOTE, the "world's greatest novel" with the immortal characters Don Quixote and Sancho Panza; and Calderon de la Barca's LIFE IS A DREAM, the most renowned play of Spanish Golden Age theater. The second course of the pair, to be offered next spring, will cover the 18-20 centuries.

"I am excited at the prospect of introducing these works to students who might otherwise fail to become acquainted with them. It's a shame that more people aren't aware of the richness and importance of Spanish literature," stated Mount.

"The study of Don Quixote alone would be enough to justify taking the course. Our department feels that these courses will give the student an understanding of Spanish literary tradition within a universal scope."

APO offers car stereo

March 14, there will be someone mighty happy to learn that he is one Kraco 25 watt 8-track car stereo with FM multi-plex radio and two speakers richer.

Profunds from the stereo will support the Hand Capped Children's Bowling League at the Bowling Center, headed up by Joe Filion.

The brothers are asking 25¢ donations for tickets. Students may view the stereo on display in the Pub.

They teach children to read

Several UNC-W students who are studying Elementary Education are learning about teaching children to read with the help of about ten students in the first through third grades.

The student teachers, Gail Horne, Jackie Jackson, Lise Reardon, and Debi Rogers, are helping the youngsters work out special reading problems.

Two afternoons each week, the children and teachers meet for work and play, but even the play has a purpose. Fifteen minutes are devoted to "unsupervised play." The teachers watch to see what kind of toys the child chooses or what kind of games he plays.

By doing this, they determine what the interests of the children are. Then they can create reading and word games specifically designed for the children. These "games" in words, phrases, sentences, and concepts that are within his realm of understanding.

During each hour session, four activities are planned to conform to the child's attention span, and also to add variety to his reading diet.

The volunteer teachers knew nothing about the children's backgrounds or situations. "Just their names, and that each has some kind of reading difficulty," stated one of the teachers.

"We learn from them," another commented. As they work with the students, they learn what each child has problems with, and they can adapt their teaching and word "games" accordingly.

With "experience charts," one of the methods employed in teaching, sentences and little stories are developed using words already in the child's vocabulary. "Then from their lives, we try to expand," stated Dorothea Mitchell, a December grad who worked with the reading program until she was called to teach in the public schools.

The children have shown progress, according to the teachers, who are directed by Dr. Paz Bartolome of the Education Department.

"They do better in here," one of the student teachers commented, "because they are not treated as kids who can't read."

They can read. They are reading...and they are teaching teachers how to teach.

Dept. offers Portuguese

Students may take advantage of a new offering in the way of foreign languages next fall. A beginning course in Portuguese will be taught by Carlos A. Perez as part of the Dept. of Modern Languages curriculum.

No previous study of the language will be necessary, although those with a background in another Romance language will find it helpful.

The conversational approach to the subject is to be utilized, enabling the student to apply the grammatical theory as soon as it is learned. Some readings and conferences about the Portuguese speaking areas, mainly Portugal and Brazil, will supplement the class.

Although a less popular language than many, Portuguese is rapidly gaining strength in light of increasing commercial and cultural relations with Brazil.

Triple concert slated

GENTLE GIANT

Featuring Jo Jo Gunne, Tranquility, and Gentle Giant, a triple concert will be presented March 13 in the gym. Tickets are very cheap for what promises to be the concert of the year—only $2.50 in advance.

Students will be allowed two tickets per ID.

Jo Jo Gunne is an outgrowth of Spirit, an excellent West Coast band which had a hit with "Got A Line On You."

Even as Spirit was in the process of splitting, Jo Jo Gunne was forming. The name for the band is taken from an old Chuck Berry song. Jo Jo Gunne's first album was released in 1972 and was followed by the hit single "Run Run Run."

Jo Jo Gunne is Jay Ferguson, keyboards and lead vocal; Mark Andes (formerly of Spirit), bass; Mark Andes, lead and slide guitar; and curly Smith on drums.

WORDS AND MUSIC says, in the March issue, "It doesn't matter that half a hundred harmony groups are putting their product to the American consumer. Tranquility may be fifty-first, but take the time to isolate them from all the other packaging, and you'll find something different.

"Tranquility's brand of vocal combination has got to be the harmonic beacon for this decade.

"Tranquility released one album previous to SILVER. What was missed if you have not heard that album was a soaring feat of song genius, featuring high harmony that would make Graham Nash sit up and take notice.

"The first album spoke of softness and sea breezes, floating up in the clouds, ethereal in fact. The songs on SILVER cross many musical boundaries, as Tranquility does in its show."

Tranquility is a young English band that is totally convinced of itself. SILVER, and, if you can find it (try McGrath's), the first album, should convince you too.

This month's CIRCUS magazine has predicted that "Tranquility are destined to be monsters."

Gentle Giant is also a new English band. They record, as does Tranquility, for Columbia/Epic. They were well received on their first tour in November with Jethro Tull (and they don't pair bad bands with Tull).

They are a versatile group which features a mellotron, and they have been compared favorably to Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

Win car - walk for MOD

A 1973 Pontiac Ventura Sprint will go to the highest money raiser in the MOD (March of Dimes) first annual WALK-A-THON set for Mar. 31.

The walk, which is planned to help raise money to fight birth defects, will be kicked off at 10 a.m. Saturday, Mar. 31 when the paratroop team of Ft. Bragg, accompanied by four local people, including a UNC-W student, will parachute from a plane at the New Hanover County Airport.

David Clopton, a junior at UNC-W, will make the jump along with Chuck Kalaf, the walk chairman for the county and a salesman for Harris Pontiac; Dale Todd, co-chairman of the walk and a secretary for Harris Pontiac; and Judy Settemeyer, secretary at WGN radio.

There are other prizes for top money raisers. The number two person in funds collecting will receive a color television set. The third through seventh place money-raisers will receive 10-speed Columbia bicycles.

Clopton, who will be making the jump, indicated concern over the lack of enthusiasm on the campus.

"We had hoped for several THOUSAND dollars to be raised by UNC-W students. If more people don't turn out, we won't get several hundred."

Kalaf stated, "It is important that as many people as possible participate in the walk. Not for me, not for Dave. But for a lot of kids in wheel chairs. For kids born with sickle cell anemia, for kids born with heart defects—with any kind of birth defects.

"But maybe more important than those kids are the kids that haven't been born yet than have a chance to be born normal and healthy if we just give a little."

Registration will continue for another week, but it is important that people register as soon as possible. On campus, forms and sponsor sheets, as well as information on the walk in general may be obtained at the SEAHAWK office, or by calling Kalaf at 762-4165 or Ms. Todd at 256-3857.

Pharmacist visits

Richard T. Webb, pharmacist and Director of Admissions of the Southern School of Pharmacy, Mercer University, will visit UNC-W on Monday, Mar. 12 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. to talk with students interested in careers in pharmacy.

Anyone who wishes to talk with Webb should arrange an appointment time through Dr. Ned Martin, pre-pharmacy advisor, in C-108 (ext. 321).

Mar. 20 deadline for SGA filing

Mike Jones, Chairman of the Board of Elections, has announced that Tuesday, March 20, is the filing deadline for student body and class offices.

According to Jones, who was approved for the position at Tuesday's Student Senate meeting, the required constitution test which must, according to the student constitution, be administered to and passed by each candidate prior to the election, will be given on two days, March 19 and 20.

There are openings for president, vice president and secretary of the student body, as well as the 3 key positions and five senatorial slots for each class.

Elections will be held Mar. 26 and 27.

Students interested in seeking office should file as soon as possible to allow maximum campaigning time.

As many sport fans around the country ready themselves for the most exciting NCAA Basketball Tournament, so does the UNC-W intramural sport fans become ingeniously alert to the ever-pressing closeness of the Men's Intramural Basketball Tournament.

Although the tournament will only last some three short nights, it will carry with it all of the heart-pounding excitement of an Atlantic Coast Conference Basketball Tournament, and include much of the same stylish play.

The tournament, which will have the top four teams from both leagues in it, got underway last night, March 8, with all eight teams seeing action in the quarterfinal games.

Semi-final games of the tournament will be played on Monday night, March 12. Then on Wednesday night, March 14, the consolation game and the most important championship will be played and end the tournament action.

At the time this article was being written, there were still many positions in the two leagues left undecided, and tournament berths in both leagues were still up for grabs.

In the Gold League, there are at least three teams that are assured of receiving tournament positions. These three teams are the Jocks, Ballers, and Studs.

The Jocks, and the Ballers are currently tied for the number one spot in the Gold League, both having 15-3 marks, and must draw straws to see who will get the top seed in the tournament, while the Studs who have come on strong in the later half of the season winning seven in a row will take the number three spot in the league.

Fourth place in the Gold League will either go to the Bang Gang or the Hemorrhoids depending on who gets the long of the two straws as they are tied at that position with 12-6 records.

Moving on over to the Green League, the situation looks about the same as in the Gold League with at least five, and maybe six teams jockeying for the playoff berths.

However, the top spot of the Green League has been decided with the powerful Cup Jocks managing to stay in first place all year from the beginning.

Two other teams in the Green League are definitely in the hunt for the playoffs: Moonmen and the Triple A's.

Moonmen are soundly situated in the number two spot in the Green League with a 15-3 record while the Triple A's have nailed down the third place position having a 14-4 mark.

Nevertheless, the big battle in the Green League is fought for the fourth place spot in the tournament where there are currently three teams tied for this position, all having the record of ten wins and eight losses.

The three teams contesting this spot for the tourney are the Faculty, Engineers, and the Avengers.

As for the Intramural Basketball season this year, there has been some really outstanding team and individual performances.

Top honors in the team scoring belongs to the Jocks, who scored 104 in one game, while the individual honor belongs to Coach Mel Gibson of the Faculty who scored 53 points in a single game.

Intramural basketball was super-sensational this year, and the tournament should bring it to a rousing finish.

Seahawks crush West Liberty

"Rains out" and then "Bombs-away" are the best ways to describe it as the UNC-W baseball team began their 1973 baseball season.

Rained out of the season opener with N.C. State University on Monday afternoon, Coach Bill Brooks' Hawk nine unleashed a barrage of 15 hits and completely demolished the West Liberty State College Hilltoppers, 15-4.

It was an all-around good day for the Seahawks as they massed together their big runs. The Hawks scored enough runs in the first two innings of the ball game to be assured of victory as they got four in the first and three in the second to take an early seven run lead.

All four runs in the first came off of a grand slam home run hit by freshman Joe Miller, and from this point, the Seahawks went on to destroy their opponents.

Besides the offensive show, the Seahawks got very good pitching from senior moundsman Dave Sandlin and freshman righthander Randy Prosser.

Sandlin hurled the first five innings for the local club and received credit for the victory while Prosser came on to hurl the final four frames.

Both pitchers worked well during the cooling afternoon with Sandlin giving up two runs on three hits and Prosser doing the same. Only one of the Hill-toppers' four runs were earned and that game in the fifth off of Sandlin. Left-hander Sandlin struck out six and allowed only one base-on-balls as Prosser struck out four and gave up two free trips.

Miller had the big bat for the Hawks as he went 3 for 5 from the plate and batted in 6 runs while scoring two himself for a most outstanding college baseball debut.

Two other Seahawks had three hits for the locals. They were Sandlin and Center-fielder Howey Edgerton.

Catcher Bruce Cavenaugh collected two hits for the seahawks as he was the last Hawk to get more than one hit.

The Hawks now open up their District 29 play with Virginia State on both Friday and Saturday. Game time for today's game is 3 p.m. while Saturday's game will begin at 2:30 p.m. Both games will be played at Brooks Field.

Seahawks first game for next week will be Wednesday at 3 p.m. against Salisbury State on Brooks Field with a return engagement on Thursday with the same team; same time, same place.

Cherry selected All-District

It takes long hours of practice, years of struggling work, and days of futile despiration to become the ultimate superstar, but Seahawk Mike Cherry is deserving of this highly bestowed honor.

UNC-W basketball's "Mister Everything" was almost a unanimous choice to be the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics all-District 29 team, this past Tuesday night.

Cherry, who averaged 19.5 points per game and almost 11 rebounds, was joined by nine other players on the all-District squad that was selected by the basketball coaches of District 29. Cherry thus becomes the first UNC-W player to be named to the all-District team in basketball.

"It's certainly well deserved," UNC-W coach Mel Gibson said when informed of Cherry's honor. "He certainly earned the honor. We are not in the playoffs, but I've felt all along that Mike deserved the recognition."

Gibson said that he couldn't make any earth shattering statements about the selection. "But just the fact that he made the team is great news. This is the king of things we're working toward to upgrade our basketball program."

And upgrading the Seahawk program will be exactly what Gibson will be doing next year as the entire team, headed by Cherry, returns intact.

The Hawks were sparked by Cherry's play this year to finish the regular season at 10-14 after a very ragged campaign in the beginning. This year's basketball record is the best in several years for the Seahawks.

In the short time I have been doing this article, I have encountered all types of athletes. There are those who would talk your ears off about nothing in particular. Then, there are those who will hardly talk at all and seem to feel they haven't done enough to justify an article. Pat Canady fits into this non-talker category.

Pat, a member of the wrestling and soccer teams, has been described by his teammates as one of the most modest and most dedicated members of the team. Pat's dedication is shown by the fact that he lost forty pounds so that he could wrestle in a lower weight class.

Pat, a member of the squad for three years, became interested in wrestling when Freddie Kee, a former member of the team, invited him to try out. After wrestling heavyweight for two years, Pat now wrestles in the 190 lb. class where he is one of the tallest men in the state in his division.

Pat, described as "an easy-going guy with a great sense of humor," is a senior from Tarheel. He is a P.E. major, interested in recreation, and is a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Seahawks place in tournament

For Coach Charles Sproles and his UNC-W Seahawk wrestling squad, the season ended on a happy note as the Seahawk grapplers took third place in the NAIA District 29 tournament held at Pembroke this past Wednesday, February 28.

Two UNC-W wrestlers brought back with them championship titles in their respective weight classes. Ed Weddington at 158, and Randy Sullivan at 167 captured their titles in most impressive fashion as they completely dominated their weight divisions.

From here, Weddington will travel to Sioux City, Iowa to compete in the NAIA national championships. Sullivan, who is supposed to make the trip also, will not go for personal reasons.

Another Seahawk grappler, David Hughes, will make the trip out to Sioux City. Hughes was runner-up this year in his weight class, 150, and had been the defending champion.

Spring intramurals get underway

"Multifariousness" is the exact word to be used when the UNC-W student is looking for things to do in the Spring Intramural Program this year.

Softballs, frisbees, horseshoes, and an assortment of many other instruments will be used this spring as the University Intramurals get underway.

A total of seventeen different activities will be offered throughout this spring semester that will attract even the laziest or most energetic student.

Many of these activities are opened for both men and women and should prove to be very exciting.

From the standpoint of team and individual activities to choose over, there will be at least three or four actual team sports and thirteen or fourteen individual activities. Many of the individual activities can be played as doubles also.

Some of the more colorful activities that will be on the intramural agenda for this spring are log sawing, surfing, and horseshoes events that should bring many competitors.

As of now, one or two of the activities are already underway, but there is still time to sign up and get into some of the exciting action.

Anyone wishing any information about the intramural activities should contact Mr. Dave Warner in the P.E. Department or the sponsors of the events.

You've not seen it ... yet!

by Jon Greene

In the words of George Harrison, "here's something you've heard a lot about, but never actually seen..." (and it's not Klaus Voorman). It's "MAGICAL MYSTERY TOUR!"

"Magical Mystery Tour" was made in 1967 as a British Christmas television special and has never been publically released in the U.S. Through the aide of Ron Furmanek, a fellow Beatlemaniac from New Jersey, Chris Fonvielle is able to present this Beatle classic for two nightly performances on the evenings of March 14, 15, and 16. The movie is to be shown in Kenan Auditorium on the campus, advance tickets are $2 as well as the ones at the door. Tickets are now on sale at McGraths Music Shop, Belk-Beery Book Dept., UNCW Book Store, Harvey Cannon Ltd., Ocean Surf Shop at Wrightsville Beach, and the Music Shop on South College Road.

Magical Mystery Tour's plot involves the extraordinary characters and events of a British omnibus tour of the English countryside. Songs featured in the film are "Magical Mystery Tour," "Fool On the Hill," "Flying," "Blue Jay Way," "Your Mother Should Know," and "I Am the Walrus." Making appearances in the show are Traffic and The Bonzo Dog Doo-Dah Band, to help capture the irrepressible spirit that only The Beatles can produce. A selection of Beatle short-features will be shown also, such as "Revolution," "Let It Be," and others.

Contrary to some opinion, "Magical Mystery Tour" is not a cartoon but a full-length, colour, live-action film. The rarity of this film cannot be stressed enough. This is one of the very first showings in the U.S. and will probably be your only chance to see this classic Beatle film.

So, "roll up, roll up, for The Magical Mystery Tour!" A splendid time is guaranteed for all!

Magazines publish verse by Powles

Dr. Marie A. Powles, professor of English, will have three of her most recent poems published in THE AMERICAN POET and THE PRAIRIE POET. "Insensibility," now in print, and "Antithesis" and "Seagulls," soon to be published, are expressions of her feelings.

The poems are written in blank verse. Dr. Powles says that feelings came to her, and she wrote as she felt, letting the imagery appear without conscious effort.

Once she begins a poem, Dr. Powles usually finishes it at one sitting. Rather than spending days struggling with detailed form, she finishes the composition with expression as her main concern. She then polishes the poem and readies it for publication.

Dr. Powles has had scholarly works and various forms of poetry published. She also enjoys painting as a medium in which to express her feelings. She describes creative art as "therapeutic relaxation."

It's Too Good To Miss

National Wildlife Week

National Wildlife Federation and State Affiliates March 18-24, 1973

Photographed by Jack Dermid, a professor in the biology department, this young wood duck has become the reminder of National Wildlife Week for the National Wildlife Federation on 400,000 posters like this to be distributed across the nation. Dermid, who recently co-authored a book about the wood duck, was contacted by the Federation. He supplied them with the photo of this little fellow. "DISCOVER WILDLIFE-It's Too Good To Miss," is this year's spring reminder for the celebration of National Wildlife Week, March 18-24, Registration for first session, summer school is slated for May 30. Second session summer school registration will be July 11.

Summer session schedules may be obtained from the registrar's office.

Mar. 20 deadline for SGA filing

Mike Jones, Chairman of the Board of Elections, has announced that Tuesday, March 20, is the filing deadline for student body and class offices.

According to Jones, the constitution test which must, according to the student constitution, be administered to and passed by each candidate prior to the election, will be given on two days, March 19 and 20.

There are openings for president, vice president and secretary of the student body, as well as the 3 key positions and five senatorial slots for each class.

Elections will be held Mar. 23 and 27.

Students interested in seeking office should file as soon as possible to allow maximum campaigning time.

Nominations may be given to Mike Jones in the SGA office or to Ms. Linda Moore, director of student activities, in the Pub.

Candidates who wish to have filing announcements or platforms published in the paper prior to the elections should submit information to the SEAHAWK by noon Tuesday. Articles, which will be subject to editing, may be placed in the mailbox across from the office in the Pub. or brought to the SEAHAWK office.

APO offers car stereo

March 21, there will be someone mighty happy to learn that he is one Kraco 25 with 8-track car stereo with FM multi-plex radio and two speakers richer.

Proceeds from the stereo will support the Handicapped Children's Bowling League at the Bowling Center, headed up by Joe Filion.

The brothers are asking 25¢ donations for tickets. Students may view the stereo on display in the Pub.

Asbury files for top student post

Barry Asbury has filed for the position of Student Body President for 73-74.

A junior, Asbury currently serves as class president, chairman of the SGA dance committee, and advertising director for THE SEAHAWK.

In addition, he serves on the student affairs committee, pub policy committee, and the homecoming committee.

He plays percussion and drums in the University Wind Ensemble and the stage band.

Asbury indicated his concern over the farcical reputation of student government. "My main interest is this campus and how our student fees going to SGA are used."

Too much attention, he continued, is being given activities not on this campus. More attention should also be brought to the campus, according to Asbury.

He expressed that there was a need for more student services; library facilities; more money for betterment of student publications, and just general betterment of UNC-W as an institution of higher learning.

"Please voice your opinion in the form of a vote on March 26 and 27," he stated.

Hales seeks VP spot

Keith Hales recently announced his candidacy for office of Student Body Vice President.

In filing, Hales cited his qualifications as "having served in the Student Government Association for the past year and having a knowledge of parliamentary procedure and school affairs."

Hales said, "I urge all fellow students to become involved in the SGA next year. I especially ask that you turn out to vote March 26-27. I hope that you will vote for the person best qualified to fill all the positions, and will choose to vote for me."

feedback! is the place in the newspaper where any student, faculty, or staff member of UNC-W can sound off—either about good things or bad. We welcome articles from anyone. All articles must be signed, but names will be withheld on request.

To The Editor:

This comment is not meant to point any fingers or place any discredit on any particular individual or group. It is simply a comment or food for thought presented without any malice.

On Friday, March ninth, while walking through the trees on the south end of the campus, three university students and two high school students were stunned to see a security officer and a member of the UNC-W staff entering their car. Not only were they entering the car but going through personal possessions (pocketbooks, school books, etc.) located in the front seat. They claimed they were searching for some identification even though they had already radioed for license plate identification.

Obviously something is very wrong here. The car was parked at the southwest corner of the south-40 parking lot unoccupied and un-locked (unfortunately). There was nothing of any great interest about the car that would warrant any inquiry. The car was driven by a high school student visiting her brother, a student of the university. It was not occupying a reserved parking space of any kind.

Whether or not this entering of the car was legal to begin with is not of any great importance here. However, the privacy of an individual's possessions was severely encroached upon. The people who were involved in the car entering shall remain nameless here. The point to be concerned about is the policy that sanctions this form of shakedown.

How can this visitor at the UNC-W campus feel when she finds someone in her car fumbling around inside her pocketbook looking for identification that he has no real reason to look for in the first place? Unless she is a real idiot, she's got to wonder what's coming off here.

To The Editor:

In filing for the office of Student Body President for the year 1973-74, my main intention is to try to be a

Just what is the NCSL? This question has been on the minds of many UNC-W students, especially since the Student Senate voted to appropriate more than $300 to finance UNC-W participation in this year's convention. UNC-W's delegation to the March convention of NCSL (North Carolina Student Legislature) will consist of student body president Bill Brooks, Student court chief Butch Pegram, senate speaker Patti McCombie, and senators Tom Montgomery, Keith Hales, and Mike Jones. Convening at the Hilton Inn in Raleigh, the Legislature will hear arguments for and against and vote on bills that, if passed, will eventually be proposed in the N.C. General Assembly.

These bills cover a wide range of subjects, including abortion, alimony, no-fault insurance, and negative income tax. This provides for a steady influx of student opinion into the governmental system.

NCSL was first called to order when a group known as the State Student Legislature began on Nov. 12, 1937. One of the earliest student law-making bodies of its type in the country, the Student Legislature met, debated, and discussed under the sponsorship of the North Carolina State College forensic teams. The idea of a model legislature made up of student representatives from colleges around the state was brought into being by Professor Edwin H. Paget, who served as sponsor for the assembly for many years.

Governor Hoey addressed the 1937 convocation; Secretary of State Thad Eure served as parliamentarian, and before the first day was over, the Assembly rejected a resolution urging President Roosevelt to seek a third term, 23-24. This move is especially significant because of its timing - only one year after his election to a second term.

At the Assembly the following year, party affiliation was of significance. The Raleigh NEWS AND OBSERVER reported that the student legislature "convened on a note of harmony that resulted partly from the fact that only three Republicans were present."

A resolution which has become familiar to recent legislatures, that of abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was first introduced in the 1938 session. The group declared by a 49-38 vote that a particular committee investigating un-American activities was "detrimental to our democratic government."

The Assembly continued to give voice to student opinion on controversial issues throughout the years of World War II. In 1941, the Student Legislature was declared more conservative than the regular General Assembly; and in 1942 Thad Eure stated that the group was "a valuable and worthwhile organization". Governor Cherry and other dignitaries followed suit with praise for the students.

The State Student Legislature faced a year of controversy in 1945, a plan introduced by a University of North Carolina student to invite Negro college students to pass a vote of 110-48, and from across the state came numerous letters of criticism. Many, including Dr. Frank Graham, President of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, supported the students, however. In reply to a statement that the students did not know what they were doing, one student legislator said, "A lot of us are veterans, and we do not need to be told what we fought for."

The decision stood, but the next session was marked by the absence of many college representatives. In 1947, the Assembly was cancelled for the first and only time since its inception, the race issue being a primary reason.

In 1948 Capitol Square was once again brightened by the young faces and ideas of student legislators.

The organization, now officially the State Student Legislature of North Carolina, operated rather smoothly from 1948 until 1957, during the 21st session. Both houses passed a resolution concerning interracial marriages. The Council of State, headed by Governor of the Hodges, acted to restrict the legislature, but its annual session was not discontinued.

The 1965 group drew severe criticism from many people as a result of some of the bills introduced by several schools which had a very modern, forward - looking tenor. The 1965 session seemed to set a precedent for SSL legislation, because since then a wealth of controversial, far - reaching bills have been introduced, and quite a number of them have been adopted.

The 1970 session was marred by racial disharmony, climaxed by a walkout of the black schools. In spite of the problems faced by SSL that worthy and total representation of the total student population of UNC-W. This should be the Student Body President's first consideration and this will be MY first consideration.

Another very important job of the Student Body President is to try to see that Student Government funds are allocated with the utmost of fairness to each and every student on this campus. It is true that the SB President has not the sole power to allocate funds, but he does have influence over it. It is my opinion that the budget for the present year is allocated unfairly.

Therefore I would like to include the budget for this year in this letter so that every interested student may find out how his money is being spent.

NSL plans boycott

by Mike Jones

National Student Lobby's convention went on recently, even though UNC-W's reps were not present.

Though Student Senate had allocated $84 to finance the delegation, Student Body President Bill Brooks and student court head Butch Pegram were unable to attend the conference, since they were injured in an automobile accident just prior to leaving town and spent the weekend in New Hanover Memorial Hospital.

The major topic of the convention was to be plans for a projected boycott of MacDonald's hamburger drive-ins. The furor arose when it was reported by columnist Jack Anderson that Ray Kroc, Chairman of the Board of MacDonald's Restaurants contributed $255,000 to President Nixon's campaign fund.

In return, the Administration promised to support a bill to allow a lower minimum wage for student employees, from $2 per hour to $1.60 per hour.

The bill, which would save MacDonald's 40 cents per hour for millions of man hours, was introduced several weeks ago by Rep. John Ellenborn (R-Ill.). NSL planned a demonstration of approximately 800 persons to protest what was described as 'gross discrimination.'

Plyler directs Marine Sciences program

Dr. Daniel B. Plyler, present chairman of the Biology Department, has been appointed Director of the Marine Sciences Program at UNC-W. The appointment, effective Jan. 1, 1973, was announced by Dr. Charles L. Cahill.

As director of the program, Dr. Plyler will administer and coordinate all of the marine science activities related to the UNC-W campus. Included are the marine biology curriculum, the environmental studies curriculum, and the marine science research.

Dr. Plyler, a member of the UNC-W faculty since the fall of 1966, foresees great opportunity for expansion in the field of marine science at UNC-W. The strategic location of the campus, the only institute of higher learning in North Carolina adjacent to the Atlantic Ocean, is a great advantage. The public's interest plus the interest of the state government in the area of marine science are also points in favor of the expansion of the program.

The Marine Sciences Program is to be comprehensive, involving the physical as well as the social sciences. Instructional and research programs plus the specialized research at the Marine Biomedical Laboratory at Wrightsville Beach are included. Dr. Plyler hopes that as many areas of the university as possible will be involved.

Dr. Plyler will also represent UNC-W on the greater University Marine Science Council. This intercampus council coordinates the work done in the areas of marine science within the university system. The member schools include: UNC-W, East Carolina, NC State, and UNC-Chapel Hill.

Dr. Plyler is enthusiastic about his recent appointment. Expansion of the program is already in progress with the construction of the new building on campus that at its completion will house much of UNC-W's marine science program.

Belk-Beery Company of Wilmington makes scholarship presentations annually to UNC-W students.

For 72-73, recipients for the scholarships were Manie L. Brissom, Peggy M. Cabe, and Ronald Pittman. They received grants from the $1200 fund for this year. The fund will in rease to $1600 for next year.

Recipients are chosen on the basis of financial need, scholastic ability, leadership ability, and overall character.

Dependents of Belk-Beery employees are given special consideration.

The First 'Plunge'

by Mary Margaret Williams

On December 21, 1872, the H.M.S. Challenger, a 200-foot sailing vessel, left from Portsmouth, England, on a deep sea exploration.

An article entitled "Marine Science, 100 Year Anniversary" published in the January issue of "Tar Heel Coast" acknowledges the significance of this voyage. Anyone aware of the growing Marine Sciences Program at UNC-W might find a brief recap of the first oceanographic expedition interesting.

This 3 1/2 year voyage included every major ocean of the world. The expedition is acknowledged as making the first break into the study of the marine sciences. Its purpose was to study the biological and physical characteristics of the sea.

The well-organized voyage, commanded first by Captain George S. Nares and then by Captain Frank Tourle Thomson, made vast accomplishments while at sea.

Bottom deposits, water samples, and temperature measurements were made at intervals and at various water levels. The dredge, the trawl, and the tow net were successfully used to make sample hauls.

The fifty-volume report of the voyage was prepared mainly by Sir. C. Wyville Thomson director of the Civilian Scientific Staff on board the Challenger. It was finally completed in 1895.

Twelve of the fifty volumes are available in the UNC-W library. They can be found in the card catalogue by looking under the heading Challenger Expedition.

Volume 1 gives an overall look at the expedition. It includes a short narrative of the voyage, an account of the instruments and the observation methods used, an outline of the general results plus charts, diagrams, and photographs.

Today scientists still refer to the original samples and to the 4,000 new species of animals found on this first marine expedition.

year, a number of outstanding bills were passed.

Growing tensions between large and small colleges marked the 1971 session. Despite this, however, the legislature coped with many contemporary topics, including ecology problems, abortion reform, and drug education. The title of the body was changed to North Carolina Student Legislature.

Last year's session continued the tradition of modern legislation with many new topics, among those being no-fault insurance. An increasing rift between eastern and western schools, however, was compounded by an urgent financial situation.

No one can predict what is in store for this year's session, the 36th, but all agree that it will be among the most interesting.

by ron blanchard

(Author's note: Remember what you were like at fifteen? Had you ever heard of marijuana? Did you understand sex? Were you aware of yourself or the world? Do you think you were more aware than the adolescent of today? A recent assignment in Adolescent Psychology was to interview an adolescent. Following is printed an excerpt from one interview. Prepare for a few surprises.)

Question: How do you feel about your personal privacy?

Answer: Parents and friends are always nosy. My parents always ask where I have been or what I was doing. Sometimes my mother reads my mail. Can you believe that? My friends are as bad as my mother. My friends don't need to know everything I do or who I am with. I feel everyone should have a private area secure from anyone.

Question: With whom would you be angrier--your parents or your friends--if they asked about the things you do?

Answer: I would be angrier with my friends. Because my parents love me and want the best for me. My friends just want to be nosy so they can talk about me behind my back.

Question: Had you rather be with boys your own age or with girls your own age?

Answer: I had rather be with girls because the boys are so childish and dumb. I would never date a boy my age. I get along better with girls than boys because you don't have to worry about what to say.

Question: What do you think about dating?

Answer: My fear of dating comes from what to talk about, where to go, and what to wear. I would rather date an older boy because they are better looking and more mature.

Question: How do you feel about having premarital sex?

Answer: I think sleeping with a guy you love is great. I don't think you should sleep around. Making love is special --it is only for the one you love.

Question: How do you feel about drugs?

Answer: You mean like marijuana? Well, I don't consider marijuana a drug. I don't think using marijuana once in a while is wrong. I would rather date a boy that used marijuana instead of drinking alcohol and getting drunk. I can't see using any of the hard drugs, but I don't think users should be put in jail. They need to be treated by someone because they have problems.

Question: What is the hardest thing to reconcile to yourself about religion?

Answer: Hypocrites. People who drink and run around with men and women who are not their husbands and wives all week and then on Sunday they say your dress is so short it is indecent. I don't know why they go to church. They don't do anything the Bible teaches.

Question: What is your biggest hang-up about the world?

Answer: I don't understand why people can't be friends and talk things over without fighting.

Question: What is your biggest hang-up about yourself?

Answer: I am a Christian, but I do things that I want to do and then I feel guilty about what I have done and I wish I had not done them. It bothers me because I don't want to be a hypocrite like those people in my church.

Question: What would you change about yourself?

Answer: I would like to be able to do anything that I want to do and not feel guilty about it afterwards.

SUMMARY

The adolescent I interviewed was a conflict of interests. She truly represented the not-a-child but not yet-adult "shadow world" of adolescence. On one hand, she considered drinking alcohol wrong, but, on the other hand, she felt that the use of marijuana should not be illegal. She wanted to date an older boy, but was afraid of what a date with a more "mature" person would be like. She considered boys her age childish, without realizing some of her own childish attitudes.

She was liberal --trapped between conservative parents and a conservative community. Beset with problems, she was trying to find what she was and what her role in life was to be.

Her problems can be more readily understood by reconsidering the one thing she would change about herself--she wishes she could do anything she wanted, yet not feel guilty afterwards.

Indeed, adolescence is an awkward period.

'RAW BLUES'

review

by lewis musser

If you're a blues enthusiast, you probably already own RAW BLUES or are scripping to get it. Mercy, what a fine album this one is. It is simply an accumulation of quality performances by some of the finest blues artists of our time -- John Mayall, Eric Clapton, Otis Spann, Champion Jack Dupree, Steve Anglo, and Peter Green.

A new album by no means, (released in 1964) it contains works recorded for the most part in '63. Yet the blues are as timeless as the themes encompassed by them: evil women, unresolved romances, bad luck, the down and out.

Notin like the blues to getcha feelin' all mellow and calm. Pop that top, son. Have a smoke just get all delete above line correction

Have a smoke. Just get all lazy and languid and drift -- just drift in them muddy waters.

The blues--the root of it all--the form that, through the efforts of Chuck Berry and Little Richard, etc., was transformed into rocking blues -- the element which later lay beneath the vocal dips and flourishes of early Beatie music.

True, the route of basic blues can be traced even further back to jazz, and what have you, but there can be no denying that the seeds of rock and roll were planted and began to flourish in the blues garden.

An English production on London records, the album features Eric Clapton and, more exclusively, the favorite son of British blues, John Mayall.

Clapton's penchant for shimmying up every convenient musical vine has taken him far away from his original blues base. But on this disc he's heard doing what he undoubtedly does best--conveying mood and emotion through basic blues guitar work.

John Mayall's contributions to the blues form cannot be overemphasized. He has brought the form possibly the highest popular recognition it has ever received. Mayall did for the blues what road signs did for Burma Shave. Mayall, too, is largely responsible for getting some of today's most prominent blues artists off to good starts, particularly Elmore James. In short, Mayall exemplifies contemporary blues like few other artists.

His solo contributions on the album, "Burn Out Your Blind Eyes," and "Milkman Strut" are as diverse in structure as, to use a worn cliché, night and day-- the former a resonant vocal effort; the latter, a jaunty piano solo reminiscent of a silent film backdrop.

It's when Mayall teams up with Steve Anglo and Eric Clapton that we get a taste of blues with that uniquely intriguing British flavor.

He and Anglo perform "Long Night," a fluid, darkly euphoric song of a mere two minutes that you would like to go on and on.

"Lonely Years," by Mayall and Clapton, is a prime example of the complete musical compatibility of these two artists. Needless to say, they work quite well together.

But, all said, it's Otis Spann and Champion Jack Dupree that endow the album with the genuine grass-roots texture that is the blues--that inexplicable quality that emerges only from the music of Black blues artists -- a quality beyond duplication by any white bluesman alive.

Spann offers a reversal of preconceived blues themes in "Pretty Girls Everywhere" by extolling the pleasure of finding himself never at a loss for a foxy female companion.

"My Home in the Desert" reveals him and his trio at their relaxed best. Still the musical framework remains ever-tight.

"Mean" is the music of Champion Jack Dupree. His rendition of Eddie Boyd's famous "24 Hours" exemplifies this American artist's total understanding and mastery of modern city blues framework. Listen to him sing about that "long, lean, and lanky" woman in "Calcutta Blues."

Yes, after deluges of layered T-Rex-y choruses, tape-loop mesmerization, and the screeching guitar of every electric somebody, it's nice to get back to basics--back to the root of it all -- back to RAW BLUES.

Soc students conduct survey

by mary margaret williams

Students enrolled in Betty McEntire's Modern Social Problems classes are knocking on the doors of New Hanover County residents. The purpose - to discover the general attitude of the people concerning the use, misuse, and legalization of drugs.

The students will go from house to house asking people to fill out a questionnaire which will show the public's feelings toward drugs. The answers will be completely anonymous. No names are to be included in the form. It will be completely confidential. No one but the sociology classes will see the questionnaires, but the results of the survey will be given to the drug agencies in the county. They feel that this information will be helpful in combating the problem of drug abuse in this area.

The two Sociology 15 classes have been studying the attitudes and the use of drugs in other parts of the country. This study will enable them to compare New Hanover County to other areas.

Questions included in the questionnaire are:

Which of the following substances do you feel should be completely legal without any regulations? marihuana, hallucinogenics, depressants, stimulants, opiates, or others. Which of the following substances do you think have some bad effects upon a person's health but are not really very dangerous?

How often have you or do you use the following substances? How often do your friends use the following substances? The possible answers to all of the questions are: marihuana, hallucinogenics, depressants, stimulants, opiates, or others. The twenty-one questions can be answered by anyone thirteen or older.

Forty groups will be covering the twenty-one sections of the county. Two people, usually a male and a female, are in each group. Each two-man team is allotted fifteen questionnaires. The survey is to continue until March 29.

The results hopefully will show where there is the most extensive drug problem, what types of drugs are concentrated in what sections of the county and what groups have the greatest drug involvement.

The right-in candidate.

TRANQUILITY.....JO JO GUNNE.....GENTLE GIANT.....in concert last Tuesday

MUSIC

TRANQUILITY TOPS

by barry asbury

Tuesday night, Gentle Giant, Tranquility, and Jo Jo Gunne appeared in concert at UNC-W (in that order). Judging from the quality of their sound, the order should have been GG, (t jo, and Tranquility. This is not saying that any band was bad, but Tranquility did stand out far over the other two.

Jo Jo Gunne was that regular guitar, piano, bass, drums boogie rock and roll. I could hear nothing very exciting in their music. Gentle Giant impressed me with their display of musicianship by being able to play several different instruments. The bass player played violin as well. The keyboard man switched to cello and vibraphone. Then there was the drum solo in triple figures (three guys playing the drum).

Tranquility impressed me the most. Their harmony was one thing that distinguished them from any other group. Their style and technique does not sound either ultra-simple or overly complicated. They seem to be there for the audience instead of for making a buck, which is the way most American bands seem to go sooner or later (usually sooner). Tranquility is definitely on the move.

Those in charge of the sound system deserve compliments. It was by far the best sound at a concert here in three years. The whole range of sound could be heard.

My only gripe was the dominance of the instruments over the vocals. Vocals are a large part of what distinguishes good bands from mediocre ones. The quality is much better. Now let us hear the whole band instead of mainly just the instruments.

NEW ALBUMS

Flying Circus is a new group for the United States and is on Capitol records. Their first album, out presently, is titled FLYING CIRCUS. They moved to Canada two years ago after having three hit singles in Australia. Their music is exactly the way they describe it...simple---but really free. Their style? Rock 'n Roll, Simple-but really free. One of the better songs on the album is one of old rock and roll stock 'Shake, Rattle, and Roll.' Go to the nearest record store and ask them to order Flying Circus' first album.

Pink Floyd has another album out, it's called THE DARK SIDE OF THE MOON, on the Harvest label. There are some very different sounds on their new album. I can't tell you because I'd spoil the surprise element. This album seems to have better fidelity and over-all better sound than their last album. Pink Floyd fans will dig them more. Those who aren't fans yet should listen to THE DARK SIDE OF THE MOON and then try to say you don't like Pink Floyd. By the way, Pink Floyd will be at Park Central in Charlotte, March 21 and the coliseum in Hampton, Virginia March 22.

SHE AM WOMAN

Helen Reddy was awarded a Grammy for Best Pop Vocal Performance-1972 at the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences at the 15th Annual Grammy Awards for her performance of "I Am Woman" in the rewritten version from the motion picture STAND UP AND BE COUNTED.

FUNK BUNK

Andy Cavallere, Grand Funk Railroad's manager announced that in the group's 17 date tour, just over, they played for over 125,000 people and grossed nearly a million dollars. It must be nice to be able to play 8 chords and make a million dollars.

WHO'S WHERE

Leon Russell will be at Clemson University in South Carolina on March 30 and in Hampton Roads Coliseum in Hampton, Virginia, April 1.

Charlie Louvin will be at the State Fair Grounds in Richmond, Virginia on March 3, Square dance anyone?

LAST FRIDAY'S DANCE

As S.C.A. Dance Committee Chairman, I want to thank everyone who came to the 1st Alfred E. Neuman Commemorative Dance last Friday. Benefit was great and the Budweiser was even better. Also, I'd like to thank the Physical Education Majors club, Delta Upsilon, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Pi Kappa Phi, and especially J. W. Jackson Beverage Company (Budweiser) for making this dance monetarily possible. Thanks a Bunch!

Cooke examines history

by marian koch

Noted journalist and author Alistair Cooke looks at the people, places, and events responsible for the nation's history in the series "America: A Personal History" has thirteen programs, of which five programs are left to be aired. The U.S. is carried through many trying years in "The Promise Fulfilled" and "The Promise Broken" (March 20). It progresses from WWI, through the roaring twenties and the Great Depression, into the New Deal.

"The Arsenal" (April 10) explains how America expands to become the defense powerhouse that it is today.

Cooke gives a personal tribute to the United States in the twelfth program. "The First Impact" (April 24) displays the elements that impressed him most about our nation. Cooke includes such things as New Orleans jazz, Spanish missions, and the autumn foliage in New England.

"The Old Order Changeth" (May 8) takes a look at the American way of life and its enduring traits. It contrasts U.S. handling of conflicts of business exploitation and race relations with their handling in other countries.

Alistair Cooke is an English born graduate of Cambridge. He came to the United States to do his post-graduate work in English at Harvard and Yale. In 1934 he became commentator on U.S. affairs for the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC). He returned to the United States in 1937 and became a citizen in 1941.

While in the U.S., he has collected grab bags full of stories and anecdotes which were passed to newspaper readers and the radio audience of the British Isles. The past three years he has been touring the 50 states filming his version of American history. Many years and events are covered from the earliest Indian settlements to the walks on the moon.

Instead of telling history verbatim, he has drawn parallels between past and present. For example, the British military dilemma in the American war for independence has been compared to the American military dilemma in Viet Nam.

Cooke is the creator, writer, and on-camera narrator for the series. He has traveled to all of the locations that are represented on the programs. As a result, the filming on location tends to emphasize local history along with national history.

Cooke says that history is not what actually happened but what is related by the people. "America: A Personal History" is his version of our past.

TOUCH THE EARTH

review

by debbi bowen

TOUCH THE EARTH, compiled by T.C. McLuhan, is aptly sub-titled "A Self-Portrait of Indian Existence". The book is a beautiful collection of writings and photographs of the Indians of this country from their first contact with the white man to the present struggles of Indian identity.

TOUCH THE EARTH traces the Indian as he watches his lands being destroyed by the strange white invaders. When Black Elk, a holy man of the Oglala Sioux, spoke of the beauty and strangeness of the earth, he spoke of his everyday environment. As Miss McLuhan notes, the Indian and the earth were one, and the Indian was aware that as surely as the white man destroyed the land, he would destroy the Indian.

The writings in the book (many of them taken from speeches of chiefs at meetings with white government officials) are eloquent in their simplicity. Most of the writings are in praise of the land, in deep respect and deep communion with nature. Only those written in the last century show great signs of bitterness. Miss McLuhan repeatedly portrays the Indian in his attempt to survive in harmony with his white brothers.

When the Indian finally realized that the white man did not care for the land, it was too late. He was being forced onto reservations, where his family was starved or murdered. An old Wintu woman of California says in one passage, "The white people never cared for land or deer or bear. . .

The spirit of the land hates them . . . How can the spirit of the earth like the White man? Everywhere the White man has touched it, it is sore."

The attempt of the Indians to communicate with his white brothers is perhaps even more evident in the collection of modern writings included in the book. One of the best examples is the treaty offered by the Indians after they were forcibly evicted from Alcatraz Island in 1971. This treaty, however, is full of bitterness and irony. The Indians offer to buy Alcatraz (and use it for a reservation) for the sum of $24 in glass beads and trinkets.

The book is illustrated with 53 photographs by Edward S. Curtis. Taken in the early part of this century, the photographs are a priceless heritage, portraying the lives of a people doomed to extinction.

TOUCH THE EARTH is indeed one of the finest portrayals of the Indians. It is a fine tribute to a lifestyle white Americans could do well to remember, and from which they could learn much.

Library adds books

by kathie corn

Two books recently added to the William Randall Library collection are STEAM: GENERATION AND USE, which was a gift from the Babcock and Wilcox Company, and THE TRIUMPH, an addition to the recreational reading collection.

STEAM was first published in 1875. The 607 page volume presented to Miss Helen Hagen, head librarian, by Jerry Colman and Bert Wom-ble of B&W, is the 38th edition of the book.

B&W designs, engineers, and manufactures steam generating equipment. During WWII the company handled 90 per cent of the propulsion systems for the US fleet, including that for the USS North Carolina.

The local plant, which specializes in package boilers, employs 725 workers from the area.

THE TRIUMPH is a satirical account of a revolution in a small, sleepy Latin American nation.

Puerto Santos, the scene of the conflict, was ruled for many years by an old man whose major economic policy was to rob the people for all they were worth. Aided by a host of mistresses, he was known as "the father of his country."

When the prolific ruler was overthrown, the US stepped in, alarmed at the threat of communism.

The revolution was overturned and Juan Martinez, son of the dictator, was recruited from the University of Michigan to replace his father. While the State Department believed their action to be a triumph in diplomacy, the amazing results of the action could not be foreseen.

Author John Kenneth Galbraith has served in many governmental positions and was Ambassador to India during the Kennedy administration.

Steinbeck adaptation to air

by marian koch

"The Red Pony," an adaptation of John Steinbeck's novel, will be shown on Channel 6. The program will be aired March 18, from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m.

"The Red Pony" tells the story of a ten year old farm boy's struggle toward maturity. In the process of growing up, he gains a greater understanding of life and human relationships. He goes through the possession and loss of his beloved copper-colored horse named Gabilan.

Henry Fonda, who plays the boy's father, is a stern and demanding man who loves his son but remains isolated from him.

Jody, the boy, is destroyed when Gabilan dies of strangles, a highly infectious respiratory disease in horses. He can't believe the cruelty of nature and the helplessness of his father, whom he thought infallible.

Throughout the course of the drama, Jody's faith is restored by the events surrounding the birth of another colt. He learns the lesson that, despite setbacks and human frailties, life goes on.

The novel was slightly altered for the film version. Jody focuses his feelings on one adult instead of two. Billy Buck is omitted from the film version. He is the ranch hand, in the novel, that is involved with Gabilan's death and the new colt's birth. Jody's father takes on his own and Billy Buck's role and is thus the center for all of Jody's conflicts.

The beginning of the production gives details about how the Tiflins acquire Gabilan at a sheriff's auction. It also tells about the traveling show that the horse was a part of and how he got to the auction. The novel mentions this transaction in a paragraph or less.

Steinbeck set his tale in Salinas Valley, in central California, at the turn of the century. This is the countryside where he was raised. He knew it well, and portrayed it in many of his works.

UNC-W tennis improved

University of North Carolina at Wilmington tennis team this year will be the best that this University school has produced in its four years of existence.

While the Seahawk netters will not have any Rod Lavers or Stan Smiths on the team, the Hawks do have nine sound young men to go the route for the team this season.

Suffering a 5-4 setback to Francis Marion College of South Carolina in their opening match of the season here Tuesday afternoon, the seahawks promise to be competitive in district and non-district play, although the Hawks may not show this in the win column for the season.

"We have some very good tennis players down here, but if the teams we play get the breaks or have players better than we are, we won't win," pointed out UNC-W tennis coach Larry Honeycutt.

Coach Honeycutt went on to add that this year's team will be young with only two returnees from last year's squad, but that the team should be ready by district tournament.

The two returning netters are Steve Shaw and Mike Arnette who are currently numbers three and six on the team's starting roster respectively.

Seven newcomers have made it into the Seahawk lineup this year, including John Burnette, Robert Vail, Kevin Piacenza, Steve Waters, David Webster, Charles Williamson, and Ted Webb, who are standing in the number one, two, four, five, seven, eight, and nine positions respectively.

With these nine players sticking on the tennis team, UNC-W will have much more depth this season, and this should prove to be to the advantage of the Hawks.

"I don't feel that anyone is head and shoulders over the others who are out there playing tennis for us," Coach Honeycutt declared. "We have a good team, and with this depth, this will mark the first year that the UNC-W tennis team will take a full spread to the district tournament."

In as far as how the schedule goes this year for the Seahawks, Honeycutt said that the toughest team UNC-W will face this season will be Campbell College, but that the best team in the district will probably be the Atlantic Christian Bulldogs, which the Seahawks will not be playing.

Seahawks take district wins

Baseball season has officially opened in Seahawk country with the UNC-W Seahawks taking two District 29 victories over the Virginia State Trojans inaction this past weekend at Brooks Field.

These two wins brought the Seahawks' record to three wins-one loss in over-all competition, and 2-0 in District 29 play, UNC-W began the season by splitting a pair of games with the West 1 Liberty State Hilltoppers last week and thereby giving up their only loss of the season.

Neither of the two games with Virginia State was like the other as the first turned out to be a pitchers' duel with UNC-W pulling out the win by a score of 3-2, while the second game was a Seahawk rout as the Hawks clobbered out 12 hits, coasting to a 12-4 victory.

In the first game, the Seahawks were provided with tremendous pitching from starter Harry Kincaid and reliever Bob Becher as the Hawks' big bat could only manage two punches against the Trojan throwers.

Kincaid experienced a wee bit of control trouble in the early going but managed to recover and pitch the first five innings in giving up only two runs.

It was from this point that Bob Becher came on to pitch a scoreless last four innings to Virginia State, and help UNC-W with the win.

All of the Hawks' runs came across in the fourth inning with UNC-W connecting for both hits in this inning. Howey Edgerton, Dave Sandlin, and Bill Hutchinson scored the three runs for the Seahawks as Sandlin and Greg Dalton picked up two hits, both being doubles.

The second game was nothing like the first as the Hawks' big guns exploded and bombed out five Trojan pitchers, getting 12 hits and as many runs.

Seahawk Billy Smith hit a grand slam sacker in leading the Seahawk onslaught against Virginia State.

Smith had five runs batted in for the Hawks while Robert Pittman had three hits to lead the hitting department for UNC-W.

Southpaw Sandlin got his second win of the season against no losses as he was starter for the Hawkmen.

UNC-W baseballers will be out of town this weekend, playing against the Methodist Monarchs Friday at Fayetteville in a District 29 contest, and then going southward to meet Baptist College at Charleston, S.C., Saturday.

LEADING HAWKS.....
Much to the surprise of some fans, freshman Joe Miller is leading the Seahawks in RBI's with eight while he is 5 for 15 from the plate including one grand slam home in the first game.
Robert Pittman is leading the UNC-W nine in batting average in hitting a cool .750, having six hits in eight trips to the home dish.

Hawks face tough road

Coming off a very short rest of three days, the UNC-W "Green Machine" got right back into action Wednesday afternoon by defeating Salisbury State College 4-1 in front of a "near capacity" crowd at Brooks field.

The Hawks jumped off to an early lead of 4-0, and then just sailed to victory behind the pitching of starter Harry Kincaid and reliever Randy Prousser.

Kincaid pitched six scoreless innings and received credit for the win, his second of the season.

Besides this game and a rematch between the Seahawks and the Seagulls on Thursday, the UNC-W baseball nine will face a grueling seven game stretch over just a nine day span beginning Friday.

Seahawks will travel to Fayetteville on Friday to play the powerful Methodist Monarchs in a very important District 29 game, and will go to Charleston, S.C., on Saturday to meet the Baptist Buccaneers.

These two trips will mark the first travelling for UNC-W so far this season who only have nine more traveling tickets left on their schedule and have 21 more home games left in the season.

UNC-W will rest on Sunday, and then will play host to Davidson College at Brooks Field before hitting the road again to contest the Atlantic Christian Bulldogs in Wilson Tuesday in district action.

Returning home Wednesday and Thursday for a two game stand against the Blue Devils of Duke University, the Seahawks will rest on Friday and turn their attentions toward a game with Kings College of New York for Saturday at home.

Altogether, this seven game flurry for the Seahawks should prove quite productive and will ready the Hawk nine for the rest of their jam-packed season.

Golfers crush gulls

"We didn't play our best, but it didn't take our best to win fortunately."

This was one of the statements uttered by one of the UNC-W golfers at the golf match Wednesday afternoon between the Seahawks and Salisbury State College at the Wilmington Golf Club.

UNC-W Seahawks completely outclassed the lesser skilled Salisbury State team as they soundly beat the Sea Gulls 380-428 with every man on the Hawk squad bettering his opponent's score.

The Seahawks lost their initial match of the year to Francis Marion of S.C. and finished 10th during the weekend in a large collegiate meet at Camp Lejeune.

Best scores for the Seahawks in the match were turned in by Austin Overby and Billy Peterson. Both of these men finished with 74.

UNC-W golf coach Earl

Allen said that he was well pleased with the progress the Seahawk golfers have made and thought that they would be in strong contention to take home some district honors even though this year was primarily a rebuilding year.

Seahawks only have three lettermen returning from last year's squad. These three are seniors Austin Overby and Allen French and junior Jimmy Crawford.

There are six newcomers on the roster this year that will have to fill some mighty big shoes. The newcomers are freshmen David Smith, Charlie Roberts, Billy Peterson, and David Walsh, sophomore Jerry Clapp, and senior Tom Brinson.

Novel writing not easy

by robin starr

"Writing a novel isn't as easy as it seems," says senior Mike Church, and he should know, since his first novel is nearly completed. Church has already established himself as a short story writer and as a poet by winning first place honors in both the spring '72 Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest and the University Poetry Contest this fall.

Mike decided to write his novel as a project for the Multiple Abilities Program. After spending the 20 hours a week required by MAP, he has finished his rough draft and is now revising. Church began the novel last fall and expects to complete the final copy by July.

YOUTH AT THE FOUNTAIN deals with the youth of today conforming, in their own way, to society. Ideas for the novel were born when Mike saw a rebellious figure in a painting done by one of his friends.

Mike then created, in his mind, a picture of his own, a picture that vividly reveals the major ideas in his novel. The picture portrays three swimmers caught in a rip current. One swimmer is floating with the tide, one is fighting against the tide, and the third swimmer is drowning helplessly.

In his book, Mike painted this same picture with words but related it to society. The three swimmers are his three main characters who are caught in the turmoil of modern-day society.

Tim Brooks is the character who is swimming with society. Brooks, whom Mike has given the job of telling the story, feels a sense of loss when people cannot conform to the society in which they must live.

Joseph Elliot is totally self aware. He knows what he, as a person, must do and he chooses to fight society rather than conform to things in which he does not believe.

Chuck, who can not find his way in the modern world, does not fit into society at all.

Church was reluctant to interpret his work. Once a writer has interpreted his own work, the readers refuse to use their imaginations in searching for their own interpretations.

Alice pleases kiddie crowds

by jean lanier

Recently The Pied Piper Theatre, sponsored by University theater, presented "Alice in Wonderland," directed by Doug W. Swink of the drama department.

The all-woman cast did an outstanding job, and the audience—mostly children—were pleased with the performance. The best liked character seemed to be the White Rabbit with her furry costume and fluffy tail.

Alice, a precious little girl with pretty blond hair, exhibited dress and speech typical of her supposed age. As she spoke and sang directly to the children, they felt more absorbed in the play.

The bright green costume of the turtle was original and "eye-catching."

Twedeede and Tweedledee overwhelmed the audience with their giant sunglasses and bowl-shaped tummies. Their performances of singing and reciting kept the children alert and laughing throughout the play.

The rabbit hole leading to the wonderland was typically breath-taking, draped with transparent curtains which glimmered with each breeze. Each successive curtain, smaller than the first, it appeared as if it was a very deep hole. The different colored lights gave the stage a "fairytale" glow.

The children breathed a sigh of relief as Alice escaped with the White Rabbit. Here, the rabbit gave her the key which was to open the door to reality, and she happily ran to find her way home.

Parnell provides travelogue

"Alaskan Travelogue" provided a quick visit to Alaska for those who attended this color slide program presented by Dr. James Parnell. Dr. Parnell took the slides on a trip made to Alaska by he and his wife three summers ago.

Traveling by VW van, they drove to Seattle, Washington. An auto ferry - the auto is driven onto the ferry - carried them through Canada until they transferred to the Alkan Highway. Driving along the highway, which is paved in Alaska but not in Canada, they proceeded to such places as Anchorage and Mt. McKinley National Park.

Dr. Parnell narrated the slides which showed the beautiful scenery and the wildlife of the area. Encounters with a red fox, a grizzly bear, and a moose were shown. A particular interest in the birds of the area was noticed. Dr. Parnell mentioned how odd it seemed to have only a couple of hours of darkness during a twenty-four hour period. This is due to the midnight sun.

The hour of slides presented in Hoggard Hall was informative for anyone who might be considering a similar trip.

Greek Lines

There is a popular misconception of designating a girl's fraternity as a sorority on this campus. Actually sororities refer to groups of girls or women who band together, select a name (usually using greek letters), and then call themselves a sorority. A good example of a sorority can be seen in the local high schools where initiations include dressing in ridiculous clothing, eating raw eggs, and being humiliated in front of the public. However, Phi Mu and Zeta Tau Alpha are fraternities as they have national chapters world-wide, and a desire to create a better womanhood, Zeta Tau Alpha

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha recently enjoyed a visit from a past president of the chapter and present Field Secretary for the National Fraternity, Miss Sherri Kinlow, Miss Kinlow who is interested in the growth of the ZTA Colony at Pembroke helped ZTA's here at Wilmington plan future get togethers with them.

The Zetas are planning to be an active part in the March of Dimes Telethon. A "Wishing Well" will be assembled at Hanover Shopping Center where the public can donate to this charity.

Immediate events on the social calendar include a mass exodus to the Maco Light and breakfast afterwards.

Phi Mu

There has been a reorganization of the leadership of Phi Mu. However, after recent elections, Pam Welsh was still President of Phi Mu by popular vote, Debbie Warner will serve as Vice-President, Linda Robinson was chosen as Treasurer, The Secretary is Cindy Turner, Other officers elected were Membership Chairman, Cathy Warner; Pledge Directors, Boni Jo Fries and Marian Saffo; and Panhellenic Delegate, Janet Halir.

The president will travel to Atlanta, Ga., on the weekend of March 16 as a delegate for their National Leadership Conference.

Phi Mu plans to raise more money for their Carnation Ball. They are planning a cake sale through the help of Table Top Bakery. The Sisters encourage interested gourmets to contact them. They are offering cherry, chocolate, vanilla, pineapple, or coconut four-pound cakes for $2.

Phi Mu also would like to thank all of the faculty and students who helped them by buying donuts during their successful donut sale this past week.

ADU held a seminar in lieu of one of its chapter meetings. Among several topics discussed were recent improvements in certain areas of the colony's operations. Four areas were emphasized.

The first was the office of president headed up by Ron Pasequalone. Ron has been actively working to see that ADU goes nation next fall. Among numerous duties assigned to the president, he is responsible for all correspondence with the international headquarters. Ultimately all responsibility for the chapter's operations fall on him. More importantly, he presides over the chapter meetings and insures an orderly progression of business. He must often arbitrate difficult arguments. The chapter believes he has done a tremendous job in this area.

The second area which has improved greatly is the office of Chapter Relations. Rocky Moore has worked diligently to see that ADU's image is built up on campus. However, hard work on the part of the Chapter Relations Officer is only a small part of ADU's self commitment. ADU has members serving on the March of Dimes Walk-a-thon Committee, and all the brothers of ADU have been involved in promoting ADU on campus.

Thirdly it was noted that there has been a tremendous increase in the membership of the sisterhood. Not only has the ADU sisterhood increased in quantity, but also in their contributions to campus life. Three members of the sisterhood are members of the senate, one is president of the freshman class, and another is on the Multiple Abilities Program. The sisterhood has tentative plans to assist ADU in fixing up their house. Also, they plan to help generate revenue for upcoming parties.

The fourth area which the brotherhood singled out for recognition is the house itself. The current house manager, Mark Ayers, who is a jack of all trades, has made many contributions in time and effort in making his position one of responsibility. The appearance of the house and grounds is ample evidence of this.

Freshman Sam Barbee and senior Ben Clayton

Students take honors in Norfolk contest

by robin starr

Ben Clayton, senior, and Sam Barbee, freshman, have captured literary awards from the Norfolk Society of Arts. "I think it was the biggest surprise of my life," said Clayton, who won Third Place honors for his short story "A Bouquet for Molly."

The 55th annual literary contest, sponsored by the Irene Leache Memorial Association, was open to residents of Virginia and North Carolina members of the Norfolk Society of Arts, students, and members of the Armed Forces in the area which made competition very rough.

Sam Barbee, whose work won him honorable mention (Third Place), was entered in the essay division of the contest in which 44 other works had been submitted. Judges praised his essay, "Full Tilt," for its "soft sadness." The essay deals with a conflict of light and dark - not the light and dark color of people but rather the light and dark in people's lives.

In the essay, the narrator describes a boy playing a pinball machine. The dark atmosphere represents the young boy's life while references to sun and light represent the narrators life. The climax of the essay occurs when light momentarily appears in the boy's life - his score is the highest ever made on the pinball machine. But in the end his victory is snatched away.

Ben Clayton's short story was one of 155 entries in that division. "A Bouquet for Molly" revolves around a newly released prisoner's encounter with the narrator of the story, a young newspaper man. They first meet on a bus as the free man rides, unknowingly, to disillusionment and loneliness.

Mrs. Fred. E. Martin, chairman of the contest said this about Clayton's entry: "Your story impressed me... It was subtle and touching and the prize was well deserved." Although several other UNC-W students have won in the essay division, Clayton is the first from here to place in the short story division.

Barbee's and Clayton's works will be published in the spring edition of the UNC-W literary magazine, the ATLANTIS.

Awards will be presented and the winning entries read at the Spring Festival of the Arts which is being held today at 3 p.m., at the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk. Clayton will receive the third place Garnett Memorial Prize while Barbee will be cited as having won honorable mention in the Fannie Rogers Curd Prize for Essays.

Frank Hall show set

by jean lenier

Frank Hall will present his One Man Show Wednesday, March 28, at 8 p.m. The performance will be at Kenan Memorial Auditorium with no admission fee.

His One Man Show will consist of selections from the best contemporary literature. It will be used in a composite to show some of the problems in today's relationships. Works by Tennessee Williams, Stephen Sandel, E. E. Cummings, and Eudora Welty will be used.

Also, remembrances and writings of Lillian Hellman, Dorothy Parker, William Sarogan, and Dashiell Hammett blend with song and mirth for eductive entertainment.

Mr. Hall was born in St. Louis, Missouri, but raised in Wilmington where he began theatricals in high school.

After two years at Wilmington College he had been in ten Wilmington College/Thalian productions, master of ceremonies at the Cottage Lane Exhibit, and had presented comedy monologues along the East Coast.

After leaving Wilmington in 1967, he spent the summer at Cherokee and appeared as Lewis Cass in UNTO THESE HILLS. In 1969 he graduated from UNC-Chapel Hill with a BA in drama. In the fall he attended the University of Georgia where he received his Master of Fine Arts in 1970.

His original play, THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO FERN RIDDLE, was produced by the University of Georgia and high schools throughout Georgia where it won a first prize state award.

Dave Sandlin gets congratulations from Harry Kincaid after hitting a round tripper in the game this past Monday at Brooks Field against the Davidson Wildcats. Sandlin's homer gave the Hawks the lead, but it didn't last long as Davidson came back and beat the Seahawks 7-5. This was only the 2nd loss of the season for the Hawk nine who have eight wins. Two presidential candidates speak out

ASBURY

The Student Body President must try to represent each and every student to the very best of his capabilities. My reason for filing for this position is I feel that this is not being done presently. This year's budget shows any knowledgeable student this.

My name is Barry Asbury. This is my third year of attending UNC-WILMINGTON and I am presently a Junior. For two years, I tried to get involved in Student Government. The upper classmen, of course, were effective at keeping a "lowly" Freshman or Sophomore in the "out crowd". So, I stayed around, maybe looking dumb sometimes (everybody does), but taking notice of everything that went on. Finally, this year I managed to get involved. However, I soon found out that a one person campaign for the everyday student did little good. I stayed though, and will continue to work for what I think is honest and fair to every student concerned. I have no big plans or promises to lull votes because from past experiences, campaign promises very rarely come through.

This year, along with being

Junior Class President, Chairman of the Dance Committee, Advertising Director for the SEAHAWK (spring semester), I also found myself on the Homecoming Committee, the Student Affairs Committee, the Pub Policy Committee, writing a music column for the SEAHAWK, working in programming and advertising for a radio station, and playing in the University Wind Ensemble and the Stage Band. To say the least, I have tried to be involved. This is not meant to sound braggart, but I feel that to be an effective Student Body President, one has got to have knowledge of the present situation.

One of my main interests is in the manner of allocation of Student Government funds. Where is your money going? I'll do better than that. Each semester, ten dollars of the $198.25 every student pays goes to Student Government. The fall semester netted the SGA $21,050. The spring semester brought $20,110, to the SGA. This gave $41,160, to allocate for the year. Around $5,000, was put into a savings account to draw interest for the SGA. Out of a total budget of $36,150, $1,900, was put into a Contingency fund for unforeseeable needs. $34,330, was left to allocate for specific purposes.

It seems to me that the allocations for this year were based on personal interests instead of financial need. Let me point out that the only allocation smaller than the Entertainment is to Student Government for office supplies and the like.

Along with my intent interest of how student money is spent, is putting an end to the farcical reputation that our SGA has. Of course, with a total of somewhere around 350 people voting for three candidates on the ballot and one write in for Student Body President for this year, one can't expect too much respect from the Administration Building. This is why I've been asking everyone to take time to vote for the candidate of your choice on March 28th & 27th.

Also, too much attention is being given to off campus activities and not enough to activities on campus. Several other class presidents and myself have been trying to fill empty positions for class representatives this semester. The Student Body President had, however, failed to appoint a Board of Elections Chairman until the last minute for the upcoming Student Body elections. I was

PEGRAM

Fellow Students,

My name is Butch Pegram and I am running for the position of President of the Student Government Association. Since I am a transfer student to UNC-W I believe those of you who know little or nothing about me should be given a list of my qualifications:

This year I have served as Chief Justice of the Student Superior Court and as Chairman of the North Carolina Student Legislature. I was Vice President of the SGA, dorm councillor, and a member of Phi Beta Lambda at Wingate College. Before entering college I served in the United States Air Force for four years. I was a member of the Airman's Council (similar to SGA) and received the honor of the Month in my squadron. I received an Honorable Discharge as a sergeant in May, 1970.

With my management experience in the service and at Wingate I feel that I am well-qualified to serve you as president. There are many areas in the SGA which could be improved and I would like the opportunity to change them.

First of all I would like to propose a social during the first week of each semester so students may get acquainted more rapidly. This event would occur outside (weather permitting) with a band provided. Each student would furnish his (or her) own favorite beverage.

Secondly, a publicity committee is needed at UNC-W. This committee would be responsible for making the student body aware of the dates and times that events such as dances, ballgames and concerts are scheduled. We need this to promote school spirit. This would result in more student participation.

Another area I intend to work with is the Constitution. If any of you have read this document you have seen many places where improvement is needed.

It is my opinion that entertainment (all types) is second only to academics in the University. I want to see student fees used for the student. A student must get a return for his investment. We have had outstanding films at school this year at a very low cost. However, I intend to do my best at putting a maximum cost of $2.50 for students who attend concerts. Many students have not been able to attend concerts this year simply because of the lack of money.

These are just a few of my ideas about needed changes. I am elected I will listen and act on your ideas too.

Thank you for your time. Please vote BUTCH PEGRAM -SGA PRES.

Business men form frat

by rocky moore

UNC-W is growing. There is ample evidence of this in all areas of campus activity; one recent example of the university coming of age was the formation of a new professional businessman's fraternity.

This fraternity is a direct outgrowth of the present Business Club. Most of the leadership and organization of this new fraternity come directly from the Business Club whose contributions to campus life have been demonstrated admirably since the early 1960's.

Tentative plans for the fraternity were begun one and one half years ago. The plans consisted of interested individuals writing letters to various national fraternities and querying them concerning their essential principles. Several weeks ago a group of 28 interested persons assembled and decided to form a businessman's fraternity. At that time they had no name for their organization.

The search for a national ended when Vernon Sneed, Instructor from the Business Department, sent a letter off to Delta Sigma Pi (DSP). When it was discovered that the fundamental principles of DSP paralleled that of the local fraternity, they arranged to have a speaker sent from Delta Sigma Pi. On February 22, John Richardson came to the campus and related much information about his national fraternity.

Delta Sigma Pi is one of the oldest Businessman's fraternities in the United States. It is essentially a fraternal organization exclusively for top students of business administration. It seeks select business students, those who are trying to enhance their knowledge through their association with other students in the field, and unites them in brotherhood.

It sponsors professional programs with tours and speakers in and from the business world, industrial movies, business machine exhibits, forums, etc. Additionally, it conducts a model business in each chapter that is patterned after the best organizations in the business world, providing actual experience for its members.

Before Delta Sigma Pi will accept our local fraternity into their national, they must prove themselves capable of performing all of the functions outlined for them. It is believed, in view of the leadership exhibited in the past by members of the business club, that our local will sufficiently impress Delta Sigma Pi with their high standards of scholarship and will gain their national charter within a short period of time.

This businessman's fraternity will not necessarily replace the Business Club, although it was Richardson's personal belief that it would. In any event, the 2.5 minimum quality point average for admission to the fraternity will not exclude those below the minimum from participating in related business activities: seminars, guest speakers, industrial movies, etc.

The next meeting of the local businessman's fraternity will be at Sneed's house at 7 p.m. tonight. There is a map posted near the West entrance of the business building. All business majors with a 2.5 average or better are urged to attend the meetings.

ENROLLMENT REACHED 9.2 MILLION THIS FALL at colleges and universities across the nation, a 2% increase over last year, according to the U.S. Office of Education. The biggest increase (5.4%) was experienced at two-year institutions (See Oct. - NOCR) reports "The Chronicle of Higher Education." Four year colleges registered a 1.9% increase while universities had a .6% decline in enrollment.

'Airport' slated

Based on the book by Arthur Hailey that was on the best-seller list for 65 weeks and sold more than 4,000,000 copies in its paperback version, "Airport" has been brought to the screen by producer Hunter and Academy Award winner George Seaton who wrote the screenplay and directed "Airport" will be shown Tuesday, March 27, at 8 p.m. in Kenan Memorial Auditorium.

"Airport" is a powerful suspense drama that takes place at night during a seven-hour period while an international airport in the Midwest is plagued by a crippling blizzard, a mired airplane that blocks a vital runway and a second jetliner trying to limp back home after surviving a mid-air bomb blast.

Burt Lancaster portrays the dedicated, hard-hitting Mel Bakersfeld, the airport manager fighting to keep his airport operative. An Academy Award winner for his performance in "Elmer Gantry", he has contributed unforgettable performances on the screen in such films as "From Here to Eternity," "Come Back, Little Sheba," "The Rose Tattoo," "Birdman of Alcatraz," "Judgement at Nuremberg," and "The Swimmer."

In an unusual straight dramatic role, Dean Martin is Vernon Demerest, the pilot of the crippled Boeing 707 who has two major problems -- straightening out his personal affair with his pregnant stewardess girlfriend and fighting for the safety and lives of his passengers in the bomb-damaged jetliner.

If a steady salary of $400 a month and paid-up tuition will help you continue your professional training, the scholarships just made possible by the Uniformed Services Health Professions Revitalization Act of 1972 deserve your close attention. Because if you are now in a medical, osteopathic, dental, veterinary, podiatry, or optometry school, or are working toward a PhD in Clinical Psychology, you may qualify.

We make it easy for you to complete your studies. You're commissioned as an officer as soon as you enter the program, but remain in student status until graduation. And, during each year you will be on active duty (with extra pay) for 45 days. Naturally, if your academic schedule requires that you remain on campus, you stay on campus --and still receive your active duty pay.

Active duty requirements are fair. Basically, you serve one year as a commissioned officer for each year you've participated in the program, with a two year minimum. You may apply for a scholarship with either the Army, Navy or Air Force, and know that upon entering active duty you'll have rank and duties in keeping with your professional training.

The life's work you've chosen for yourself requires long, hard, expensive training. Now we are in a position to give you some help. Mail in the coupon at your earliest convenience for more detailed information.

Business men are you proud of your QPA? Would you like to be associated with other business men of your caliber? For the first time on the UNC-W campus you can join a brotherhood exclusively for men with business profession majors and a 2.5 overall QPA.

SIGMA ALPHA BETA was officially organized March 9, 1973, electing our basic officers. Approximately 30 men are now members of SIGMA ALPHA BETA. We are in the process of drawing a constitution and petitioning DELTA SIGMA PI for a local charter, the fourth in North Carolina. DELTASIG is a national professional brotherhood of collegiate and alumni business men. Hopefully, we will receive our charter during the 1973 fall semester.

If you are interested in becoming a charter member of a national fraternity of professionals, SIGMA ALPHA BETA invites you to attend our next meeting March 23, 1973.

To the editor:

One of the candidates running for Student Body President, Butch Pegram, has pledged to try to keep student concert tickets to a minimum of $2.50. This is a wonderful idea, but I don't feel it can be accomplished realistically speaking. Concert prices have been sealed this year to a minimum and we will still end up with a loss for the year. The last concert pulled a profit of only $192. Concerts can be run at a loss, but only if the budget is large enough to allow booking of other bands throughout the year. Butch's proposal is based on the idea of increasing concert's budget so that a loss could be taken on each concert. To increase the concert budget to this extent would require a drastic cut in practically every other area of SGA funding.

Having been a member of the Senate for two years, I doubt very seriously whether the Senate will be willing to cut everyone else's budget to finance constant concert losses. Butch's proposal would make my job quite a bit easier and I wish him the best of luck, but the Student Body President has only a limited amount of power and realities being what they are—I do not feel he can accomplish it.

Business Spanish offered

Students who have at least a background through Spanish 102 may be interested in a course in Business Spanish to be offered in the fall.

The course, taught by Dr. Antolin Gonzalez-del-Valle, is designed for students who will need familiarization with terminology necessary in fields of business, accounting, natural sciences and others, that will facilitate the student's relations in Spanish speaking parts of the US and the rest of the world.

There will also be acquaintance with the monetary systems and economic traits of the Spanish speaking countries.

Three specials, "Keep U.S. Beautiful," "Bob Hope Presents the Gillette Cavalcade of Champions," and "The 45th Annual Academy Awards" will be shown on Channel 6, Tuesday, March 27.

"Keep U.S. Beautiful" will be aired from 8:00 to 9:00 p.m. It is a comedy-variety special which presses the need for ecological involvement.

Raymond Burr is the host. Guest stars include Ruth Buzzi, Tim Conway, Sandy Duncan, Don Knotts, and Jim Henson's Muppets.

Each star is introduced by Burr and presents his thoughts on ecology.

Tim Conway's dialogue is a parody on "Jonathan Livingston Seagull." He entitles his speech "Jonathan Livingston Eagle." Conway wants to change his life from a banker to an eagle. He feels that he will have a better chance of survival as an endangered protected species.

The other side of ecology is given equal time. Don Knotts lectures, very nervously, attempting to prove that there is no need for alarm.

Ending on a serious note, Burr quotes a passage from Genesis about the goodness and independence of the earth.

Swink gives new approach to theater course

Ever said "Boy that's lousy acting. Anybody could do better than that!" Ever tried doing better?

This semester, Doug Swink, professor of drama, is taking a different approach to the Appreciation of the Theater course. He is giving each student his chance on stage.

Mr. Swink has told the students that it is impossible for him to "teach" them to appreciate the theater unless they participate in acting first.

"Sandbox," "Barefoot in the Park," and "Taste of Honey" are among the plays being used to achieve his goal. He is assigning a few scenes of each play to different groups in the class, who present it during the semester.

The students are not expected to perform an award winning play, only to do their best. There is no scenery, lighting, costumes, or make-up, and only a few props—such as a pipe, stools, a knife, or a book.

Although only three plays have been presented thus far, the idea seems to be effective. These students know the feeling of an objective audience and the embarrassment of an on-stage mistake.

p.m. It is the first of what is to be an annual event.

Twenty-one athletes, three in each category, have been chosen as nominees by more than 700 sports authorities. Those selecting included broadcasters, writers, columnists, major league managers and coaches, members of halls of fame, and sports departments of major radio and TV networks.

The Cavalcade of Champions is a culmination of nationwide voting of the nominees by the U.S. public which ended March 3.

From the winners of the seven categories, an eighth award, "Outstanding Athlete of the Year," will be given. Each award carries a grant of $5,000 to be presented in the athlete's name to a physical fitness or youth program of his choice.

"The 45th Annual Academy Awards" will start at 10:00 p.m. and run to conclusion.

The ceremonies will be held in Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center. The program will be shown to a worldwide audience including Canada, South America, the Caribbean, Europe, the South Pacific, and Asia.

The Masters of Ceremonies are Rock Hudson, Carol Burnett, Michael Caine, and Charlton Heston.

Presenters of the awards will include Clint Eastwood, Frank Sinatra, Greer Garson, Diana Ross, Elke Sommer, and Sonny and Cher.

Frank Sinatra will present Rosalind Russell with the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award.

Art Center attracts author

by kathie corn

The Center for Art Resources, a collection of primary source material for art in North Carolina attracted author Sylvia Crane to the UNC-W campus last week. Unique to the state, the Art Resources Center collects newspaper clippings and monthly publications from museums and galleries in North Carolina. The articles, which date back to 1900, are filed chronologically and indexed by the artist. The center was begun by Claude Howell and is located in Kenan Hall. Mrs. Crane came to UNC-

W to do research for a magazine article concerning Antonio Canova, an Italian sculptor. Canova sculpted a statue of George Washington, which was placed in the N.C. State Capitol in 1821. The statue was lost when fire destroyed the building in 1831. Recently, it was discovered that the original plaster cast for the statue was preserved in Canova's home in Posagno, Italy. In 1967, the General Assembly appropriated the funds to have a second statue made from the cast. The new statue now stands in the Capitol in Raleigh.

The newspaper articles concerning the destruction of the first statue and the creation of the second are on file in the Art Resources Center. It is in these articles that brought Mrs. Crane to UNC-W.

In an interview, Mrs. Crane expressed enthusiasm concerning her book, WHITE SILENCE, released October 30, 1972. As well as depicting art, the book also discussed the social, religious, and political feelings of the century. Mrs. Crane described her book as a "cultural history". I tried to mirror the thinking of the times."

Mrs. Crane revealed that she was "astonished" by the reviews. She feels that her book, which was twelve years in writing, came out at a convenient time, with the revival of Neo classicism.

A graduate of Columbia University, Sylvia Crane is married and has two sons. She plans to send a copy of her book to the Randall Library.

When he first moved to New York City, he worked in auditions, as a ghost writer, and in television commercials. Later he appeared for an extended engagement as Dauntless the Drab in ONCE UPON A MATTRESS in Pennsylvania.

He began the role of "mental hospital technician" and general understudy in the long-running hit show ONE FLEW OVER THE CUC-KOO'S NEST. He played everything from the main doctor to the insane patient. Frank Hall is the son of Dr. B. Frank Hall, professor of philosophy and religion at UNC-W.

then too late to fill these positions. However, the passing of legislation to give $300, to a delegation to go to the North Carolina Student Legislature was quickly pushed through the Senate. I don't object to these activities, but let's take care of this campus first.

There is also a need to attract attention to UNC-W with more students enrolled, there would be more money for more and better student services, better library facilities, bigger name bands for concerts, more and better dances, improved methods for student publications, and an over-all betterment of UNC-W as an institution of higher learning for all student interests concerned. Attention can be drawn in many ways, academic as well as social. Such ways vary from winning sports teams, good concerts, a good debate team, the new marine science building, having delegations at events such as the Azalea Festival, visiting the high schools, good student services, and a variety of other ways.

Finally, I would like to encourage every student who cares enough about those of us who beat our heads against the stone wall thirty to forty hours a week, to vote for the candidate of your choice in the upcoming Student Body Election on Monday and Tuesday, March 26th and 27th. ADU

This past Monday ADU was honored with a visit from their provincial governor, Jay Gluchrist, Jay who represents the international in our area has always favored the DU's at UNC-W. His reports to the international of our activities have helped us maintain a good rapport with the international fraternity. While at Wilmington Jay will be the primary guest speaker at a formal dinner with our alumni association. Other speakers will include some of the founding brothers of the fraternity.

More importantly Jay is interested in ADU's role in the life of the students at UNC-W. He has met with Dr. Malloy, Vice Chancellor, and Dr. Rogers, the current advisor of ADU. He hopes his visit will be sufficient to encourage more support for our colony. We believe the concern that Jay has evidenced by his special trip from his home in Atlanta will serve to strengthen campus relations with our fraternity and that of our alumni association.

TKE

Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity was the first social fraternity founded on the UNC-W campus. Since then it has become the strongest fraternity on our campus and has provided most of the leadership on the Interfraternity council. Many of the TKE brothers are involved in numerous campus activities.

But first of all TKE is a social fraternity united by a strong brotherhood. The TKEs have many social functions planned and there are few weekends when some social events are not planned.

There has been a reorganization of the leadership of Tau Kappa Epsilon. However after recent elections, Marvin Ingram was still president by popular vote. Charles Berg will serve as Vice-President. Glen Tew was chosen as Secretary. The Treasurer is Ren Holt. Other officers elected were Precious Jones, Chaplain, Jim Rich, Sergeant-at-Arms, Tojle King, Hegeman (Pledge Master), and Vernon Powell, Historian.

The TKE house is undergoing enormous facelighting with the addition of a "Brothers Room." A thick shag carpet and an original bar create a most pleasing atmosphere. This is heightened by a Marantz Stereo System with KLH speakers. This certainly is a welcome addition to the TKE fraternity house.

Far be it from the TKE's to boast, but they have predicted an overwhelming victory over the other fraternities and expect to again reclaim the IFC Softball Trophy.

Councils sponsor field day

by rocky moore

Everyone is invited to attend a field day, set for April 1 behind the pub. This event is co-sponsored by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils. It is an open party, all UNC-W students, faculty, and staff are invited to attend. The events will begin at noon with the Interfraternity Championship Basketball game held in the gym. This will be followed at 2 p.m. by field games such as tug-of-war (to be held on the athletic field), a tricycle race (Girl's and Guy's division), three legged race (one guy and one girl), frisbee contest (Girl's and Guy's division), Beer Drinking contest (7 man teams), and volleyball games (as times permit). Registration for the games will begin at 1:30 behind the pub.

Prizes will consist of a free pitcher of beer donated for winners of the beer drinking contest. Other

Fall RAs sought

Students interested in positions as Residence Advisors in the dorm for the fall may apply Monday, Apr. 2 - Friday, Apr. 6 in the Student Affairs Office or with Bill Williams in the dorm office.

These are paid positions, but salaries and living arrangements have not yet been determined.

On April 9, Deans Helena Cheek and Thomas Brown, dorm head Williams, and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs William Malloy will review the applications.

Students will be contacted concerning interviews which will begin Wednesday, April 11. Notification of selection will be mailed to students by the end of May.

Even current RAs must re-apply if interested in continuing in their positions, since this is a "year to year" position.

Students selected will report a day early for the beginning of orientation in August to undergo RA orientation.

"I consider this an extremely important and vital part of our student affairs effort in the residence hall. We hope to make the RA position attractive to students," said Dr. Malloy.

RAs are responsible for their floors--not only for the well being of the students under them, but the physical condition of the floor as well. They serve as advisers, and as first line referral agents for students with difficulties, in suggesting that they seek aid through the counseling counseling center, the University health service, or whatever office the RA deems appropriate.

An introspective view

commentary by kathi beall

In the wake of a poorly (as usual) observed student election, we take a searching perhaps painful, introspective view.

Participation in this year's elections was to say the least disappointing, since many candidates were unopposed. And as generally is the case, the voter turnout was poor (about 400 of 2000 students voting, or 20 per cent voter turnout).

Why is there this apathy?

Perhaps the inactivity is attributable to the number of students who must work (egad!) full-time to finance their educations. But what of the people who run, and are elected, and still manage to be absent at a majority of the Student Senate Meetings? Again, why?

The Student Senate, is a potentially powerful organization. Its effectiveness has, in the past, been hampered by a withering of enthusiasm from within on various tasks and projects it has begun and then let die. A blatant example of this is the hula-balo which began when the bookstore was prohibited from selling candy. A flurry of protests began. But what has happened since? We don't know either.

The problem of the Senate is a "Chicken and egg" thing, according to one serious observer. "Kids don't want to be a part of a group that isn't effective. It's like you're admitting you're a loser. And if they go to a meeting, chances are they're going to see more time being spent on points of order and amendments to the substitute motion than on meaningful discussion and/or action."

The bookstore candy affair is one of the many things in which the Student Senate could wield considerable influence. It might do well to look into the fact that each student pays a $6.75 per semester parking fee -- whether he drives a car on campus or not. And where does money paid in student fees allotted to the athletic department go?

Of course, Senate is only one of the possible activity areas open to interested students. There are numerous professional, majors', and interest clubs open for membership.

The Student North Carolina Education Association and the Student Nurse Association are both professional organizations. The Business Club encourages members from the ranks of those who plan to pursue a career in business, accounting, economics, and transportation. And there is the Society of Physics Students, the Biology and Chemistry Clubs.

Wantu Wazuri is composed of Black students who are concerned with the Black people today. Le Cercle Francais and the Sociedad de espanol welcome students -- present or former -- of their respective languages. The Physical Education Majors'

Club has been quite active. And the English Club will meet to organize the first week of April.

These are by no means all the clubs which encourage student support.

This is a "suitcase college" some say, and that is the root of the problem. "Wilmington College" some say we have here, and we can't seem to grow into the proper "branch of the Consolidated University" frame of mind.

But we have grown in some respects. Attendance at the dances, according to Dance Committee Chairman Barry Asbury, has been fantastic this year. And Wes Knappe, who heads up the Concert Committee, says that from information he received at the recent National Entertainment Conference in Ohio, that we have one of the highest percentages of campus concert attendance for any college or university (about 25% attendance.)

The "fun" activities are not the only things in which we seem to have a high level of participation. One member of the English department stated that for a campus 1/10 the size of that of UNC-CH, our participation in the literary contests here is what you would expect from that campus.

In addition, though the fraternity interest has been waning, it is picking up speed again. One of the obvious evidences of this is an open-to-all-students Greek Day on Sunday, April 1. The Pan-Hellenic Council and the Intrafraternity Council are co-sponsoring this day of fun, food, and music for the enjoyment of every UNC-W student who wishes to attend. Just show up behind the Pub at 2 p.m. Or better still, hit the gym at noon for the IFC Championship Basketball game.

Last but not least (certainly not!), none of the publications have closed staffs. Any student who desires to may work for the literary magazine ATLANTIS the yearbook FLEDGLING, and the SEAHAWK. The opportunity is here.

Feedback!

A very stirring event has taken place on this campus with the election of Miss Jo Hilton as Homecoming Queen 1973. As the Azalea Festival draws near, Jo prepares herself for a very exciting and unusual week representing UNC-W in the festival events.

Jo is fifteen years old and has lived at Carolina Beach all her life. She graduated at John T. Hoggard High School in Wilmington and is presently a sophomore here at UNC-W. Her major is Physical Education which she hopes to teach after graduation.

Her hobbies vary in such things as sports and music, to just relaxing with friends. In sports, she is very interested in volleyball and basketball, but also likes tennis and ping pong. Her musical interest lies in the bluegrass field. She enjoys Fiddler Conventions as well as "cloggin'" to the music, which she demonstrates to friends on rare occasions.

As to her activities in the festival she is quoted as saying

"I have three whole pages of things I'll be in." Some of these things are; three days, during the festival, which she will spend at Timme Hilton among celebrities and other various queens, appearing on The Jim Burns Show, appearing at the Festival Art Show, and appearing in the Festival Parade. She also said, "I'm very excited because I've never really been involved with the Azalea Festival activities. I'm also proud and honored to represent our school in the festival."

When asked her views about the UNC-W campus, and her election as Homecoming Queen, she replied, "I like the school very much. It's small and has great potential but lacks school spirit. As for my election, I was very surprised to win. I know my winning was due to many people, so I would like to thank all who voted for me as well as my campaign managers, Cindy Sevier and John Wilkins. Also I would like to thank my escort 'Fish' (David Williams)."

When asked her future ambitions, she said jokingly, "To be Miss Wilmington," and then seriously, "To graduate and become a teacher."

As the Azalea Festival approaches, the 1973 Homecoming Queen, UNC-W, prepares herself for the many festival activities. All she needs now is your support.

Scandinavia a bargain for college students

A new eight-page tabloid covering all aspects of youth travel in Scandinavia is available to college and university students through Scandinavian Airlines/SAS or travel agents throughout the country. A copy is on display at THE SEAHAWK office.

The first edition of the newspaper, SAS YOUTH NEWS, describes bargain travel fares, youth discounts, study programs, hosting and other special interest information on travel in Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.

Sections on where to stay, where to eat and what to do in the cities (both day and night) are included, along with information on cycling tours, sailing and canoeing trips, farm vacations and working holidays.

Details also are given on SAS' special bonus offer of substantial discounts on the purchase of Swedish bicycles and motor bikes which can be shipped home after a Scandinavian holiday.

A calendar of events lists what's happening where between May and September, such as the International Jazz Festival in Kongsberg, Norway, which features jam sessions held inside an old silver mine; Stockholm's Ballet and Opera Festival, and the biggest American Independence Day Celebration in the world which takes place at Rebild National Park, south of Aalborg, Denmark.

Free copies of the SAS YOUTH NEWS can be obtained from any SAS office, travel agent or from Dept. 22, Scandinavian Airlines/SAS Box 230, Jamaica, N.Y. 11431.

MALE ENROLLMENT IN COLLEGES DECLINING

(CPS)--The proportion of men attending colleges is down from the peak of the late 1960s according to a report issued by the Bureau of the Census.

The report showed that 38 percent of all 18- and 19-year old men are now going to college, compared with 44 percent in 1969. The enrollment rate of 20- and 21-year old men dropped from 45 percent to 36 percent in the same period.

The survey also shows that the rate of women entering colleges has either increased or remained stable.

Former student lectures

by kathie corn

Harold Sterling, reporter for the Wilmington STAR-NEWS, recently spoke to the journalism class on campus. Sterling, who has been on the STAR-NEWS staff for 18 months is a former student of the class.

Although he knew nothing about athletics, Mr. Sterling accepted his first position on the STAR-NEWS as a sports writer.

During his interview with the sports editor, he spouted out memorized terms from SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, and mentioned names like Johnny Unitas. He must have sounded convincing because he got the job.

Then he began the long process of learning the rules and players of the games. Sterling has since become quite an effective sports writer. Recently he has branched out to write features and film reviews as well as sports articles.

In a discussion with the class he talked about effective news writing. He stated that the most important information should be at the beginning of an article, "because many people don't read past the first two paragraphs anyway."

A familiar face on campus, Sterling attends classes here, when he isn't chasing down the story for the latest junior high basketball game. He is a senior, majoring in political science.

Ourt, Eaton, Whittington

Eaton wins first place honors

by robin starr

Prizes for the Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest were awarded March 22 in the Randall Library. Chancellor William N. Wagoner, who announced the winning entries, said, "One of the duties of a campus like this is to create..." The Short Story Contest, he implied, is one way of fulfilling that duty. The contest, sponsored annually by the Department of English, was open to all UNC-W students. From the 33 entries submitted, the judges, Mr. Joe Holman, Dr. Joanne Corbett, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall, chose six winning stories.

Winner of the $100 first place prize was Leigh Eaton for her story "Father's Campaign." Miss Eaton's story deals with humorous incidents about her hometown -- The Plains, Virginia. Leigh's father is on the town council and she has simply made gross exaggerations of events surrounding his position.

Fred Ourt won second place and $30 for "Waiting," the story of a professional killer who waits and takes his time in committing his murders. The killer finally understands himself and loses the self-confidence so essential in his profession.

Third place Honors were awarded to Louise Whittington. She received $20 for a Rock." The author tells of events from her life as a young girl.

Three honorable mentions were awarded: first, Fred Ourt for "The Prisoner," second, Ben Clayton for "Cleanse the Temple," and third, Michael Church for "If From the Public Way You Turn Your Steps."

The short story contest is in memory of the late Jessie Rehder, a native of Wilmington and head of the creative writing program at Chapel Hill. She was a novelist, poet, and short story writer. Miss Rehder is best known for her novel "Remembrance Way."

Funds for this year's contest were donated by members of the Rehder family -- three brothers of Miss Jessie Rehder and her cousin, Miss Marie Rehder Gerdes. Also contributing to the fund was Dr. Joanne Corbett, chairman of the UNC-W Department of English.

The reception for contestants and guests was provided by the North Carolina Junior Sorority.

Several of the winning stories will be published in the UNC-W literary magazine, The Atlantis, which will appear in late April.

Former student lectures

by kathie corn

Harold Sterling, reporter for the Wilmington STAR-NEWS, recently spoke to the journalism class on campus. Sterling, who has been on the STAR-NEWS staff for 18 months is a former student of the class.

Although he knew nothing about athletics, Mr. Sterling accepted his first position on the STAR-NEWS as a sports writer.

During his interview with the sports editor, he spouted out memorized terms from SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, and mentioned names like Johnny Unitas. He must have sounded convincing because he got the job.

Then he began the long process of learning the rules and players of the games. Sterling has since become quite an effective sports writer. Recently he has branched out to write features and film reviews as well as sports articles.

In a discussion with the class he talked about effective news writing. He stated that the most important information should be at the beginning of an article, "because many people don't read past the first two paragraphs anyway."

A familiar face on campus, Sterling attends classes here, when he isn't chasing down the story for the latest junior high basketball game. He is a senior, majoring in political science.

Eaton wins first place honors

by robin starr

Prizes for the Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest were awarded March 22 in the Randall Library. Chancellor William N. Wagoner, who announced the winning entries, said, "One of the duties of a campus like this is to create..." The Short Story Contest, he implied, is one way of fulfilling that duty. The contest, sponsored annually by the Department of English, was open to all UNC-W students. From the 33 entries submitted, the judges, Mr. Joe Holman, Dr. Joanne Corbett, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall, chose six winning stories.

Winner of the $100 first place prize was Leigh Eaton for her story "Father's Campaign." Miss Eaton's story deals with humorous incidents about her hometown -- The Plains, Virginia. Leigh's father is on the town council and she has simply made gross exaggerations of events surrounding his position.

Fred Ourt won second place and $30 for "Waiting," the story of a professional killer who waits and takes his time in committing his murders. The killer finally understands himself and loses the self-confidence so essential in his profession.

Third place Honors were awarded to Louise Whittington. She received $20 for a Rock." The author tells of events from her life as a young girl.

Three honorable mentions were awarded: first, Fred Ourt for "The Prisoner," second, Ben Clayton for "Cleanse the Temple," and third, Michael Church for "If From the Public Way You Turn Your Steps."

The short story contest is in memory of the late Jessie Rehder, a native of Wilmington and head of the creative writing program at Chapel Hill. She was a novelist, poet, and short story writer. Miss Rehder is best known for her novel "Remembrance Way."

Funds for this year's contest were donated by members of the Rehder family -- three brothers of Miss Jessie Rehder and her cousin, Miss Marie Rehder Gerdes. Also contributing to the fund was Dr. Joanne Corbett, chairman of the UNC-W Department of English.

The reception for contestants and guests was provided by the North Carolina Junior Sorosis.

Several of the winning stories will be published in the UNC-W literary magazine, The Atlantis, which will appear in late April.

'Hawaiian Holiday'

Time is running out for reservations for that exotic vacation in Hawaii, sponsored by the Alumni Association.

The round trip tour will leave from the Raleigh-Durham Airport June 16 and return June 23. Cost for the entire trip is only $390.

Special features of the trip include the traditional lei greeting upon arrival, a get-acquainted party at the hotel, and circle island tour.

The price includes round trip transportation between Raleigh-Durham and Honolulu, accommodations for eight days and seven nights at a deluxe Waikiki Beach Front hotel, transfers from the airport to the hotel and return, luggage handling (two pieces per person) and tips.

Deposit for the trip is $100. Address reservations to Dr. William M. Malloy, Director of Alumni Affairs, UNC-W. All checks should be made payable to UNC-W. Space is rapidly running out, and anyone interested in going with the tour should rush reservations to Dr. Malloy.

BS&T Concert

by jon greene

Advance sale tickets may be obtained by UNC-W students for $5 each for the April 4 Blood, Sweat, and Tears concert. Tickets will be $6 each at the door.

Blood, Sweat, and Tears, along with the Paul Butterfield Blues Band and Chicago, was the first of the large jazz-rock bands and is still one of the very best.

BS&T was founded in 1968 by two Blues Project alumni, Al Kooper and Steve Katz (neither of whom is in the band now). They were hailed by the critics as a highly innovative musical effort but were commercially unsuccessful. Al Kooper left the band after their first album, CHILD IS FATHER TO THE MAN.

Then David Clayton-Thomas, a Canadian blues singer, was brought in as lead singer. The group became highly successful in singles, albums, and concerts. Clayton-Thomas stayed with the band through three albums, and many feel, in the process, almost ruined the band. He thought he WAS BS&T, and this was just not true. When David left, it was to the mutual satisfaction of himself and the band.

Now comprising BS&T are Jerry Fisher, lead singer; Georg Wadensius, guitarist;

Jim Fielder, bass; Bobby Columby, drums; Larry Willis, keyboards; Tom Malore (formerly of the Mothers), Lew Soloff, Dave Bargeron, and Lou Marini, hornmen.

They have an excellent new album, NEW BLOOD, on Columbia Records, obtainable at McGrath's. The musicians in the band consider this to be the best edition of BS&T yet--there is more feeling, better musicianship, more freedom, and more group feeling. They are the happiest now with their music that they have ever been.

Meet Buffalo Bob

Now on a tour of the nation's college campuses and major cities, Buffalo Bob Smith, creator of the Howdy Doody Show, will appear at Kenan Auditorium, April 11 at 8 p.m.

Tickets for the April 11 show will be on sale next week. Student tickets are $2, with general admission for kids under twelve the same. General admission tickets are $2.50.

Buffalo Bob is the complete entertainer. A professional musician, singer and Master of Ceremonies, he left his native Buffalo, New York to go to New York City in 1946 to do the Morning Show for NBC radio. On the air from 6 a.m. until 9 a.m., he sang, played and talked himself into the highest rated morning show in the metropolitan area.

Suddenly he had a tiger by the tail with the Howdy Doody Show. From 1947 through 1960 the Howdy Doody Show enjoyed the reputation as THE greatest children's show of all times.

He was a national hero, a household word, a piper with such a magnetic personality that at 5:30 p.m., every day, children gave up their play and sat on the floor in front of their television screens and were transported into another world.

Bob went into semi-retirement in 1960. But for the man who played piano, accordion, drums, organ, guitar, ukulele, string bass, trumpet, clarinet, trombone, tuba and the slide whistle, this was a respite that could not last.

Johnny Got His Gun to show April 3

"Johnny Got His Gun," opening... at the... Theatre, is a depressing and shocking film, the story of a young soldier in World War I who survives a bomb blast with little more than his mind and trunk intact. A human freak, a medical experiment, Johnny tries desperately to communicate with his nurses via morse code, to show them that he still is a human being with a functioning, thinking, remembering brain.

Written over a generation ago (1938) when pacifism was anathema to the American left and most of the center, Dalton Trumbo's brutal indictment of war was published two days after the start of World War II. Ignored by the Establishment, the book became an underground classic over the years.

Despite the passage of time, the universality and timelessness of Trumbo's protest makes it stunningly relevant to today and makes the film a shattering demonstration that war doesn't change, that only the public's reception of it does.

"Johnny Got His Gun" stars Timothy Bottoms, and is rated GP.

JOHNNY GOT HIS GUN will be shown at 8 p.m. April 3 in Kenan Auditorium as part of the fine arts popular film series.

MAP aids creative students

The Multiple Abilities Program is being developed for the purpose of aiding in the education of students of outstanding creative potential. During the 1972-73 academic year the MAP supported about fifty student projects on the basis that involvement in research, creative writing, musical composition, or some other creative activity could contribute significantly to a student's creative development.

The support of student projects will continue, and students wishing to receive support for a project during the 1973-74 academic year should submit proposals to the Multiple Abilities Program, Office of Academic Affairs by July 1, 1973. Project support will ordinarily be limited to juniors and seniors. The proposals are expected to be student-developed with limited faculty assistance.

They should include a description of the proposed work and a budget itemizing the necessary supplies, computer time, travel, etc. The total budget must not exceed $500. The applicant should be sure to note his address(es), telephone number, and academic standing as of the fall semester, 1973; and he should indicate the faculty member who would act as his MAP project advisor.

Applicants who have not completed the Alpha Biographical Inventory should go to the MAP office and do so before July 1, 1973. The proposals will be evaluated by a special faculty committee. In addition to continuation of student project support, the MAP will initiate a fellows program for creative students. A small number of faculty members from different academic areas, designated by the Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, will devote a portion of their time to this aspect of the MAP.

They will select and work closely with the MAP fellows, guiding them to the varied resources of the university while seeking ways to expand these resources for the benefit of the creative student. Twenty freshmen will be selected by the MAP faculty at the beginning of the fall semester as MAP fellows.

The selection will be based on creative potential, as judged through the Alpha Biographical Inventory, administered during freshman orientation, and other information. These students will each receive full scholarships (tuition and fees).

The major responsibilities of the fellows will be to dedicate themselves to exploration of the unknown as well as the established and to aid in the well-being of other MAP fellows. Continuation in the program will be based on a yearly evaluation by the MAP faculty.

The MAP Faculty Advisory Committee will continue to advise the Office of Academic Affairs on MAP policy.

ADU

Alpha Delta Upsilon has added a new concrete basketball court to the DU house. Already the brothers have put many hours of playing time on it. Plans for the court were made 24 hours prior to construction. It is a good example of the DU Brotherhood in action.

ADU held its second formal Rush this past week. Rushes were contacted on a personal basis and invited to private parties at the DU house. This procedure for Rush was due to the efforts of Sam Swett, Rush Chairman for ADU. This has been undoubtedly one of the best rushes in the history of the fraternity. The rush consisted of a keg party on Thursday and a band party on Saturday night. The band was acquired from Raleigh by Vic Murray. The band called Calabash was excellent and will definitely be called on again to play.

Due to the greater numbers and complexity of the ADU Sisterhood, it has become necessary that they elect officers to conduct their business. Heading up the sisterhood as president will be Berilinda Hardee. Ann Morris will serve as Vice-President. Barbara Branch was selected as Secretary. Jackie Amerson was voted in as Treasurer. The ADU Brotherhood is very proud of their sisterhood, and all of them consider the sisterhood to be a select group of girls.

IFC

The Interfraternity Council is in the process of rewriting its constitution. This is largely due to the efforts of Sam Swett of ADU. IFC has undergone an unprecedented transformation this semester. Although the old rivalries between the fraternities still exist, they have weakened against a growing awareness that all the fraternities are first of all essentially greek in nature. As Marvin Ingram put it, "We're Greeks first, then we're TKEs." Attitudes like this will inevitably make IFC stronger than it has ever been in the past and will ultimately bring about an even stronger bond between the fraternities.

PI Kappa Phi

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity recently had their new elections of officers. They are as follows: Archon - Brad Walls; Treasurer - Mike Davis; Historian - Don Barwick; and Chaplain - Frank Moore.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity has purchased their new fraternity house. The Pi Kappas are extremely proud of it and believe that after the work on it is completed it will be the best fraternity house at UNC-W.

The Little Sisters of Pi Kappa Phi just completed their pledge period. Their new sisters are Rose Ann Taylor, Susan Snow, Cathy Tyer, Sylvia Griffin, Nancy McLean, Gale Blackham, Tinnis Etteson, Paula Boyd, Layne Lockme, Linda Spikes, and Jo Ellen Coulter.

The Sisterhood and Brotherhood of Pi Kappa Phi believes its fraternity to be a strong and prosperous one and as Mike Ravelli puts it "We hope to stay number one on campus."

TKE

Let us be the first to invite all students to Greek Day, Sunday, April 1.

On the TKE agenda is a weekend trip to Ocean Drive Beach. "Two houses are there waiting for us," stated

Vernon Powell, "but I doubt they'll be there when we leave."

TKE's new sweetheart is Linda Nussman. So if you see her, be sure and congratulate her!

BULLETIN BOARD

BUSINESS

On March 8 the Business Club elected officers for the 1973-1974 school year. They are as follows: Dennis Fullerton - President, James maides - Vice President, Nancy Pugh - Secretary, Woody Dayton - Treasurer. A steak cookout is planned Saturday April 14. Details for the cookout will be posted on the Business Club bulletin board.

UMS

The University Music Series is spearheading a drive to raise $5000 to trade in the old Balvin concert grand in Kenan Auditorium for a new Steinway. This piano and the new acoustical shell will be the sole property of the university and available by consignment for presentation occurring in the auditorium. Contributions may be made directly to New Piano Fund, UNC-W Wilmington.

FIDDLING

Tickets for OLD TIME FIDDLER'S CONVENTION at Union Grove, April 19-21, can be obtained by writing Box 38, Union Grove, N.C., 28689. Tickets for the three day event are $10 per person. A large crowd is expected so interested students and faculty should act soon. Camping facilities are available.

Outlaw steel-traps, says API

by mary margaret williams

Outlaw the steel-jaw leghold trap. This is the 1973 goal of API, Animal Protection Institute of America.

API contends that steel-jaw leghold traps, used for the capturing of wild fur-bearing animals, are torturous, barbaric mechanisms which account for millions of hideously painful animal deaths yearly. The rate of the torture of this trap is at nine thousand animals per year in the U.S. alone.

API has launched a massive publicity campaign to inform the public of the cruelties of trapping. Through advertisements in major newspapers and magazines over the entire country, the Institute has and continues to build public support against the use of these traps. Because of this extended campaign, some fifteen thousand persons know considerably more than they did last summer about the suffering these traps cause.

In conjunction with this country-wide campaign, a petition drive has been launched to show the widespread and the increasingly vocal sentiment against the use of the traps. The petition is addressed to the United States Congress. It has been recognized that action on the national level is an essential first step in publicizing the problem and coordinating an effective campaign.

The salutation asks that "the steel-jaw leghold trap and all the other cruel and indiscriminate traps used for the capture of fur-bearing wild animals be outlawed from any country which allows the capturing of wild animals in steel-jaw leghold traps."

According to API, laws, both state and national, banning the use of these traps are the only answer. Only a strong show of public concern can cause these much-needed laws to be enacted.

Last year a bill which would have declared it public policy of the United States to discourage use and manufacture of the traps was introduced in Congress. The bill died when Congress adjourned. It was not even heard in committee.

The new Congress convened in January. With a sizeable show of support, API hopes the steel-jaw leghold trap can at least be outlawed for commercial trapping on public lands.

There are six basic reasons for opposing steel-jaw leghold traps.

STEEL-JAW TRAPS SUBJECT ANIMALS TO INTENSE SUFFERING. The trap clamps shut, usually breaking the legbone of the animal that is caught. As the animal struggles to free itself, the jaws of the trap tear into the flesh, causing extreme fear and pain. The animal is held unless it chews off its paw and escapes fully conscious and denied food and water until the trapper returns.

TRAP LAWS ARE NOT ENFORCEABLE. Less than twenty-five states have laws requiring periodic checks of trap lines. Many states say trap lines must be checked every 24 to 48 hours, but other states require only a once a week check. In some areas of the country, severe weather conditions can prohibit the trapper's returning for days.

TRAPS ARE INDISCRIMINATE. This means that a set trap will spring shut on whatever happens to step into it—dog, cat, bird, human, or wild animal whose pelt is of no value to the trapper. This is an unjustifiable waste of animal life.

TRAPPERS HAVE MADE NO EFFORT TO REDUCE THE CRUELTY OF TRAPPING. The steel-jaw leg-hold trap has remained relatively unchanged in the U.S. since it was manufactured here in 1840. Other versions of the trap have been used throughout the world for nearly 300 years. An instant-kill trap was developed and marketed in 1958 by a Canadian trapper. Despite the fact that the instant-kill trap is available, 90 percent of the wild fur take in the U.S. each year is taken in steel-jaw leghold traps. The main reason is that these traps are readily available and cheap.

TRAPPING SUPPLIES FURS, A PRODUCT NOT NECESSARY TO MAN'S SURVIVAL. Our civilization has outgrown the era where we are dependent upon the skin of wild animals for clothing and warmth. Today, furs are a luxury item, appealing only to personal vanity.

TRAPPING DOES NOT CONTRIBUTE SIGNIFICANTLY TO DISEASE CONTROL IN WILD ANIMAL POPULATIONS. Trappers claim they help control wild animal diseases, such as rabies, by keeping down the animal populations. Naturalists have found that wild animals control their own population levels, usually in relation to the food available in their habitat.

Seahawks sign two cagers

College basketball has ended for this year's 1972-73 season, but for many people, such as coaches and their assistants, the '73-74 season has already begun.

Mel Gibson, head coach of the UNC-W Seahawks, has been out on the road since late February trying to recruit some of the many 'blue-chippers' from high schools and junior colleges all over the eastern part of the U.S., and now finally, it is starting to pay off.

UNC-W Seahawk basketball program signed two players to their team this past week and are hoping to get at least one or two more good sound prospects to sign with them shortly.

The two ball players that signed with the University of North Carolina at Wilmington on grant-in-aids are Ricky McKoy, a 6-5 native of Wilmington Hoggard, and Willie Jackson, a standout performer for Spartanburg Junior College in South Carolina.

Coach Gibson said that he thought that both of these boys would be a big asset to the team, and that Jackson should be able to give the Seahawks some help immediately.

Jackson, a native of Burgaw, averaged 19.9 points per game for Spartanburg JC in the Western Carolinas Junior College Conference and nine rebounds.

Jackson is 6-2 and plays at the forward or guard position on offense.

"We're extremely pleased Willie has decided on UNC-W," Gibson stated, "He's one of our top prospects and will definitely be a tremendous asset. He will give us the outside shooting that is effective in so many situations.

Jackson shot 53 percent from the floor this year, although most of his shots were from long range. He was a first team all-conference selection and also started in the Junior College all-star game at Ferrum, Va., recently.

McKoy, a senior at Hoggard High School this year, played the post position for the Vikings this past season, but will probably have to move to forward on the Seahawks' squad.

McKoy was one of the top rebounders in the state last year, pulling down almost 17 a game, while he averaged 15 points per contest.

"The most impressive thing about Ricky is his potential," Gibson emphasized. "He was a late developer and has outstanding potential.

"We are not looking for many players this year, but are hoping for a couple more real soon," Gibson commented. "We have a few holes to fill and are looking for top-caliber individuals that can help us on and off the basketball court."

Baseball off to hot start

UNC-W baseball team has gotten off to a red-hot start as they have whipped four straight district foes in mounting a 10-3 over-all season.

Head baseball coach Bill Brooks is very pleased with the season record so far, but isn't satisfied with the overall play of the Seahawks on defense this season.

Seahawks have made some costly errors and mental mistakes on defense. The Hawks have made on the average, about three errors per game, but have still been able to survive because of their strong offensive attack.

Pitching has been a bright spot for the Seahawk nine. The Hawks have received outstanding starting performances from Dave Sandlin, Harry Kincaid, and Duke Sanderson. Sandlin and Kincaid have 3 wins apiece against one loss apiece, while Sanderson's record now stands at 2-1. The only other pitcher with a won-loss record is Bill Warmack, who is 2-0 for the season.

The earn run average for the pitching staff is 1.05 as they have only given up 15 earned runs through 14 ball games, while the opponents have scored 23 unearned runs.

Offensively for the Seahawks, they have looked most impressive, scoring 88 runs, giving them an average of run scoring at a little better than six runs per game. The Hawks have clouted out 120 hits and their batting average is a smoking .280.

The Seahawks have two home games this weekend as they host Williams College, and then hit the road for next week playing four games away.

LEADING HAWKS.....

Dave Sandlin is leading the Seahawk hitting attack through 13 games hitting a sound .400. Sandlin is also leading the Seahawk in RBI's with 14, while he has collected a home run and three doubles.

Following Sandlin close behind, is Robert Pittman who is batting .340. Pittman also has three doubles and a home run to his credit. Bruce Cavenaugh is leading the Seahawks in runs scored with 15, and home runs with 2 through 13 ball games.

Fools play the game

From time to time, it has come to the attention of this sports writer that there are various members of this campus's student body and faculty that consider themselves to be experts at the illustrious "gad" of selecting the winners in both the professional and amateur athletics.

To be certain, no one person can be right 100 per cent of the time, and many will be lucky to break even, but still there is much time spent by this group converting over who will win or lose, and even determining the point-spreads of many of the games played in certain sports.

Reasons that are given for choosing a team or individual to win or lose vary from the obvious to the extreme. Some reasons can not be substantiated except for phrases like "they can't be beat" or, "they always win." This type of selecting is the obvious, and many people who choose like this are not basing their selections on fact.

However, there are the few who do take the time to look at record books and decide who will win the event or game by knowledgeable facts and figures. It is these few that probably will come out on the better end of the number wins as compared to losses, but no one can always count on it.

As the old saying goes, "fools play the game," and as it happens, this game of picking who wins or loses is definitely a fools game to play.

Yet, it is nice to select who one thinks or even hopes will win, and therefore, this sports writer has made his own dazzling and remarkable selections of who he thinks will carry away the honors for some of the more notable sports in the upcoming '73, '74 seasons.

Looking at the now scene and the far in the future scene, the best examples are the NATIONAL Basketball Association Playoffs and the NCAA Championship for its '73, '74 season.

Surprise! The NBA Champion will come from the east this year and will be either Atlanta or New York. After the teams of the west get finished bruising and battering each other up in their own championships, there should be little left of them to battle against the fitness Eastern power. The reason for the either-or in the Atlanta-

New York battle is because it may never happen, but one of these teams will be champ.

Another surprise, UCLA will not repeat as the NCAA champion for 1974! It is true that UCLA will harvest a better team next year than this year, but unfortunately all of college basketball will be improved. N. C. State, Kentucky, UCLA, and a Mid-western power will be the four teams in the NCAA finals. There will not be an undefeated team entering the NCAA finals unless UCLA does it, N.C. State and Kentucky will meet in the championship game with N.C. State getting the nod.

Moving on over to a less fast moving game, but equal in excitement, professional baseball will have a complete reversal this season as the Eastern division will send the teams to the World Series from both the National and American Leagues. The winners in the NL and AL east have not completely been sorted out, but it should be an extremely close race in both leagues with a Pittsburgh-New York Yankee World Series coming up from most preseason predictions. Oakland should take the AL west, and Cincinnati claim the NL west, but neither will go any farther.

Boxing has always been an interesting sport, and the World Heavyweight Championship will change hands in the coming year. George Foreman currently holds it, but unfortunately for Foreman, Joe Frazier, Mohammed Ali, and a possibility of Jerry Quarry are waiting in the wings. Whoever comes out of this battle standing up will be the true champion.

Miami Dolphins will not have quite as good a season this year as last in the National Football League, but should play well enough to win the Super Bowl VII. Miami will receive strong battles from Pittsburgh, New York Jets, and Oakland in the American Conference, however this should not weather their strength. Green Bay, Los Angeles, Minnesota, and Dallas will be too busy trying to find a winning combination in the National Conference to worry about Miami, and therefore, will offer little competition.

College football will be much more well-balanced this coming season, making it extremely hard to find a national champion. There will not be any undefeated teams at the end of this season, unless N.C. State can survive there game with the UNC Tar Heels and there bowl bid. Southern California will make a return trip to the Rose Bowl, but will not win it, because they will be playing either Michigan or Purdue. Florida will greet someone in the Orange Bowl which will more than likely be Notre Dame. Texas will play Alabama in a Cotton Bowl replay, while Oklahoma must face N. C. State.

Medford, Mass. -(I.P.)-The editorial staff of the "Tufts University Observer" has voted to refuse advertising space to termpaper sales companies. Editor-in-Chief Larry Tell said of the ban: "The staff doesn't feel it was wise to contribute to an unhealthy academic situation."

Tell called the Observer's staff decision a moral one, noting, however, that the termpaper ads only amounted to $100 in revenue per year. Dean of Students James Steindler has banned solicitation by termpaper companies on the campus.

Jocks roar to championship

After two 'close-calls' in the Quarter and Semi-final games, the Jocks roared past the Cup Jocks 64-49 in the finals of the National UNC-W Intramural Basketball Tournament.

The Jocks, who were tied for first place in the Gold League with the Ballers, led all the way and were only threatened by the Cup Jocks at one point when the Cup Jocks pulled to within four points of the Jocks in the later stages of the ball game.

"It was the best ball game that we've played all year as a team," declared first year player-coach Butch McDaniel after the game. "There wasn't any one player that would stand out. We just played real good sound basketball."

As far as the strategy of the game went, McDaniel was very explicit and said that the Jocks went in the game with the game plan of controlling the tempo and not letting the Cup Jocks run their fast break.

"On defense, we knew that Perry (Dobson) was going to score his points for the Cup Jocks, but we felt that if we shut off the rest of the Cup Jocks that Perry couldn't beat us by himself," McDaniel stated after the most heated and tension-packed contest.

Led by MVP of the tourney, Bill Warmack, the Jocks opened the ball game up with 10 straight points before the Cup Jocks could even scratch with Warmack scoring 8 of these points.

From this point, the Jocks held onto an 8 or 10 point lead for the rest of the first half, having a 10 point lead at intermission of 33-23.

As the second half opened, it didn't look as though there was much the Cup J's could do. The Jocks pushed out to their biggest lead of the game of 13 points at 47-34 and were completely dominating every phase of the game.

However, the Cup Jocks began to rally and pulled to within four points of the Jocks at 51-47 with 2:50 remaining but could get no closer as the Jocks began to pull away again and outscored the Cup J's 13 to 2 in the final two and half minutes of the game to make the score 64-49.

Despite a valiant effort on the part of Perry 'The Pearl' Dobson who scored 37 points in the final of the season, the Cup Jocks just didn't have the horses, and couldn't ever get anything started.

The Cup Jocks were extremely cold from the floor as well as the foul line, hitting a mere 38 per cent of their field goals.

Jocks, on the otherhand, hit a much better percentage of their two pointers with 50 per cent. The Jocks also outrebounded the much taller Cup Jocks.

The Jocks placed four men in the two figure category with Warmack leading the way getting 20 points while Joe Miller and Bruce Cavanaugh tallied 11 a piece. Keith O'Berry had 10 points for the Jocks.

All of the other Jocks scored also; McDaniel had 6 points, Bill Hutchinson had 4 and Tommy Davis had two to assist the winning cause.

Dobson was the only Cup Jock to finish with double figures, while Bob Becher finished with seven points and Robert Bo Pittman had three to end the Cup Jock scoring.

For the Jocks, this marked their 18th win of the season and gave them the right to the honor of being named the Champions of the 1972-73 Intramural Basketball season.

The tournament as a whole was a super-spectacular and promises to be better than that next year.

All tourney-MVP selected

Although the Intramural Basketball tournament has ended, many of the memories of the outstanding players will live on toward the end of time.

Being named to all-tournament team is a great honor and these men that are on the first five and second five are all great basketball players.

The championship team, the Jocks, led the way for the all tournament selections placing four men on it, while the Studs placed two on the all-tourney team. The Ballers, Triple 'A's, Cup Jocks, and Engineers placed one each on the all-tourney selections.

Need for Wilderness Areas

by mary margaret williams

There is an urgent need for Wilderness Areas in the Eastern part of the U.S. Because of the ratio of population to land area, few undisturbed places are left.

A Wilderness Area is land, much like a national forest, set aside by the government in order to preserve its natural conditions. No hunting, trapping, or commercial industries such as timber corporations are allowed.

For an area to be designated as a Wilderness, Congress must pass the appropriate bill, the Eastern Omnibus Wilderness Bill is such a bill. Its purpose is to have twenty-eight places in the Eastern U. S. named as Wilderness Areas.

Two of the areas included in this Bill are in Georgia, North Carolina, and Tennessee.

The UNC-W Biology Club is circulating a petition supporting the passage of the Eastern Omnibus Wilderness Bill. Public support is greatly needed if this bill is to pass.

Passage of the Eastern Omnibus Wilderness Bill will be a start in preventing the destruction of other wilderness areas like Linville Gorge. Public support is part of the answer. This Bill is where the rescue can begin.

Bob

One day he received a call from the students at The University of Pennsylvania asking if he would be interested in performing for them. Practically all their shows consisted of either rock groups, controversial speakers, or movies and they wanted to do something different. They desired to relive their "happy care-free childhood days" and have a Howdy Doody Revival. The response was overwhelming and as Bob said, "I never had such a reception in 30 years of showbusiness." That first show has now been revised and updated into a complete two hour fun filled experience that is currently being enjoyed by thousands of his "Peanut Gallery" fans all over the nation.

In his skilfully delineated show, Bob Smith recalls the good old days with Clarabell the Clown, the Flubadub, Mr. Phineas T. Bluster and Dilly Dally.

A highlight of the tow-hour show is a film of the Tenth Anniversary of the Howdy Doody Show which features every member of the Doodyville gang and brings the audience back to the days when they sat on their living room floors and watched their childhood hero, Buffalo Bob. After the film, pandemonium breaks loose as Buffalo Bob enters the stage.

The rest of the show is like a big house party... Buffalo Bob leading the gang in the famous Howdy Doody songs, audience participation stunts, behind the scene "Howdy Doody Don'ts", and a question and answer session with his grown-up "Peanut Gallery."

When he appeared at Fillmore East, New York City's swinging rock emporium, a news report following the performance said, "It was unbelievable to see the youth of today on their feet clapping, singing and knocking the walls down with honest to goodness laughter and joy."

After the appearance at the University of Miami, a news critic said "When Smith came onstage, the audience went ecstatic and gave him a standing ovation. His performance was more successful than any other speaker or entertainer in the past, and students stayed after the show for an hour to talk with him and get his autograph."

At another university, chairs were pushed aside and the young people rolled away two decades by sitting on the floor to enjoy the show as they did when they were children watching their own television sets.

One college administrator remarked, "I wouldn't have believed it, I guess there is something about Buffalo Bob and the songs that struck a deep old well-remembered chord with them. Howdy Doody symbolized a time of great happiness in the lives of most of the students and they are reaching out for it again."

The St. Louis Post Dispatch reported: Buffalo Bob's return to show business has been responsible for an entire new industry. Manufacturers are busy turning out Buffalo Bob and Howdy Doody records, sweaters, tee-shirts, buttons, watches, posters and dozens of other products."

FEAR IS THE KEY

James Bond with a twist

by spence focusue

Allstair McLean has something Ian Fleming never had.-- A touch of realism. For a spy- good- guy- adventure story, FEAR IS THE KEY is like standing at your door and watching the whole thing happen in your yard.

James Bond never seems like an ordinary cop with a busted nose and a penchant for getting beaten up. Barry Newman comes across as a realistic loser whose motive for crime fighting is not God, country and Her Majesty the Queen, but a new twist, revenge.

However, Newman does manage to go through his quota of fast cars and smart cracks at the underworld heavies. But the bad guys help give Newman his image. They are genuine-- frightened and businesslike.

The first third of the film is devoted to grabbing your attention with something Barry Newman does best - a chase scene - in fact, an almost endless chase scene. Then comes the middle of the film, when the unbelievable, but imaginative plot confuses and baffles you to the point of leaving for popcorn. Never mind the growling stomach; you can get popcorn at home-- to understand this film you have to see it all. Okay, you've made it through to the last third of the movie. Now watch as Newman reads his lines with even less enthusiasm and wisely lets the action take over for an exciting finish. Allstair McLean's love for machines and underwater scenes disregard the actors-- but all is forgiven. Too many adventure films tend to be ruined by overacting and a weak story line. Leave the great acting to the accomplished actors, Barry Newman seems to say and I'll give the viewers what they came for. He does it, with a cool head for energetic action and an ending that will leave you breathless in more ways than one.

UNC-W unique with its UMS

There isn't another university in the country regardless of size which has a music series of comparable quality which the students may attend free of charge simply by displaying their ID card.

Through a rather unique arrangement the contribution of approximately one-third of the budget of the University Music Series from the student legislature is matched by monies raised from patron donations and ticket sales to make this possible. The number and quality of the attractions has increased during the three years of its existence and UNC-W students have been treated to many "lighter" concerts as well as more classical musical fare.

Tommy, the rock opera made popular several years ago by the Guess Who, will highlight next years series. Although it is a very high budget attraction and may not appeal to many of the community subscribers, it will open the series next November.

Another attraction chosen particularly for the students is the celebrated Spanish classical guitarist, Narsisco Yepes. His recordings on Deutsche Grammaphone are international best-sellers.

Peter Serkin, son of the famous Rudolph Serkin, will also appear with a group of his friends later in the year. Although only 25 years old, he has been around a long time and has a particularly close relationship with his peers. An admitted drug experimenter, he has left his career and retreated to Mexico and other places around the world seeking further self identity as the youngest of the very famous musical family.

Another 25 year old pianist, Murray Perahia, recent winner of the Leeds International Competition will also appear during the year. The series will be rounded out by the youngest string quartet on the international scene, the Cleveland String Quartet. If arrangements can be made to share the expenses with the local arts council, the Rochester Philharmonic or the Piedmont Orchestra will also be presented.

Pooh special to air Thursday

by marian koch

"Winnie the Pooh and the Honey Tree" will be shown once again for the young at heart. April 4, at 8 p.m., on Channel 6, is air time.

This program is an animated Walt Disney production of A. A. Milner's classic children's tales. It was first broadcast in the spring of 1970. Last December "Winnie the Pooh and the Blustery Day" was telecast. This program was also an animated Walt Disney production.

The plot of "Winnie the Pooh and the Honey Tree" is taken from several of A. A. Milner's tales. In the program, Pooh encounters several bees while in pursuit of honey. Attempting to outwit them, he pretends he is a "little black rain cloud." He covers himself with mud and floats to the treetops on a balloon.

Pooh is still defeated by the bees and decides to visit his friend, Rabbit, for advice. Rabbit is very sympathetic with Pooh and lets Pooh eat up all of his honey. The bear is satisfied, but learns a lesson from the tug-of-war resulting from his consumption of honey.

The other characters are Eeyore, the doleful donkey; Owl, the wise one; Christopher Robin, the young boy; Kanga and Roo, the mother and little one; Rabbit and Gopher.

Ernest Shepard's sketches in the Pooh books greatly boosted their popularity. Walt Disney's animators have adopted Shepard's style in their creation of this program.

An enormous amount of time and talent went into the production of this half hour special. Some 200 artists used 1.2 million pencils in making almost 100,000 final drawings of the characters.

To color the characters, background, and other effects on all of the celluloid sketches, 423 gallons of paint were used. This amount is enough to paint the outsides of 100 average-size homes.

Over the two-year span taken to create the program, 1.3 million dollars were spent. These are outstanding statistics for a show of this type.

THE RIGHT TO SAY NO book review

THE RIGHT TO SAY NO by Judith Todd tells for the first time the truth behind Rhodesia's anti-colonial struggle. THE RIGHT TO SAY NO is not only the story of these times, but also an indictment of the policy of appeasement Great Britain had toward Rhodesia; the culmination of which were the Settlement Proposals -- massively rejected by the Africans -- under which all power was to be left in the hands of the illegal Ian Smith regime.

Judith Todd, the twenty-nine-year old daughter of the former Rhodesian Prime Minister, Garfield Todd, reveals not only life under the Smith regime, but also the details of the proposals worked out by Britain and the team of negotiators led by Lord Goodman with Ian Smith, and without the participation of the African majority. She also criticizes the U.S. Government's decision to continue the importation of Rhodesian chrome despite a United Nations embargo on trade with Rhodesia.

This personal account of the imprisonment of Judith Todd and her father for five weeks, without trial and without having been accused of any crime, is also the story of a country's struggle for freedom and sane government.

Judith Todd now lives in London, where her book is on the best seller list. She continues her battle against the current Rhodesian regime that still has her father under house arrest. Because of her stand for the people she was recently appointed delegate to the United Nations for the African National Congress.

A fire in the Delta Upsilon fraternity house at 4525 Market Street caused extensive damage early Thursday morning as cheering crowds.

The blaze gutted a large room in the front of the first floor, caused heavy smoke and heat damage to the entire floor, and resulted in water damage throughout the house.

Two frat brothers were slightly injured. Police reported that Danny Marlowe and Dennis Williams were treated for smoke inhalation and then released, at which time they were cautioned that cigarette smoking could be dangerous to their health.

The fire apparently broke out sometime around 1 a.m.

Monday and was discovered by David Smith who attempted to blow it out. He rang the fire alarm, believing it would notify the fire department, however, the house manager Mark

Ayers had removed a fuse which apparently caused the fire alarm not to function. When querted as to his actions he replied that he was attempting to prevent Sam Sweet from playing foosball in the game room after the 12:30 curfew.

The delayed report to the fire department resulted in the fire getting a good start on the fire fighters who arrived much too late to save the house. Reports indicated that David Hunt and Sean Green were saved by climbing out on the roof and then to safety. Other heroic actions were accomplished by Ann Morris who carried Corky Hankerwich out of the blazing inferno.

There were a number of people in the house at the time of the blaze attending the usual Thursday night party. All the people escaped unharmed. Seven brothers usually sleep in the room that was completely destroyed. One of these brothers

He was informed of the blaze the next day.

Although the flames remained in the front room, the intense heat melted the telephone out of the hands of Carlos Brumett who was reluctant to end his conversation with his girl friend.

Luckily the damage was covered by insurance which delighted the owner. All in all it proved to be an extremely successful fire with much damage but Mark Ayers has arranged for a schedule to get things cleaned up this week.

Chicken Little Comedy Hour set next week

CHICKEN LITTLE WAS RIGHT!

And now we can see right about what. "Chicken Little Comedy Hour" will be presented next week on campus.

The hour is a non-commercial production that will be shown through video tape equipment. This closed circuit entertainment has received excellent reception in colleges nationwide.

"The programs are being displayed as regularly as possible (through the Video Tape Network or VTN)," states the National Entertainment Conference newsletter, "and student activity departments are receiving congratulatory kudos as well as envious 'I wish we had thought of that' kind of sentiments from audio-visual and other media connected departments.

"Chicken Little," a spoof, will be shown in the Pub daily April 10-13, and nightly for those dates in the dormitory. Students viewing the program will be asked to complete a questionnaire gauging their reactions not only to the program, but to the concept of VTN.

If student interest warrants it, "We might think of going into VTN for next year," according to Ms. Linda Moore, Director of Student Activities.

VTN has become a big thing on a number of campuses. West Chester State College in Pennsylvania is one of these. A five member student committee there video taped a student government meeting and played it the next day for a general student audience who were appalled at what was apparently a lack of organization at the meeting. The next SG meeting taped by the Video Committee was conducted differently.

VTN has a lot of possibilities. What remains is to try it.

THE GETAWAY...

Surrealistic

by spence focuse

Sam Peckinpah's surrealistic approach to movie violence should shock even the hardest and strongest of the madding crowd of filmgoers. Surely, his extra-realistic death scenes will incite some brutal feelings among the viewers, if not sprinklings of nausea at the sight.

If anything, THE GETAWAY is consistent. Peckinpah's scenes of violence all contain the same camera angle and film speed, if only for a few seconds, to add even more realism and long-term goriness. Perhaps this is the way it should be or it is simply a way to prolong the movie.

The consistency also finds its way through to the actors, particularly Steve McQueen's laser-like portrayal of an unlucky bank robber. All McGraw, his high fashion gun moll, is consistently beautiful and unmoving. There is not the slightest bit of personality in either. Even though Bonnie and Clyde were cold-blooded killers, at least they killed with feeling.

This consistency makes the violence seem more sickening. Even the act of shooting a police car by McQueen (who does it with the same wet bag feeling as before) is filmed in slow motion, compounding the violence of the act.

THE GETAWAY not only contains the mandatory chase scene required by all contemporary action films; it is a chase scene. McQueen and McGraw wind their way through Texas via car, train and Dempsey Dumpster to an unforgettable scene in a garbage dump and a shoot out in a sleazy hotel. Along the way they encounter nearly every major character actor Hollywood has to offer, a valiant act by the movie makers in bringing life to an overworked plot.

Peckinpah has proven himself an artist at conveying roughness. The actual plot and theme of THE GETAWAY are second in importance. If there is a place for Peckinpah's surrealistic violence, then this is it. When THE GETAWAY is over you are glad that it's over but you are glad that you made it through it.

as APO President Rick Deasy, left, looks on, Dr. William Mailloy, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, draws the name of the winner of the stereo tape play-

Walk-A-Thon

Was it the rain which kept UNC-W students from participating in the March of Dimes Walk-a-thon? We may never know for sure, but Jay Howard of WGNJ joked over the radio that after all "UNC-W students were too intelligent to walk in the rain." This may be true; however, we salute the UNC-W students who did participate. Although soaking wet, they managed to raise several hundred dollars for their efforts.

The rain confused many of the walkers as well as those supervising the walk-a-thon. Many walkers arrived at checkpoints before the checkers did and the walk-a-thon became a race-a-thon for some. But despite all of its apparent awkwardness, the walk-a-thon was successful.

C.S. Crawford, reporter for the Wilmington STAR NEWS, recently spoke to the journalism class about his experiences as a news writer.

Crawford was very enthusiastic concerning his work. "I can go out and do my thing, and get paid for doing it. That's a real bonus."

Most of Crawford's writing is done on matters in the ten counties surrounding New Hanover, with his concentration on Camp LeJeune.

Crawford strongly felt that an important job of a news writer is to report waste. "It interests everyone who pays taxes because the money comes out of their pockets."

The biggest news story in the country today, according to Crawford is the return of the prisoners of war. The STAR NEWS recently published his story concerning the return of Barry Bridger, a POW for six years, to Bladenboro.

Crawford feels that the POW's are, "ambassadors of patriotism," who have come to a country that needs them badly. "They're uniting the nation with their words."

Crawford attends classes at UNC-W and has placed in several writing contests. He is currently working on a non-fiction novel.

NBC presents 'Wizard of Oz'

Wizard of Oz.

Other characters in the program, are Glenda the Good Witch, the Wicked Witch, Uncle Henry, Aunt Em, Nikko, and the Munchkins of Oz.

The opening scenes in "The Wizard of Oz" depict the farm on which Dorothy lives in black and white. On the farm she leads a dull, uneventful life. As she is ushered into the Land of Oz, the film switches to color. Oz is a land of magic and enchantment. This color change depicts the difference between the two worlds which Dorothy experiences.

In her travels Dorothy visits a city with large green bubbles which serve as houses. She sees a forest whose trees reach out their branches as if they were human arms and fantastic fields of giant flowers that move like humans.

"The Wizard of Oz" features a musical score which includes "Over the Rainbow," "We're Off to See the Wizard," "If I Only Had a Brain, the Nerve, a Heart," "Ding, Dong the Witch is Dead," and many others.

From this musical score comes, "Over the Rainbow," the Oscar-winning Best Song of 1939. An Oscar was also given to Judy Garland for her performance in this film. She was seventeen at the time and never received another Oscar.

The Multiple Abilities Program is assisting Dale in his pursuit of knowledge by allowing him to do independent study.

Dale explained his project, which is entitled "Beta Oxidation of Enamines," "An enamine is an organic chemical compound consisting of a nitrogen atom adjacent to a pair of carbon atoms which are connected by a double bond. B-Oxidation of the enamine involves breaking the double bond and placing an oxygen atom on the second carbon from the nitrogen. The free pair of electrons on the nitrogen atom facilitates the oxidation."

He also added, "I enjoy laboratory work. It helps me to learn about living matter and how it operates."

Dr. Ned Martin, Dale's MAP advisor and chemistry professor, said, "For a freshman, Dale has an unusual ability to comprehend concepts generally not introduced until junior level. If this ability and his creative energy can be applied jointly to a meaningful project, the goal of MAP will be meant for him."

Dale plans to obtain a Ph. D. in chemistry. He likes hard - rock music and is interested in a navy career,

Off-campus study keeps William Gorges involved

Have you ever wondered what the guy or girl next to you in class does after hours? There is more to a UNC-W student than just the classroom image.

William Gorges, a sophomore from Morehead City, is a UNC-W student with an after-class involvement, volunteer social work. He works with the New Hanover County Juvenile Services Center as part of a Criminology course project. Gathering personal information on the juveniles which are brought to the center is his job.

The New Hanover County Juvenile Services Center is a midway point for the juvenile between the time he is picked up and the courtroom. When the juvenile is picked up, he spends time at the Center, located near Castle Hayne, before appearing in the courtroom. It is a period of cooling off and of getting things together.

Background material is needed on the juvenile before he enters court. This personal information helps in understanding the young person's home life, past experiences, problems, and personality.

At this point, William Gorges becomes involved. He is notified when a juvenile from either New Hanover or Hoggard High School (his specific areas) is brought to the Center.

By talking with the guidance counselor, the principal and by going through the young person's school records, he is able to compile background material on the person.

He does not talk with the juvenile. Lack of cooperation at the schools often makes the job more difficult than it sounds.

This personal information is given to the Center which in turn informs the judge of the problems involved with this specific case. It would be unfair to pass judgement on a case without understanding what this young person has been through. That is the purpose of the stop at the Center - understanding the complete situation.

Williams, reluctant to talk about himself and his work, is very modest. After working with the Center for over a month, he claims that he is not really involved. He says that he does not actually do anything. These statements seem overly modest because the information that Williams returns to the Center is of importance.

RE-VOTE?

actually, however, the runoff was held the following day.

From what THE SEAHAWK can ascertain, several people were concerned that not all students who wished to vote could do so—most notably, those who have no classes on Tuesday-Thursday.

Keith Hales, who won the position of SGA Vice President, stated to a Seahawk reporter that he would support the move calling for a re-vote. Irregularity in the voting schedule was cited by Hales as the reason for his objection. He also commented that the fact that he himself was elected by "five percent of the student body" caused him much concern, and he stated that the election should have been marked by a much higher percentage of students voting.

English Club forms

A charter for UNC-W's newly formed English Club was drawn up in April 1 by Erich Parker and Judy Jordan. April 3 the first meeting was held.

As stated in the charter, "the purpose of this organization shall be to promote the intellectual and cultural development of its members by affording them an opportunity to enjoy fellowship and to exchange ideas pertaining to literature."

After a short business session, each meeting will be devoted to a program that will focus on some literary topic.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. in Kenan Hall, Room 201. It will feature Rudolph Valentino's silent film, SON OF THE SHIEK. refreshments will be served and next year's officers will be elected. All interested students are invited to attend.

Dr. Joanne Corbett and Dr. James Collier will serve the club as advisors. Erich Parker is acting president.

Students interested in the positions of editor of the Seahawk and the Fledgling should submit letters of application to the Student Affairs office no later than Friday, April 13.

These will be brought before the Student Affairs Committee in a meeting after Easter vacation.

Sunday, April Fool's Day, many people may have enjoyed playing tricks on one another; however, those who attended the Greek Day festivities at the pub simply had a great time. Even though the rain eliminated the scheduled field events, the indoor activities took place.

First on the agenda was the traditional Basketball Championship between the social fraternities. An anxious crowd watched on as the Tau Kappa Epsilon and Pi Kappa fraternities battled it out for the IFC basketball trophy. Pi Kappa Phi had thus far been undefeated in tournament play. Both teams showed outstanding sportsmanship and exhibited excellent basketball skills, but the edge went to TKE in the final few seconds of the game. All of the players worked hard and with great determination, but few played as well and with such vigor as Marvin Ingram who has set a new IFC record for fouling out of every tournament game. Alpha Delta Upsilon, who had been eliminated with some difficulty earlier from the tournament split up and cheered equally well for both teams.

After the game the Greeks and their guests went to the pub where there was free beer and hot dogs available. Much of the time between the basketball game and the dance which started at 8 p.m. was spent in small conversations between the Greeks and other UNC-W students. As was said in earlier articles Greek Day was sponsored and paid for by the social fraternities on campus. Through gestures such as this they hope to remove some of the anti-fraternity feelings that have erupted on campus recently.

Evidence of the Greek Days success was indicated by the attendance at the dance later that night. Fraternity and non-fraternity students enjoyed the unique music of the newly organized band, "Lush." The band attracted a large crowd of students and added the final touch to the activities of Greek Day.

Tranquility returns to headline show

by jon green

Tranquility and Goose Creek Symphony will appear in concert in Hanover Hall on April 23. Student tickets will be $2.50 and will be on sale Apr. 16-18 and 25-26.

Both of these bands have been here before. Tranquility in March and Goose Creek in September of 1971. Both received excellent audience reaction. This will be the last concert of the year.

Goose Creek, Capitol recording artists, play a unique blend of rock'n'roll and bluegrass music. Their performance features original tunes, old bluegrass favorites, and perhaps their biggest hit, the Janis Joplin song "Mercedes Benz."

They play acoustic and electric guitars, bass, drums and twin fiddles. Goose Creek's band is "good" for listening and dancing.

Tranquility, Epic recording artists, will be the headline act this time. They were very well received the last time they played here. In fact, every Tranquility album in town was sold within a day of the performance.

One of the highlights of their performance is the song "Dear Oh Dear" in which Terry Shaddick, lead singer, dons a straw hat and broom and takes you back to the old music hall days. Tranquility has fine original compositions, excellent musicianship, and the most beautiful harmonies in rock'n'roll.

UBU spelled backwards is UBU

by lewis musser

Alfred Jarry had a great disdain for places as institutionalized and structured as this University. He would have denounced it all with a big "shlttr."

This brings us to the question--is UNC-W ready for UBU ROI?

Hopefully so, for this play will be presented April 15, 16, and 17 in the SRO Theatre as a student production.

First performed in Paris in 1896, UBU ROI has run the critical gamut. It has been the subject of scornful ridicule as well as immaculate praise, with many critics placing Jarry on the same level as Shakespeare.

The play concerns the exploits and adventures of Monsieur Pere Ubu and his attempts to develop a stranglehold on helpless, hapless Poland.

It encompasses such varied themes as the absurdity of war, the greed and narrowmindedness of hierarchy, the pointlessness of power struggles. Each and every character involved distinguishes himself ultimately as an ass.

Absurdity is this play's by-word, yet the interjected wit is as profound as it is piercing.

It is this writer's feeling that the production of UBU may be most enjoyable when viewed in a celestial state.

A cast of thousands has been working profusely for untold weeks under the stern guidance and untiring supervision of Neil Bell, director.

A splendid time is guaranteed for all.

So, friends and compatriots, don't delay--reserve yourself a seat today. Call 792-1333, ext. 337 and be assured of seeing UBU ROI performed, and so Fledgling wings clipped?

by brenda knowles

Anyone desiring a view of apathy on the UNC-W campus should visit the FLEDGLING office in the pub. The office, unlike the expected center of rushed activity, is manned by only one person-Jack Paul, editor.

If the yearbook does not turn out to be what is expected, the fault lies entirely with the student body. Earlier in the year, the Seahawk carried a plea for help on the FLEDGLING staff. The plea went unanswered.

Jack Paul spends over 60 hours weekly planning and producing the yearbook. He has been helped only with a small amount of typing. The rest has been done by Paul, sometimes causing him to work late into the night.

The editor stated that this could be the last publication of FLEDGLING. There is too much work for one person to try to cover. The 1974 editor must be approved by Paul who says there have been no applications thus far.

Scholarships are available for the editor, business manager, and photographer. Interested persons should contact either Jack Paul or Gwen Croom, faculty advisor.

Apathy does not end with lack of interest in actual publication. Of the 2800 students enrolled during the fall semester, only 600 had pictures taken for the annual-- a mere 28%!

Paul is attempting to produce a $20,000 yearbook on a $10,000 allotment to yearbook publication. By determined hard work and economized production, he hopes to have a good book on the limited budget.

"It may not be the best yearbook they've ever seen, but they will remember it. It will be the best yearbook ever from UNC-W." The editor very clearly voiced his opinion about the publication when he made this statement.

The 1973 FLEDGLING will be out in mid-August. Covering one full year, it will include activities through graduation and possibly some summer school.

Paul took a survey of 15% of the student body to question student reaction to full-year coverage. 75% desired an August release rather than the traditional May release.

The theme will be something with which everyone can identify, although Paul would not reveal details.

The cover will be an abstract painting of the campus. It could be that the colors--shocking pink, bright purple, pea green, and sunshine yellow-- will be a signal for apathetic students to wake up.

Notice to all graduating seniors and to any students that do not plan to return to UNC-W in the fall of 73:

To receive a yearbook you must submit a request in writing to the Fledgling Yearbook to receive a yearbook and the address that you would like to have it mailed. This request must be received prior to May 1, 1973.

Notice to all students that have attended UNC-W for only one semester, to be eligible for a yearbook you must submit a written request for the book along with a check for five dollars made payable to UNC-W (cash or money order). Yearbooks are free to students that have been full time for both the fall of 1972 and spring of 1973. This request must be received prior to May 1, 1973.

'Play Misty' plays tonight

PLAY 'MISTY' FOR ME will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight in Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium.

The most popular disc jockey in the Monterey-Carmel area of California, Dave Garland (Clint Eastwood) finds himself at loose ends when his girl, Tobie Williams (Donna Mills) leaves, so he is an easy pick-up at the Sardine Factory, a bar he frequents and mentions often on his show. Among the numerous telephone requests he receives while on the air, one feminine voice constantly asks that he "Play 'Misty' for me." That girl is Evelyn Draper (Jessica Walter) and this night she finds him at the bar, and suggests a night together with no strings that will not hurt either of them. Dave agrees.

It is not that simple. Soon Evelyn is dropping in on Dave, not only making a pest of herself, but causing him a great deal of inconvenience. When Tobie returns to town and Dave resumes his courtship, Evelyn, in a paranoid fit, knifes Birdie (Clarice Taylor), the cleaning woman, almost killing her, and cuts to shreds every piece of clothing, drapes and furniture in the house. Dave returns to find the police, led by Sgt. McCallum (John Larch), all over the place and ambulance attendants wheeling out a stretcher carrying a very bloody, cut-up Birdie. Evelyn is taken to a sanitarium.

Sometime later, Evelyn calls Dave to say she's cured and en route to Hawaii, and will he play "Misty" for old times sake. Dave obliges. Later that night, Dave awakens in his bedroom to the music of "Misty" being played on his phonograph, just in time to avoid being stabbed in the dark by a crazed Evelyn who escapes.

Even though he's puzzled and worried, Dave goes on the air with his regular show the next night, but when he talks to Tobie, and learns that she has a new roommate, Dave puts on a taped show and rushes to Tobie's house and into a thrill-packed, suspense-filled conclusion.

'Open House' seeks help

Volunteers for "Open House", a 24-hour face-to-face emergency help center, will begin a five-week training period Tuesday, April 24, from 7-9 p.m.

Volunteers must be 18 years of age or older, must be willing to work a minimum of 8 hours a week, and must sign a confidentiality statement. Interested persons may fill out applications available in the Counseling and Testing Center or in the office of Director of Student Activities Linda Moore.

"We need lots of young volunteers," stated Flo Stein, one of the organizers of the project. She has received help from a committee of UNC-W students including, Ron Blanchard, Worth Bolton, Doug Cole, Rick Formaini, Jean Green and Ron Hood, and from Dr. Darwin Newton, head of the Counseling and Testing Center.

The house will serve as a community crisis intervention center and will also offer informal counseling, referral, education and alternative activities for youth.

There will be no need for an appointment, as clients may walk into the facilities at 610 Market Street at any time. The open house in Raleigh was used as a model by the steering committee for the house here. The house is backed by professional consultants (doctors, lawyers, etc.) who have volunteered to give their services to the program and to individual clients.

But to get the house set up (and they wish to open June 1), according to Ms. Stein, a number of volunteers are needed immediately. Applications may be obtained from the Counseling and Testing Center or the Director of Student Activities office in the Pub.

Christian Crusade plans weekend training program

A campus Crusade for Christ developmental team will train laymen and college students to lead high school work as volunteer leaders. The training will take place April 13-17 in Room 201 of the Alderman Administration Building.

The training will include instruction on how to develop a strategy to build a strong campus ministry, how to understand the high school student and work with him, how to motivate high school students to win, build and train other students and how to plan and conduct evangelistic meetings.

"High school students have so many pressures and so few answers," said John Kimmons, a Campus Crusade staff member who will direct the training. "To reach every high school student with the message of Christ, thousands of volunteers are needed. We are very interested in beginning a high school ministry in Wilmington led by many college students who will take the volunteer training."

With a rapidly growing staff of over 3,000, and an active volunteer corps of tens of thousands, Campus Crusade for Christ now has an established high school ministry on more than 250 campuses in 61 foreign countries.

Campus Crusade emphasizes the role of the local church, and, as a cooperative aim, presents the gospel of Jesus Christ in areas of the student and lay worlds to which normal Christian witness may not extend. Thousands of students and adults have become active in local churches as a result of this movement. For further information concerning the training, please contact Dickie Miller at 791-7284.

Peery to speak Saturday

by mary margaret williams

Dr. Charles V. Peery, president of Underwater Archaeological Associates, Inc., will speak in Kenan Auditorium on Saturday, April 14, at 8:00 p.m. The lecture is being sponsored by the University Lecture Series and the Five Arts Committee. Students will be admitted free with I.D.

Underwater Archaeological Associates, Inc., is a non-profit organization committed to the scientific excavation and careful documentation of underwater archaeological and historical sites. Preservation and display in public museums of recovered artifacts are major goals of the organization.

Underwater Archaeological Associates inaugurated a seminar program to teach general sport divers the importance of the careful recovery and preservation of our nation's maritime heritage.

"It is apparent that well-trained and highly motivated sport divers, working closely with professional underwater archaeologists, can provide the necessary pool of interest and talent that will make possible not only the prevention of wreck destruction but also proper site excavation."

Dr. Peery made this statement at a two-day seminar for SCUBA divers with an interest in archaeology at the Fort Fisher State Historical Site in late August of last year. This was the first of what was hoped to have been many more such lectures.

Underwater Archaeological Associates is under contract with the state of North Carolina for archaeology work on sunken vessels. Currently, the group is excavating the sites of two Civil War blockade runners sunk off the coast of Southport.

An amazing variety of military and domestic items have been recovered from the vessels. These items are presently undergoing preservation and analysis. Underwater Archaeological Associates' systematic diving operations are known for yielding the maximum amount of archaeological and historical data.

The organization has recently begun work on a permanent support base on the Inland Waterway near Southport. A machine shop, photographic and preservation laboratories, dockage and fuel facilities, and living quarters are under construction.

Dr. Peery, a thirty-one year old native of North Carolina, is currently a Resident in Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. He first became interested in diving in his early twenties as a hobby.

In 1963, he received a B.S. DEGREE (Pre - Medicine & Physics) from Davidson College. Having completed the Research Training Program and a Research Fellowship in Biochemistry, he received the M.D. degree from Duke University School of Medicine in 1968.

Following an internship in pediatrics and a year as Resident in Obstetrics and Gynecology at Duke Medical Center, Dr. Peery for two years was a Research Associate in the Laboratory of Molecular Biology, National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland. He now resides with his wife and son in Richmond.

Seahawks' power is deceptive

When a team has a winning record during the season and has only lost one out of six district ball games, one concludes that this team is having a good season.

But that isn't the way it is around Seahawk country when talk comes up about the UNC-W baseball team.

Injury riddled, and mistake plagued! The University of North Carolina at Wilmington's baseball nine has managed to win 13 out of their first 19 ball games and stand 5-1 in District 29 action. However, the season should be much better as the Seahawks are a better ball club than their 13-6 record shows.

Hitting is well improved over the past years', and the pitching has come along much better than was supposedly predicted, but the big problem for the Seahawks has been on defense. All of the runs scored that have attributed to the six losses of the Hawks have been due to errors on defense.

In talking with head baseball coach Bill Brooks after he had watched his Seahawks drop their first district game to the Methodist Monarchs, 4-2 Monday night at Brooks field, it was quite noticeable that he was not pleased with the play of his Seahawks during the game.

"Sloppy defensive play and not having the clutch hitting about sums up our losses so far this season," declared Coach Brooks after the contest. The Seahawks were only able to score two runs while accumulating 10 hits during the Methodist game. Hawk hitters were unable to come up with the clutch hits when men were in scoring positions, as there were 14 Seahawk runners left stranded on the bases.

In addition to clutch hitting frustrations by UNC-W, three miscues made by the Seahawks on defense allowed three of the four Monarchs' runs to cross the plate, and this accounts much to what Brooks was saying about the 'sloppy defensive play.'

These are the type things that have hurt the Seahawks the most. In actuality, UNC-W has not been beaten by an opponent all season, but instead, the Seahawks have beaten themselves.

Seahawk power is most deceptive when looking at their mediocre record.

In the Seahawk pitching staff, there is probably not one truly overpowering pitcher, but all of them are good, sound pitchers. Harry Kincaid is currently leading the pitching staff with the most wins as he has four.

The only pitcher left undefeated for the Hawks through 19 games is Bob Becher, 2-0. Bill Warmack is listed as being undefeated, but he was given credit as the losing pitcher in the Methodist game, making his record 2-1.

Rounding out the pitchers with won-loss credits is Dave Sandlin, 3-2 and Duke Sanderson, 2-2.

Leading in the earned run average department is freshman right-hander Randy Prosser who also has two saves to his credit.

Carroll Bickers has seen some action in receiving one save, while Tommy Davis and Clemons have seen limited action. Left-hander Paul Fulton who has not pitched yet due to a sore arm will now see action, also.

SEAHAWK'S POWER

Seahawk hitting strength as a team is possibly the best in the district, as the team batting average is a redhot .273 through 18 games. The Hawks have 161 hits, of which 8 are home runs.

Sandlin, playing at first base and seeing action as the designated hitter since pulling a muscle in his leg, is leading the team in batting with a .403 mark. Sandlin also leads the team with runs batted in having 16, and most hits with 25.

Second baseman Robert Ivey follows Sandlin with a .346 mark. Greg Dalton, regular third baseman who is sidelined with a hairline ankle fracture, has a .343 average.

Bo Pittman, playing first and the outfield, and seeing some action as designated hitter, is batting .327.

Bruce Cavenaugh leads the team with homers, having three. Other Seahawks hitting round trippers are Kincaid, Sandlin, Pittman, Joe Miller, and Bobby Schupp.

The UNC-W nine has more offensive power than a Phantom Jet, and now if they can only play defense.

Seahawk's next game is this afternoon with Fayetteville State at Fayetteville.

After this clash, the Seahawks will be at home tomorrow night hosting the Baptist College Buccaneers of Charleston at Brooks Field, and then on Sunday, they will play Lynchburg College here in an afternoon dual.

PHI MU

March was a busy month for Phi Mu. Newly elected officers (Tricia Fields, Linda Robinson, Marian Saffo, Cathy Warner, Debbie Warner, and Pam Welsh) attended State Day at Chapel Hill. At this meeting, chapters from both S. C. and N.C. participated in officer training. Primarily the seminar was held to share ideas and learn more about the Greek system.

Pam Welsh, president of Phi Mu, recently returned from a leadership conference in Atlanta, Ga. Also the Alumnae advisors also have an area conference on their agenda. This conference will be held in Richmond, Virginia.

The girl's fraternity is 121 years old. Each sister gave 121 pennies which goes into the scholarship fund.

Phi Mu would like to thank all who helped organize and plan Greek Day. Phi Mu would like to single out Linda Moore of Student Services who took an active part in planning for the festivities.

April 5, Phi Mu presented a pink dogwood tree to the University to add to the beauty of a growing campus.

On Saturday, April 14, Phi Mu will have their first Carnation Ball at the Ramada Inn. The girls have been excited and have planned a beautiful ball. The theme is Spring and the main decorations will be rose colored carnations, which is the flower of Phi Mu. New initiates and their escorts will be presented to alumnae, sisters, and guests. Presentation of awards will take place at this time.

ADU

There has been a recent change in the leadership of ADU; however, results of this election are not available yet. All of the candidates have made promises which are easily made and broken, and everyone has enjoyed a little muckraking at times. But after the election comes the serious business of redirecting the fraternity towards more concrete goals. ADU is within reach of its goal of becoming nationally affiliated with Delta Upsilon.

Becoming affiliated with Delta Upsilon is no easy goal to have. They have extremely high standards. The new leadership may press on or they may disassociate themselves with Delta Upsilon. Much remains to be seen. Are our new candidates capable? ADU knows they are. It has been said whether you win or lose an election in ADU, you still are on a winning side.

APO

The Alpha Phi Omega fraternity would like to announce that it will again be holding its annual Rock-a-thon for the benefit of the Easter Seals campaign. The Rock-a-thon will be held this year at Hanover Shopping Center, in front of Roses. Melvin Webb will be the rocker and he will be rocking from 1 a.m. on Wednesday, April 18, until 7 p.m. on April 21. The brotherhood hopes to at least match the goal of $2,000, which they collected for Easter Seals last year, again this year and would really be pleased to see students turn out for such a worthy cause.

A Happening?
What's that?

In her book AGAINST INTERPRETATION, critic Susan Sontag writes, "There has appeared in New York recently a new, and still esoteric, genre of spectacle. At first sight apparently a cross between art exhibit and theatrical performance, these events have been given the modest and somewhat teasing name of 'Happenings.' They have taken place in lofts, small art galleries, backyards, and small theaters before audiences averaging between thirty and one hundred persons."

Music Dept. to present Sara Bryant recital

The Music Department of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington will present Sara Bryant in recital on April 25 at 8 p.m. in Sarah Graham Kenan Hall.

A gifted pianist, now under the tutelage of Dr. Richard Deas, Mrs. Bryant began study in Rocky Mount with Mrs. Mrs. C.R. Shuler and, later, with Mr. Edgar Stryker of the North Carolina Wesleyan College faculty.

While in high school Sara was selected to attend the North Carolina Governor's School, a summer workshop for promising young musicians. She played a lengthy recital her senior year and went on to study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with Francis Whang.

Now a sophomore at UNC-W, Mrs. Bryant has proven an outstanding, thoroughly capable student.

One faculty member remarked, apropos of Sara's abilities, "She is one of the finest pianists we have ever had at this university." And Mrs. Bryant will establish that fact with her difficult, predominately contemporary program.

She will begin with Ravel's "Jeux d'Eau"; then six short pieces composed in 1913 by Schoenberg, "Sechs Kleine Klavierstücke," Opus 19; a Beethoven sonata, "The Tempest," Opus 31, Number 2; two selections from Hindemith's "Ludus Tonalis," a collection of interludes and fugues modeled after Bach's "Well-Tempered Clavier"; followed by "Three Intermezzi," Opus 117, by Brahms; and lastly, a piece utilizing keyboard harmonics, Aaron Copland's "Piano Variations" (1930).

For a delightful evening of technique and sustained musicality, everyone is invited to hear Sara Bryant in recital April 25.

"Perhaps the most striking feature of the Happening is its treatment (this is the only word for it) of the audience."

"The Happening operates by creating an asymmetrical network of surprises, without climax or consummation; this is the logic of dreams rather than the logic of most art."

"In the Happening the scapegoat is the audience." Students and faculty are invited to attend a Happening to be presented by the Creative Arts 116 class. Art, drama, and music students will be involved.

The Happening takes place in Kenan Hall Friday, April 27 in the late afternoon and evening. Specific times will be announced later.

Everyone is invited. Wear old clothes or not so old, depending on how involved you wish to be.

At, right, Pooh Bear (who looks remarkably like Steve Morrison in disguise) goes through activities at last weekend's Azalea Festival with a 'hunny jar' perched precariously on his head.

THE PUSHER MAN OF FINE ARTS LOBBY

Monday morning, eight o'clock; hands shaking, eyes half closed.
For want of stimulation, am to drastic things disposed.
Dime in hand, approaching that desolate corner where the Pusher Man of Fine Arts Lobby lives to drive me mad.

Desperate for that caffeine fix,
I offer him my dime;
hoping that he'll have compassion, and perhaps this time he'll dole me out my money's worth.
A nickle bag would do to hold the monkey off awhile
'til French one-twelve is through.

But hard and cold he does remain, and greedy like the rest.
Dishonest as the day is long.
A half a cup at best is all that I can hope for,
as I let my thin dime fall into his mouth. And then I wait;
what verdict will he call?

But dammit, he just eats it.
Will this bullshit never cease?
This monster is a sadist of the highest order reached.
Just eats my dime and stands there, and refuses to admit that he has ever taken payment for my Monday morning hit.

Rage fills my head; I simply have no recourse to pursue.
No way he will return my dime.
I've nothing left to do but risk the next two nickles, or feel my stomach cringe inside.
I have no choice; I let them drop,
and wait for his reply.

He burps a bit and lights his light, and makes a moaning sound.
I've got him, he is weakening;
and I press the button down.
He churns and then disgorges, as I anxiously look up to see that he had made the drop without the paper cup.

He's tricked me and deceived me, but I'm at his mercy still.
I reach into my pocket.
Perhaps a quarter will induce him to deliver.
And he does...but gives no change.
A quarter for two nickle bags;
he's totally deranged.

Cruel and mean and heartless;
I shall deal with him no more.
I'll find another contact who has more for me in store.
But Tuesday morning rolls around,
so with my dime in hand,
I enter Fine Arts Lobby to meet the Pusher Man.

An indigestible situation

editorial by kathi beall

A faculty member recently called me to his office to request that I run an article published some time ago in LIFE magazine. I read the article, entitled "An Indigestible Dinner with Professor M.," by Barry Farrell, with much interest.

The article dealt with Mr. Farrell's deep-rooted horror in learning that M., his honored and distinguished philosophy professor, was the worst kind of racist. M. was an intellectual, involved in the most active way in an academic community. But M. existed, intellectually defending his prejudices. He used his intelligence to maintain his ignorance, if you will.

The summoning of my academic brother was timely, by his own statement, since, from what I can understand, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare recently undertook a study of this campus concerning the number of Blacks and women (and other perhaps repressed groups) within the University structure.

I found this situation to be much more indigestible than the dinner with M., which was in itself pretty nauseating. The main tragedy I find, however, is not the possibility or actuality of racism itself, but the fact that an academic community such as ours must be policed to discover or prevent (or whatever) such occurrences.

We are not the only ones studied, but it is sad that we and other institutions like ours have to be watched over in this manner.

I would like to see the day when we have to police ourselves. When we have to weed out the ineffective, the unqualified, the indolent. When our diplomas will be more than a symbol of having "made it" through four years of term papers and exams. When we can be concerned not with ratios, but with education. When the byword is not simply equality, but quality as well.

Then maybe our years here will mean more than "dime a dozen" diplomas for unemployed graduates.

We are involved in a touchy situation in touchy times. We should not let colors or gender or appearance interfere with an honest all-out search for the best that education has to offer us.

"The university doesn't have a right to exist unless it serves all the people," Mr. Farrell's article. I would like to add that we should strive to serve the best we can. We have a responsibility to ourselves and to the selves that follow.

Court extends election

commentary by kathi beall

After what may have seemed a semester of inactivity, the Student Court recently resolved the question of the validity of the run-off election held early in April.

After charges were brought by Jack Paul, defense counsel Tom Montgomery and Attorney General Mike Davis began preparing cases which were brought up in an open court session.

Charges arose over a change in dates for the run-off and improper conduction of the polls.

Paul was the first witness to be called by Davis. In his testimony, Paul explained the seven points of contention to the election.

The second witness called by Davis was Barry Asbury, who was one of the candidates in the run-off. Asbury stated that he had put out signs for the run-off and urged students to vote for him on the day of April 2, only to learn later there were no polls set up that day.

Raleigh Todd testified that the polls were closed on Tuesday, April 3, prior to 3:30, and for this reason he did not get to vote.

Ms. Linda Moore, Director of Student Activities, verified that she had talked elections chairman Mike Jones the morning of April 2, and that at that time, Jones had told her that he had been out of town since the previous Wednesday and was unable to make the preparations for the run-off. Keith Hales, also a candidate in the run-off, told the court that he had not been notified.

Mike Jones then took the stand to clarify his position as chairman of the board of elections.

After the two attorneys made their summations, the court dismissed the attendants and deliberated for about a half hour. As a result, the run-offs were extended for one more day to allow those who had not had the opportunity to vote to do so.

The court made a very favorable impression on many of those present due to the very professional way in which the matter was treated.

The Student Court is alive and well, and it proved to many recently that it can be a very mature and vital part of the student self-governing effort.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

The psychology club sponsors several large parties each semester. It is a social and service club chartered by UNC-W. Any student interested in psychology is welcomed to join. It is not necessary that students have had psychology courses for them to join in the fun. If interested contact Thom Wright or Jean Green Through the psychology department.

Parker named Dean

Assistant Director of Admissions Ralph H. Parker has recently been appointed Dean of Students (men) to succeed Thomas P. Brown who is returning to teaching mathematics.

Parker, a native of Southport, joined the UNC-W staff in 1971. As dean, he will be responsible for student housing, counseling and assistance to veterans on the GI Bill, coordination of student judiciary, working with the upgrading of student health services, assists with orientation, planning of the student handbook, and formulation and implementation of policies relative to student life on campus.

In addition, Parker will serve as Director of Placement and provide career planning assistance. He will also provide assistance and counsel for the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, William Malloy.

Parker graduated as salutatorian of Brunswick County High School in 1958. He received a B.S. degree from A&T State University in 1962 with a major in instrumental music and a minor in history. He is presently a candidate for the Master of Education Degree from NC State University with a major in guidance and personnel and a minor in sociology.

He was an honor student at Brunswick and at A&T, and was included in Who's Who Among Students in Colleges and Universities.

Prior to coming to UNC-W, Parker was a high school teacher of instrumental music and social studies.

Until 1972, he was active in NCAE, NEA, and the Brunswick County unit of NCAE, as well as the Classroom Teachers Association.

He is currently a member of the Carolina Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, the national CRAO group, the Southern Association of Black Administrative Personnel, and the College Placement Council.

More jobs

Medford, Mass.-(I.P.)-The job prospects are the best in four years for '73 grads with a 16% increase in hiring expected. A survey conducted by the College Placement Council indicates that engineering graduates will have the brightest future with a 27% hiring increase predicted. While liberal arts and other non-business job openings are expected to grow only 4%, it is an improvement over 1971-72 when that job market shrank 6%.

Companies may want engineers, but whether they'll be able to get them is another question. Undergraduate and graduate engineering has dropped in the last few years after reaching a peak in the mid-60's. A self-study conducted by Texas Tech U. for their accrediting agency predicted a shortage of engineering grads in about four years. Other schools feel that this shortage is already evident. Some reasons given for the drop are that engineering is often blamed for the pollution problem; unfavorable news coverage about employment; and a difficult curricula that discourages many students.

WUNC-TV exemplifies innovation

by marian koch

Are there any new innovations in educational television? The University of North Carolina has the answer in its educational network WUNC-TV.

WUNC-TV broadcasts year round, being on the air every day except Saturday. Broadcast start in midmorning and conclude between 10 and 11 p.m. depending on the programming.

Three different types of educational programs are shown on this network.

In the morning and early afternoon hours, the programs are geared for the twelve grades of public schools. Such programs are Math, Forestry Workshop, and World of Science.

In the late afternoon there are programs that entertain while they educate. Sesame Street and Zoom are good examples of this type of program.

The evening hours are devoted to intellectual viewing. WUNC-TV has state and national news, discussions with William F. Buckley, and ballet.

In 1952 the Federal Communications Commission assigned a VHF commercial channel to Chapel Hill. VHF (very high frequency) channels are those ranging from 1 to 12 as compared to the UHF (ultra high frequency) ones which range from 13 to 83.

In July of 1953, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill applied for a license to build Channel 4. However, funds were needed to set up the operation. The University Vice President, William D. Carmichael, appealed to North Carolinians for their support.

Two million dollars in goods, services, and money were received in 1953. From these contributions, studios were built in Raleigh, Greensboro, and Chapel Hill. These studios produce the majority of programs shown on the University network.

Other programs are acquired from national setups. Some are taken directly from the Public Broadcasting System (PBS) by national hookup. Individual stations may contribute as well as networks. WUNC-TV carries the French Chef, which is made by WGBH-TV in Boston.

National setups sometimes ask local stations to produce segments of programs.

WUNC-TV has produced a part of Southern Perspective.

On January 8, 1955, The University network went into operation. About 38% of the state's population were serviced.

followed grant. The North Carolina General Assembly donated state funds for Channel 4, in late 1955.

In 1962 the United States Congress enacted the Educational Television Facilities Act. This act provided money for construction of new educational stations throughout the United States.

WUNC-TV is indebted to Governor Terry Sanford, who recommended that a network be created in North Carolina. His efforts resulted in the addition of four transmitters to the system in 1967. They are located in Columbia (Channel 2), Linville (Channel 17), Asheville (Channel 33), and Concord (Channel 58).

Later additions were made in the system in 1971 with the completion of transactions for Channel 39, in Wilmington. WECT-TV was building a larger transmitter closer to Fayetteville. They gave their old property and transmitter to the University network.

The last two transmitters to be finished are Channel 25 in Greenville and Channel 26 in Winston - Salem. With the completion of these in late 1972 there are eight transmitters to the system.

Greensboro, Raleigh, and Chapel Hill send the programs they receive from the nation and their own productions over the airways to the eight transmitters. These transmitters then relay the programs to the television audience.

At present about 96% of the population of North Carolina are served by the University Television Network.

Dr. Charles V. Peery, president of Underwater Archaeology Associates, lectured recently in Kenan Auditorium on the archaeological prospects in the Wilmington area. He was sponsored by the University Lecture Series and the Fine Arts Committee.

The lecture, illustrated by a slide program, centered around the "blockade-runners," ships used in the Civil War to smuggle goods into the Confederate states. There are an estimated 3000-5000 of these ships sunk off the East Coast, with 30 of them in the Wilmington area.

According to Dr. Peery, "There's a tremendous amount of history in these wrecks. Small points you don't read about in history books are out there waiting to be documented."

The need for careful documentation was stressed by Dr. Peery "When you dig a site you destroy it, so you're obligated to do the best job you can."

An important facet of underwater archaeology is the collection and eventual display of artifacts in a museum.

"This is the way you make history real to the folks who haven't had the advantage to learn about it in a classroom."

Dr. Peery emphasized the great need for divers to work on the excavations. Any one with a knowledge of diving and an interest in archaeology can be trained by Underwater Archaeological Associates for the work.

UNC-W will conduct an underwater archaeology course the second session of summer school. The course will give six hours credit in anthropology. The format will consist of diving on a wreck off the Wilmington coast.

Interested students are urged to sign up for the course immediately, since a limited number will be selected. The only requirement for the course is a certificate in diving.

Diving began as a hobby with Dr. Peery during his college years. He received his B.S. degree from Davidson, and his M.D. degree from Duke. He is currently serving his residency in Gynecology and Obstetrics at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

Series Views American Revolution

by marian koch

'Strange and Terrible Times' is the second program in the series 'The American Experience'. This program will be shown Friday, April 27, at 9 p.m. 'The American Experience' is a series of ten essay-type programs designed for the observance of the American Revolution Bicentennial.

Chet Huntley is the on-camera narrator for the series. In 'Strange and Terrible Times,' Ralph Bellamy is the guest storyteller.

Bellamy will discuss the section of the program dealing with the Revolutionary War. The other topics, the Civil War and the Great Depression, will be presented by Chet Huntley.

Bellamy visits Ford House in Morristown, New Jersey. He discusses the importance of this house in American history. Here George Washington had his headquarters during the winter of 1779-80. This winter was the coldest winter not only of the Revolutionary War, but of the eighteenth century.

Washington lacked military supplies, food and clothing, and also moral support from the people of the United States as well as the Congress.

At Morristown many units mutinied, causing Washington to form firing squads composed of mutineers to shoot their ring leaders.

The Civil War portion, discussed by Chet Huntley, uses the Battle of Antietam to voice President Lincoln's issue on slavery.

This battle, also known as the Battle of Sharpsburg, was fought September 17, 1862. It was the bloodiest conflict over a period of one day during the entire war.

Lincoln issued a statement on his views of slavery five days after the battle of Antietam. On January 1, 1863, he issued the Emancipation Proclamation.

In the section on the Great Depression, Chet Huntley discusses effects of the economic and political problems of the 1930's.

Emphasis is placed on the suffering caused by the small quantity of food produced in the Dust Bowl. Because of poor farming practices and grazing, this area was plagued with severe dust storms.

'Strange and Terrible Times' recreates these three periods of U. S. history and relates them to the conflicts and unrest of today.

behind it. They are known as student teachers.

One student teacher, looking forward to graduation in May, is Elliot Pogolowitz. Better known as "Pogo", he is a senior from Norfolk, Virginia. As a 1971 spring transfer from the College of the Albemarle in Elizabeth City, Pogo became a member of the UNC-W wrestling team and wrestled through the past season.

An Elementary Education major who is now student teaching sixth grade at Tilleston School on Ann Street, Mr. Pogolowitz, as the kids call him, has spent the semester preparing lesson plans, grading papers, trying five days a week to get to school downtown by 8:10 a.m., and coping with twenty-nine sixth graders. "It only took me two days to realize that teachers earn their money," Pogo exclaims. Seventy-five student teachers have been placed in area schools until May 8. They were assigned to the schools by members of the Education Department and began their internship the first of February.

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday are spent at the school from 8:10 a.m. until at least 3:30 p.m. which is an hour after the students have left at Tilleston.

"We're supposed to be able to leave school at 3:30 but it's usually 4:15 before I can get away. Bulletin boards, attendance cards, and ungraded papers keep me busy," says Pogo.

Tuesday and Thursday mornings are also spent at the school. The student teachers then become students at UNC-W once more until 4:30 p.m. on these afternoons.

"There are many problems that a teacher has to cope with that are not covered in the education courses such as discipline, understanding a student's personal problems, and the extra load a teacher has to bare," Pogo explains. He says that the students were not disturbed at having an entirely new teacher come in. This is evident by the reactions of the kids. "Yeh, we really like Mr. Pogolowitz," one red-headed boy declared.

"My biggest problem has been trying to communicate with the little girls. There are four boys in my family," explains Pogo.

When asked if he had any discipline problems Pogo said, "No, they're just healthy, normal kids."

Pogo gradually took over a part of the class at a time until he had encompassed the total teaching schedule. "This is like time off for Mrs. Davis (the actual teacher) but she keeps a watchful eye."

One can see that Pogo relates well to the kids. A shy, embarrassed boy whispered one Friday afternoon, "Mr. Pogolowitz, will you get me a Playboy?" Mr. Pogolowitz just laughed.

Pogo feels that he will be qualified to take over his own classroom when the time comes. He feels that he has something to offer the students outside of the textbooks.

"I've always wanted to teach. Teaching is a completely rewarding experience and it is the only way that so many students can be reached at one time," says Pogo.

He plans to stay in the Wilmington vicinity when he graduates. "I like the coastal area," explains this soon-to-be elementary teacher.

Pass-fail not cure-all

Ann Arbor, Mich. (I.P.)—Pass-fail grading does not appear to be this decade's cure-all for the problems of higher education. University of Michigan psychologist Frank M. Koen conducted a broad study comparing the effects of pass-fail and traditional grading on 950 undergraduates. It produced, Prof. Koen reported, "little conclusive evidence that either system is intrinsically superior in all respects."

It may profit the student in some ways: toward a greater sense of autonomy, self-motivated learning, or a more collegial relationship with his professor. On the other hand, if the student's pass-fail transcript does not come from an academically prestigious institution and he lacks other credentials, he may reduce his chances of being accepted by a graduate school.

"The choice of grading system is a far more complex matter than supporters of either approach have perceived," he concluded. "An individual institution or department must decide which goals are most important for the students and choose the grading policy that is more likely to bring them about."

Prof. Koen tested 16 commonly made claims regarding the differences in student performance, attitudes and experience that may result from the traditional system or P-F grading. The students were tested on academic achievement early and late in the term. They also completed opinion questionnaires at the beginning and end of their courses.

"Students in the traditional sections did report spending significantly more time and effort on the course than P-F students, although their estimated retention of subject matter was no greater," Prof. Koen reported.

"The P-F students tended to place somewhat more value on 'internal' rewards for learning, such as an increased sense of personal competence, as opposed to the 'external' rewards of grades and competition with their classmates. They also tended to profess a greater sense of autonomy and personal responsibility for success in the course, although these effects did not reach a statistically significant level."

In terms of personal growth (such as increased self-acceptance or social responsibility), development of intellectual skills (such as ability to interpret data and analyze relations), content acquisition and student-estimated learning and retention, Prof. Koen found no clear difference between the two grading systems.

The pass-fail option can be viewed somewhat as an "unfamiliar intellectual territory" for the student to explore, Koen noted. Although there have been assertions that those with higher grade point averages would prefer traditional grading, he said, their past academic records proved to be of no relevance. Nor was grading policy found to influence a student's choice of major.

Students under the traditional system were more likely to regard their teachers as organizers, task setters and content experts, while P-F students tended to see teachers as helpers and colleagues. These differences however, were not striking, Koen reported.

Ohio SG urges pre-registration syllabi

Springfield, Ohio-(I.P.) -Student Government at Wittenberg University has offered the following resolution as a possible solution to the problem of creating a better academic environment and improving the academic quality.

Resolved: That all academic departments shall have available in their offices and classrooms a complete course syllabus for each course which the department will be offering the following term. Each syllabus should contain the following information: the course structure--how many class meetings per week; the course objectives - what is to be accomplished during the 10-week term; the course expectations--paper requirements, examination requirements, etc; a list of the required books and materials. In short, the syllabus should explain the course as fully as possible. Master copies should be available in the Student Union and the Library and to department chairmen for advising purposes.

The rationale:

A. Each faculty member can be held accountable for his course and its policies; it shall be a matter of public record, not hearsay.

B. Each student can be held accountable for his choice of the course.

C. A reduction in the number of "drop-add" situations is possible because a greater knowledge of course content will enable students to choose courses more suitable to their needs.

D. A full knowledge of courses and their expectations will enable students to choose a balanced load of work, thus reducing the need for a "credit-no/credit" option to be used in situations where the courses chosen require more time than the student can give to them or is prepared to give to them.

E. Faculty and students who possess the same motivational expectations will be attracted to one another--saving much time, effort and explanation on both the part of students and faculty during the first week of class.

F. Faculty will be encouraged to laterally "sell" their courses. (There is the danger here of using this opportunity to offer courses which will be "popular" but of less educational value, or using less books or requiring less in order to gain more students, but it is hoped that departmental pressure among colleagues will control these desires.)

G. Faculty who change their course syllabus radically without consultation of the class due to any unforeseen or foreseen circumstances will be asked to notify the class members and-or publicly notify the student body so any changes in class roll can be made.

SGA is willing to help finance this effort if departments find they are unable to do so.

It's been a wild semester.

Read to get ahead

The week of April 8-14 marked the sixteenth year of National Library Week's continuing campaign for reading and library development. The 1973 theme is "Reading to Get Ahead."

The National Library Week program "for a better-read, better-informed America" is sponsored by the National Book Committee, a non-profit educational group, in cooperation with the American Library Association.

Observed in all fifty states, the annual "Week" is both the climax and the inauguration of many year-round efforts to encourage Americans to read more. It also aims at stimulating widespread public support for libraries of all kinds.

The "Week" was launched in 1958 as the first nationwide citizens movement to create interest in libraries as vital agencies of education.

Planned and directed by a Steering Committee composed of prominent leaders from many fields, the national program is administered and carried out by a professional staff at national headquarters in New York City.

Each year, the State Library Association heads the organization for state and local programs, setting up and coordinating the work of representative leaders. Similar local programs are organized by core committees of librarians who select and work with their own communities.

In thousands of communities, the program is used to launch attacks against illiteracy, to focus attention on the rewards of librarianship, and to expose the shortage of libraries.

The William Madison Randall Library staff has brought attention to the "Week" with a stimulating bulletin board. The caption in large letters reads "Discover New Horizons in Books." The display of books suggests many new areas to explore.

Miss Helen Hagan, head librarian, describes reading as a "serendipity," something that the individual unexpectedly discovers for himself. She states that, "Reading is definitely a serendipity because it brings to you things you never thought about before."

Miss Hagan says that browsing in the library and discovering new things for yourself can be a real joy. She concludes by stating that the purpose of National Library Week is to "make people more knowledgeable of what libraries can offer."

JAMES BALDWIN: A CRITICAL STUDY

JAMES BALDWIN: A CRITICAL STUDY by Stanley Macebuh is the first in a series of critiques to be published by THE THIRD PRESS. The series is to provide book-length critical studies of contemporary writers, centering on Black Americans, African and Caribbean, as well as other third world authors.

This critical study is the first major critique on Baldwin. It is an in-depth analysis of Baldwin the writer and Baldwin the thinker, from his early pre-occupation with the haunting dread of Hell to his emergence today as an important spokesman of Black consciousness. It is as much a study of structural technique as of the processes by which a writer discovers himself and therefore his responsibilities in society.

JAMES BALDWIN: A CRITICAL STUDY traces both the literary and philosophical journeys Baldwin has taken from the publication of his first novel, where he could be seen as philosophical beginner, to the Baldwin of today, who is a mature writer and thinker.

Stanley Macebuh was born in Nigeria and is presently Assistant Professor of English at City College in New York, where he is currently working on an inquiry into the state of modern Black humanism.

anti-TERM PAPER WRITING MEASURES BECOMING A TREND

(CPS) -- Term paper-writing firms are in for trouble if present trends continue.

An article in the CHRONICLE OF HIGHER EDUCATION reported several states are continuing to apply pressure on the companies.

At the University of Wisconsin a total of 162 students received failing grades and another 193 were given reduced grades for using purchased term papers for course work.

In Connecticut a superior court judge has issued an injunction barring the sale of term papers to students at state colleges. Central Connecticut State College, which initiated the legal action, began disciplinary hearings last month. The cases of 30 students will be reviewed by the school. The students purchased term papers from a local company that has now been forced out of business by the judge's ruling.

And in Colorado a state senator has introduced a bill that would allow district attorneys to seek injunctions against term paper salespeople.

CHANGES IN CLASS SCHEDULES CAN BE MADE BEGINNING WITH THE FIRST DAY OF CLASS OF EACH TERM.

An important announcement to every student in the health professions:

NEW SCHOLARSHIPS ARE AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY.
THEY COVER TUITION AND RELATED COSTS AND PROVIDE AN ANNUAL INCOME OF $5,300 AS WELL.

If a steady salary of $400 a month and paid-up tuition will help you continue your professional training, the scholarships just made possible by the Uniformed Services Health Professions Revitalization Act of 1972 deserve your close attention. Because if you are now in a medical, osteopathic, dental, veterinary, podiatry, or optometry school, or are working toward a PhD in Clinical Psychology, you may qualify.

We make it easy for you to complete your studies. You're commissioned as an officer as soon as you enter the program, but remain in student status until graduation. And, during each year you will be on active duty (with extra pay) for 45 days. Naturally, if your academic schedule requires that you remain on campus, you stay on campus—and still receive your active duty pay.

Active duty requirements are fair. Basically, you serve one year as a commissioned officer for each year you've participated in the program, with a two year minimum. You may apply for a scholarship that upon entering active duty you'll have rank and duties in keeping with your professional training.

The life's work you've chosen for yourself requires long, hard, expensive training. Now we are in a position to give you some help. Mail in the coupon at your earliest convenience for more detailed information.

Seven plays require 100 acting, singing, dancing parts

SRO Summer Stock Theatre tryouts set next week

More than 100 acting, singing and dancing roles will be cast Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5 and 6, for the seven productions of the sixth summer stock season of the fifteen year-old SRO Straw-Hat Theatre.

Tryouts will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m. on the stage of the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium on the UNC-W campus.

correction for above UNC-W campus. Three of the shows slated this season are musicals. Four of the productions will be mounted in the air-conditioned Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium, with the other three being staged in the air-conditioned SRO Theatre in Kenan Hall.

"Fiddler on the Roof," one of the most moving and memorable musicals of modern theatrical history, will be presented June 26 through July 1. Teyve, a dairyman, along with his wife and five daughters, comprise one of the hard-working families of the community. Here these people live as their forefathers did, observing the ways handed down to them, following the dictates of "tradition."

On July 3 through July 8 "The Drunkard" or "The Fallen Saved" will be presented. A popular melodrama first produced in 1844 as a sentimental plea for temperance has in recent years enjoyed a delightful revival along with its companion "Ten Nights in a Barroom" for purposes of burlesque. This will have a certain appeal for those who relish a nostalgia for "the good ole' days."

The third production will be "Butterflies Are Free" on July 10 running through July 15. The play is funny when it means to be, sentimental when it is so inclined and heartwarming - one that touches the heart as we see three people come to grips with reality. This treats a tender romance of a young man and the kooky, uninhibited girl next door and the interference of the young man's over possessive mother.

"The Mad Show," a musical revue that is much fun and as clean as a whistle will be presented July 17 through July 23. This revue, that is large on laughter and melody, is adapted from a MAD MAGAZINE. There are put-downs and take-offs and parodies galore, hitting such targets as TV advertising, Academy Awards, and radio talk shows.

The fifth show is the record breaking mystery play "The Mousetrap" by Agatha Christie on July 24 through July 29. The author of "Ten

French P&R prof to visit UNC-W

Professor Francois Garnier of the University of LeMans, France, will be a visiting professor of philosophy for UNC-W's second summer session. Dr. Garnier is Professor of Iconography and History of Philosophy at LeMans.

In P&R 201 (History of Western Thought), Garnier will present a study of the interpretation of man as manifested through the art forms of the 12th-16th centuries in Europe using visual material from his library of more than 60,000 photos and slides of European works of art.

Little Indians" and "Witness for the Prosecution" comes forth with another English hit about a group of strangers stranded in a boarding house during a snow storm, one of whom is a murderer. This is another superb thriller from the foremost mystery writer of her half century.

On July 31 through August 5 "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" will be mounted in the SRO Theatre. This is an absorbing drama that focuses on an embittered mother whose girlish dreams have been shattered, and who vents her frustration and unhappiness upon her two daughters. "Marigolds" is a disturbing and compassionate view of human struggle and of three women torn by despair and their need of love.

The seventh and final production August 7 through August 12 will be the all-time favorite musical "Brigadoon" by Lerner and Lowe. All of the arts of the theatre have been woven into a singing pattern of enchantment. Brigadoon, a Scottish village which comes into being for only one day in each century, is an orchestration of the theatre's myriad arts, like a singing story-book for an idealized country fair long ago.

These try-outs are open to anyone in the Wilmington community or New Hanover County. "I know of no experience more emotionally satisfying or gratifying than bringing pleasure to others. We encourage all interested persons, regardless of age or experience to attend these try-outs," said Doug W. Swink, producer-director of the SRO Straw-Hat Theatre. Season tickets are now on sale for the season. The $12 tickets enable holders to see all seven plays. Tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Cathy Burruss at 791-4330 (extension 272) or Mr. Swink at 791-9695.

Producer - director Doug W. Swink of the SRO Straw-Hat Theatre urges anyone in the Wilmington-New Hanover County area, regardless of age or experience, to attend tryouts for the seven summer plays, which include three musicals. Tryouts for the over 100 acting, singing, and dancing roles for all seven plays will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5 and 6. Interested persons are urged to be at Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium promptly at 7:30 p.m. each night.

Museum exhibits Johnson sculpture

Wilmington - New Hanover Museum currently displays an exhibition of pottery and ceramic sculpture by Hugh Johnson.

Opened Sunday, May 20, it will last four to six weeks. The show consists of functional pottery (pitchers, jugs, etc.) and ceramic sculpture.

Hugh uses a variety of firing methods such as raku, salt glaze, and stoneware, with some non - ceramic materials used on the sculptures. An art major at UNC-W with a concentration in ceramics, Hugh also teaches ceramics part-time for Lake Waccamaw Boys Home and for Southeastern Community College Adult education classes.

His show is an exhibition of the last ceramics from UNC-W art department due to cancellation of the ceramics program. Most of the pottery is for sale.

The Museum is located at 814 Market Street and the hours are Tues-Sat, 9 a.m. 5 p.m., and Sunday 2-5 p.m.

Committee Seeks Miss July 4

The Fourth of July Committee is looking for single girls, aged 16-24 to be contestants in the Miss Fourth of July Pageant set for June 19 in the Greenfield Amphitheatre.

According to committee secretary Marion Rogers, girls need not have a talent. Judging will be made primarily on the basis of physical characteristics, poise, and personality.

Entries can be made by sending the contestant's name, age, address, and telephone number to the Fourth of July Committee, Post Office Box 1825, Wilmington, or by calling Mrs. Rogers at 762-7246.

June 19 (or June 20 in case of rain the 19th) Miss Fourth of July 1972 Jennifer Jones will relinquish her title to one of the contestants.

At left, the University Chorus conducted by Bob L. Alexander "Speak to One Another of Psalms." Seated before them are UNC-W Chancellor William H. Wagoner; Ashley M. Murphy, Chairman of the UNC-W Board of Trustees; Dr. Charles L. Cahill, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs; Dr. William M. Malloy, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs; and Mrs. Dorothy P.

Marshall, Registrar. At right, recipients of the Associate in Arts Degree in Nursing receive their diplomas from Chancellor Wagoner as Dr. Cahill and Mrs. Marshall assist. A pinning ceremony was held for the nurses May 13 at which Franklin H. Allen of the Biology faculty, "Honorary Student Nurse," delivered brief remarks.

Council needs 'Showboat' crew

Seamstresses, painters and stage hands interested in providing technical assistance for the Lower Cape Fear Council of the Arts production of the Jerome Kern - Oscar Hammerstein musical "Showboat" are urged to come to Greenfield Amphitheatre after 6 p.m. any day except Sunday. The musical will open at the Amphitheatre June 14.

Battleship memorial open daily for tours

The U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA Battleship Memorial is open every day of the year. In the summer months, you may tour the Battleship between 8 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Visitors report a period of about an hour should be allowed to adequately inspect the Showboat's many features. Open to the public are such typical areas as the crew's living spaces, an engine room, 16-inch gun turrets, anti aircraft gun mounts and the pilot house. A museum and adjoining room memorializing the names of North Carolina's 10,000 World War II dead are highlights of the tour.

The route through the Battleship is clearly marked, making tour guides unnecessary and the self-guided tour may be taken at your leisure and areas of special interest may be revisited. In addition to explanatory plaques located about the ship, there are automatic speakers to describe certain especially interesting areas.

Admission rates to the Battleship are:

Children, 5 and under FREE
Children, 6 through 11 25¢
All others, 12 and over $1.00

PUB HOURS SET

The Pub will be open from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday, through the end of the summer term.

Playing cards, chess sets, and checkers will be available, along with the pool tables, television, ping pong and football games.

Wil. LL underway

Local Little League baseball got underway last week with opening ceremonies at the various league parks. According to Recreation Supervisor for the City of Wilmington, Frank Kelly, there are seven major and two minor leagues. A total of 35 teams, 725 youngsters ages 8-12 are playing summer ball.

Each team will play a 12 game schedule which will be followed by a county-wide tournament. After the County Championship has been decided, each league will select all stars who will compete for the State Little Tar Heel League Championship.

Library adds hostel guide

by Kathie Corn

YOUTH HOSTELLER'S GUIDE TO EUROPE, a valuable book for young people wishing to travel through Europe on a limited budget, has been added to the reference collection at UNC-W's Randall Library.

The book includes 80 detailed tour maps and charts, walking and cycling tours through cities and countryside, lists and locations of youth hostels, and mountain trails for backpackers and campers.

Copyrighted in 1973, the book discusses extensively the people, culture, geography, and touring possibilities of 22 European countries. Each major city and point of interest is discussed in detail.

Originally published in England, the book was prepared by the Youth Hostel Association. It appeals mainly to the younger traveller who wishes to visit small, out of the way places, rather than popular resorts and beaches.

Hostels are inexpensive (usually about $1 per night) public housing for travellers. The idea was initiated in 1909 by Richard Schirrmann, a young

'Open House' opens today

"Open House," a 24-hour face-to-face emergency help center opens today to serve as a community crisis intervention center offering informal counseling, referral, education, and alternative activities for youth.

There is no need for an appointment, as clients may walk into the facilities at 610 Market Street at any time. An open house in Raleigh was used as a model by the steering committee for the house here. The house is backed by professional consultants (doctors, lawyers, etc.) who have volunteered to give their services to the program and to individual clients.

Sound and light show starts Friday, June 8

Story of 'Showboat'

is something to see

Exciting episodes in the life of "The Immortal Showboat", the U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA, are brought to life in a sound-and-light spectacular nightly June 8 through Labor Day. The electronic blending of sound and light stimulates the imagination until audiences virtually see crewmen scurrying to battle stations, a torpedo ripping into the ship's portside and Kamikazes attacking from all sides.

Spectators sit in a 1,200 seat outdoor grandstand just off the port bow of the Battleship. A network of 169 high-fidelity speakers give excellent stereophonic audio and 369 lights of variable intensity and color create the Battleship's many moods. Special effects are used for highlights including simulated gunfire from light anti-aircraft 20mm and 40mm guns and the blast and flame of the larger 5 and 16 inch guns. A brilliant explosion at the waterline simulates the torpedo hit that reminds audiences the U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA took some punishment in her westward march to victory.

The story of "The Immortal Showboat" is told from commissioning on April 9, 1941, through battles of the 12 major campaigns of the Pacific Theatre leading to victory at sea in World War II. The script was written by award - winner Earle Luby, author of the CBS television series "The Twentieth Century." The renowned Bernie Green conducted 40 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to produce the background music. Alexander Scourby narrates while Walter Abel and others bring life and feeling to the dialogue. The voices of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, President Harry S. Truman, Sir Winston Churchill and Adolph Hitler are heard. The U.S. Navy contributed many special effects.

The phenomenon of sound and light, known in Europe as 'son et lumiere,' is a relatively new form of entertainment which has spread throughout Europe, telling stories of the Coliseum in Rome, the Acropolis in Athens and the Palace of Versailles near Paris.

The hour - long production of "The Immortal Showboat" is an action - packed lesson in history and patriotism for the family. It is presented nightly during the summer months at 9 p.m. Admission for adults is $1.50 and 75¢ for children from six through eleven. Children under six are admitted free.

Inquiries may be made through P.O. Box 417, Wilmington, N.C., 28401, or by phone to 919/762-1829.

Shinns named Danforth Assoc's

Dr. and Mrs. Gerald H. Shinn have been appointed Associates of the Danforth Foundation, an organization dedicated to the improvement of the quality of human relations on campus. The Shinn's appointment is effective Sept. 1.

The Danforth Associate Program, composed of 2500 faculty members and their spouses at over 750 colleges and universities in the U.S., is one of the Foundation's efforts "to recognize and encourage good teaching and human values in the educational process."

Shinn is a professor of Philosophy and Religion at UNC-W.

Hawks minus Joe Miller

Joe Miller, Wilms, Del., native will not be playing left field in this summer's Carolina Baseball conference. In fact, Joe will not be playing at all. The rising sophomore will be back in his home town for a summer of working and catching up on the last nine months' happenings with his friends -- especially fiancée Jeanette.

Joe says he may play industrial league ball this summer, but his main goal will be working and readying plans for his marriage, which he hopes will come about Christmas - time, 1973.

Miller, the freshman that socked a grand slam homer in his college debut, will certainly be missed by Coach Bill Brooks and the Summer Hawks.

"PSA'S YOUNG PHOTOGRAPHERS SHOWCASE" is a youth activity sponsored by The Photographic Society of America and is open to all under the age of 25 years and those who will not be 26 before December 31, 1973. Entries are NOW being accepted by Margaret S. Hessberg, 720 Milton Road, Rye, New York, 10580.

No entry fee is required. Prints not accompanied by return postage will not be returned. Up to four (4) black and white and/or color prints, mounted or unmounted, may be entered by each contestant. Minimum print size is 8" X 10". No print previously accepted and exhibited in "THE FIRST YOUTH SHOWCASE" of 1972 will be eligible in this competition.

The following information must appear on the back of each print: Maker's NAME, ADDRESS, DATE OF BIRTH, and PRINT TITLE.

The contest offers $1000 first prize, $500 second prize, and $250 each third and fourth prizes.

This competition is being announced on a world-wide basis. The closing date for entries in PSA's Young Photographers Showcase is July 12, 1973. The selection of prints will be made in Rochester, New York, by a panel of three highly qualified selectors.

About 100 prints will be chosen for a traveling exhibit for display in large cities throughout the U.S.A. The opening exhibit will be held at the 1973 International Convention of The Photographic Society of America, August 14-18, 1973 at the Hilton Hotel in San Francisco, California.

Sandlin leads team hitting

Dave Sandlin, preparing to participate in summer ball for UNC-W, has led the team in batting for the spring season, rapping out 48 hits in 131 trips to the plate.

Dave had .366 batting average to lead the team and place in the top 15 in District 29 batting. A senior, Sandlin was also credited with 13 doubles, one triple, and one home run.

Having pitched, played first and outfield for Coach Bill Brooks' Seahawks, Sandlin is looking forward to the upcoming pro draft in early June. The grapevine has it that Dave has been watched intently by several pro scouts throughout his career at UNC-W.

Lettermen's success 'their own sound'

Does the song make the group, or does the group make the song? In relationship to the Lettermen, it's neither. Their success can be attributed to their own sound, their own choice of material, their own arrangements and, most important, the decision not to record anything that they cannot duplicate in a live appearance. As proof of the success of this theory, they received a gold record for their million plus selling album, "The Lettermen and Live" (ST-2758).

The trio, consisting of Tony Butala, Jim Pike and Gary Pike, have found the unique chemistry of sound and songs that has brought them millions or record fans, campus concert fans, hotel and night club audiences, and nation-wide TV viewers.

Tony Butala made his singing debut at the age of eight on a radio show in his home town of Sharon, Pennsylvania. When his family moved to Los Angeles, he was accepted by the famed Mitchell Boys Choir, and his professional musical career had begun.

Jim Pike was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and after serving in the U.S. Navy, he moved to Los Angeles. He attended Brigham Young University in Utah and started singing with campus groups. After Brigham Young, he formed a group called The Damons, which sang with Stan Kenton in Las Vegas. When the group disbanded, he returned to Los Angeles where he and Tony met. They discussed their views and their feelings about forming a vocal group, their musical ideas were the same, the name was chosen, and The Lettermen were born.

Gary Pike, Jim's younger brother and third member of the group, was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, and attended local schools until his family moved to Los Angeles. Gary attended El Camino College but left to join The Lettermen after Jim and Tony auditioned him.

Since its creation the trio has appeared at more than 2000 colleges and universities across the country. Their twenty or more cross-country tours have had countless SRO signs at box office windows. It is no coincidence that almost every sorority and fraternity house in the country has a complete library of Capitol Lettermen LPs.

Their first single record for Capitol was "The Way You Look Tonight," and the public fell in love with it for more than a million copies in sales. The next two singles were for a total of almost two million. During this one-year period their first LP, "A Song for Young Love" was a national number-one best seller, staying on the music trade charts for 58 straight weeks.

Since then their track record reads like a personal Hall of Fame, with Gold Records and $1,000,000 or more in sales for "The Lettermen and Live," "Best of the Lettermen," "Hurt So Bad," and "Going Out of My Head." All 31 of their LPs made the top 100 on national record charts. Their total LP sales exceed $25 million.

Among their hit singles are "The Way You Look Tonight," "When I Fall in Love," "Come Back Silly Girl,"

"Theme from A Summer Place," "Put Your Head on My Shoulder," "Sherry Don't Go," "Hurt So Bad" and their classic medley "Going Out of My Head" / "Can't Take My Eyes Off You."

Their Christmas LP, "For Christmas This Year," remains the number - two best - selling holiday album released by Capitol.

They have had the privilege of working in theatres and night clubs and on tours with such performers as Jack

Foul ball

by t.r. woodall

To this viewer it seems absurd that in these days of international exchange, sky-labs, and bill brought into Congress to rebuild nations torn apart by war, there should be discrimination within a country based upon the dream that "all men be equal."

Recently, the Little League of Ypsilanti, Mich., was the victim of calous, behing-the-times, and distinctly discriminatory thinking of the National Little League Administrators. The decision of the NLL to prohibit girls from playing little league ball not only deprived a few young females of the opportunity to participate, but denied the entire eight-team league of being official little leaguers by denying them membership in the National LL Assn.

Joe Tiede, in the May 20 issue of the RALEIGH NEWS AND OBSERVER, cited "this action is akin to George Wallace standing at a door at the University of Alabama to bar a single Negro student. As times move on, it will look increasingly ridiculous."

The NLL justified itself by allowing that girls were more prone to injury. Once again this seems trite. As I remember my little league days, there could have been no girl more uncoordinated or accident prone than some of us. The ruling was made to, and in fact does, deny aspiring young baseball players an opportunity to learn virtues such as friendship, good sportsmanship, and the pleasure of friendly competition because of sex.

It seems that now the world of sports is being tainted by sex discrimination as it once was by racial discrimination. The Administrators will not always be able to bar little league players because of sex, but this year several hundred youngsters are the losers due to antique administrators.

We call a foul. It's one hell of a ball game when the players are taught sex discrimination instead of good sportsmanship!

Seahawks open summer play

On June 5, Seahawk Baseball Coach Bill Brooks will field his nine against regular season champs Pembroke State here on the home diamond. Coached by Harold Ellen, Pembroke has been the league champ two years running, and will be fielding much the same team that captured the regular season prize.

Among the Pembroke standouts is pitcher Ron Norman. Norman, an All-American candidate, posted a fantastic 10-0 mark this season, helping Pembroke clinch the NAIA District 29 Season Championship and tournament.

The Seahawks will have a few faces absent, but should prove to be a stiff competitor on most any afternoon. Hawks' Mr. Evervthing, Dave Sandlin, will be heading the list for Coach Brooks' second summer season. Dave, a .366 hitter during regular season, is always dangerous at bat.

Hitting is not Dave's sole talent; he is also a pitcher, first baseman, and outfielder. Coach Brooks says, "If David (a natural lefty though he bats righthanded) was righthanded he could play any position on the field."

Last summer UNC-W won the championship in the first year of the NC Collegiate Baseball League.

FRAZIER NOT BEST BUT BEAUTIFUL

Walt Frazier, star guard for the world champion New York Knicks of the NBA, was not chosen the MVP of the recent NBA Championship playoffs against LA, but we hear tell Walt was chosen one of the top ten sexiest men in the world.

It makes one wonder if the infamous "Clyde" (as Frazier is known by his followers) will follow the likes of Jim Brown, Isaac Hayes, Roman Gabriel and others into the world entertainment after his already illustrious sports career is over. Or is he just another pretty face?

NO FUZZY JOCKS SAY TEXAS COACHES

Referring to longhaired men, Coach Tony Simpson of Northshore Junior High School in the Houston suburb of Galen Park said, "The American male youth--and many not so young--wear their hair long simply because they know the female will like it. These so-called males are in submission to the warped norms and standards of females who like to set the dress and grooming standards for their mousy husbands, their pantywaist boyfriends, and feminine sons."

The statement was released in conjunction with a decision by the Texas coaches' association to ban long hair in its annual high school football and basketball all star games.

NO SHAVEE, NO LOOKEE

Linda Petty, wife of star race driver Richard, has taken a stand for the clean-cut set. Linda gave orders that Richard was not allowed to see their newest born of four children until he cut his hair and shaved off his Fu Manchu moustache. Said Richard, "She told me I couldn't see our new baby until I got that thing off."

DISPLAY AT FORT FISHER VISITOR CENTER - MUSEUM

Forts - area historical bonus

Many struggles have occurred around Cape Fear because it was settled long ago. Over such a period of time situations resulting in fighting materialized. Earliest recorded of these were the raids effected on English colonies by Spanish fighting ships. The first fortification was then built, Fort Johnston, 1745.

Of about eight or more other installations since then, Fort Fisher was the most important and is the most famous. Built at the entrance to the river north of Smith Island, which inlet has since been closed, it served to protect blockade runners from union naval guns during the Civil War, and was the last lifeline of the Confederacy. Fort Fisher was not a masterpiece in construction, but was built more from determination than Pan Shoals where they were scuttled in order to prevent their being captured.

Many tales have been handed down among the river pilots and the descendants of the captains of deeds of valor and humor during those boisterous days. A favorite among these is the one about an inefficient captain who had difficulty in figuring his position as he approached the bar, (they always ran at night). Just as he was trying to understand his incorrect figures, which disclosed the amazing fact he was supposed to be a few miles southeast of Raleigh, (where no water is) he was attacked by a Union gunboat, the captain of which did not seem to share his difficulty.

This fort suffered the heaviest bombardment of land and naval units exercised during the Civil War, which barricades and buildings are all in good condition. The metal has long been removed but the buildings are in excellent repair. The reservation is now owned by the North Carolina State Baptists and large assemblies are held there each year.

Fort Caswell was first built in 1825. All except the small part of the construction which now stands was erected in the first World War. The fort was manned and equipped with heavy coast artillery during the Civil War, Spanish American War and World War I. It was used by the U.S. Navy as a section base during World War II.

No battles were fought at Fort Caswell but when it was evacuated during the Civil War, the powder magazines were exploded. This report was said to have been felt in Wilmington and heard in Fayetteville, a hundred miles away.

Much is to be seen at Caswell today. Fort Fisher currently features many interesting sites and artifacts reflecting the rich Civil War history of this area.

Benny, George Burns, and Bob Hope.

The college appeal of The Lettermen was clearly demonstrated when they were voted No. 1 Campus Attraction by the annual Billboard poll. But added to their tremendous campus success has been their enormous success in night clubs and the major hotel rooms in New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Miami, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Reno, Tahoe and Las Vegas.

Their successful and responsible association with Capitol Records hit a happy peak this year, with the formation of The Lettermen, Inc., their own production company. Under their own banner they produce their own product as well as that of other artists. Capitol is the sole distributor for their recordings.

This year The Lettermen also had the honor to be the guest star vocalists at the Miss Universe Pageant--- which was televised around the world live and viewed live by the largest audience in T.V. history--265,000,000 people.

Unlike most vocal groups, The Lettermen all have the same range and easily interchange parts. All three are accomplished soloists in their own right, and each shares an equal vote on all issues. Perhaps one of the reasons for their continued success has been that the three are really one - and it is this unity, in all things, that created "The Lettermen Sound," known and respected by all who know what music is all about.

Class of '73 largest ever

356 receive diplomas

Chancellor William H. Wagoner congratulates Thomas Edward Hodges, Jr., recipient of the Hoggard Medal for most outstanding progress as a student of UNC-W.

Graduation ceremonies marked real beginnings for 356 graduates of UNC-W May 16. But even more striking, perhaps, than the graduates themselves were the number of youngsters who were able to share in the triumph and experiences of the brothers, sisters, or parents who received recognition for their academic endeavors. Before too many years have gone by, these youngsters, too, may be able to share with their families and friends the satisfaction and knowledge of their learning. With education, and the application of their knowledge, and the understanding which must follow, there will surely be tomorrows of promise and hope. (Photo by Kathi)

"The taxpayers provided the means; the staff, the place; the faculty, the guidance, knowledge, and encouragement; and families and friends, the reason, understanding, and love."

The Class of '73--356 students who studied, worked, and earned Associate and Bachelor's degrees.

The professors have seen a number of classes graduate, most probably. They have also seen the best--and the worst--work done by members of the Class of '73. Once again on May 16 they joined in the triumph of their students who successfully finished their undergraduate study.

Standing room only were the conditions of recent graduation exercises. Parents, spouses, children, and friends of 356 graduating seniors watched as Chancellor Wagoner conferred degrees on the members of the largest graduating class in UNC-W history. Here, the daughter of one of the graduates smiles until she can "see Daddy." (photo by Kathi)

'Man of La Mancha' Now At Continuous Performances; Stars Peter O'Toole, Sophia Loren, James Coco

NOW PLAYING AT OLEANDER CINEMA 2

Since the first publication of Miguel de Cervantes, "Don Quixote" in 1605, literally dozens of musical adaptations have been attempted for the operatic and popular stage. Although it remains one of the most revered prose classics of Spanish literature, it defied, for centuries all efforts to convert it to the musical medium.

Then, on the evening of November 22, 1965, "Man Of La Mancha" opened on Broadway and began its record-breaking history as an enduring fixture of the modern theatre.

"Man Of La Mancha" has now been filmed by producer-director Arthur Hiller with Peter O'Toole and Sophia Loren starred and co-starring James Coco. Dino De Laurentiis Studios in Rome and nearby locations in the Italian countryside provided the principal backgrounds.

As a musical drama, it presents sixteen original songs composed by Mitch Leigh with lyrics by Joe Darion, the best known of which is the theme ballad of Don Quixote, "The Impossible Dream."

Peter O'Toole is perhaps the best qualified actor in the film world today to undertake the dramatically challenging triple role of the 10-year-old Cervantes, the aging El Grecoesque figure of the demented Don Quixote and the pathetic old Spanish gentleman, Alonso Quijana, who recaptures the romantic spirit of the days of chivalry before he dies.

Miss Loren recently completed a comedy, principally filmed in New York for United Artists release, and "White Sister" in which she plays a nun. In "Man Of La Mancha" she is cast in the dual role of Aldonza, a serving-girl at an inn, and virginal Dulcinea.

James Coco, who plays Don Quixote's comic man-servant Sancho Panza, was 1970's success story on Broadway, television and in films. He won a Tony Award nomination for his stage performance in the title role of Neil Simon's "Last of the Red Hot Lovers."

Arthur Hiller, producer-director of "Man Of La Mancha," is riding the crest of his directorial career since receiving an Academy Award nomination for his direction of "Love Story," last year's outstanding box-office success.

Sophia Loren is making her singing and dancing debut in the dual role of Aldonza, the serving-girl at the inn, and the virginal Dulcinea in "Man Of La Mancha."

Three appointments made in academic affairs division

Three administrative appointments in the Academic Affairs division of UNC-W have been announced by Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, Dr. Charles L. Cahill.

Mrs. Dorothy P. Marshall has been appointed Director of Admissions and Registration, and Doctors James K. McGowan and Daniel B. Plyler were named Assistant Vice Chancellors for Academic Affairs. All appointments will become effective July 1.

Mrs. Marshall, presently registrar at UNC-W, will direct all activities related to recruitment of new students, admissions and registration. An alumna of East Carolina University, she has done graduate work at George Peabody College.

The two assistant vice chancellors will assist in all functions performed in the realm of academic affairs. Dr. Cahill emphasized that these appointments do not reflect a division of responsibilities within the academic area, but are essential to provide the appropriate administrative structure to parallel the phenomenal overall growth of the institution.

Dr. McGowan, a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, is presently an associate professor of philosophy and religion at UNC-W. He earned his A. A. degree at St. Joseph's College in Princeton, N. J., and completed his A. B. at Mary Immaculate Seminary and College. He also holds the Ph. L. from the Catholic University of America and the Ph. D. from the University of Louvain.

Prior to his appointment to the UNC-W faculty in 1971, he was a professor of philosophy and graduate dean at Seminary of St. Vincent De Paul.

Dr. Plyler, professor and chairman of the Department of Biology at UNC-W, is currently Director of the Program in Marine Sciences and will continue in that role when he assumes his new post July 1.

A native of Gastonia, Dr. Plyler received his A. B. degree from Pfeiffer College and his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from UNC-Chapel Hill, where he held the National Science Foundation Fellowship, the National Institutes of Health Fellowship and the William Chambers Coker Fellowship.

Dr. Plyler has been actively engaged in research at UNC-W, studying "The Mode of Action of Hydroxyurea," a compound being studied as a cancer chemo-therapy agent,

The bamboo forest, an impressive ornamental evergreen, a little-known oddity at Orton. See feature page 4.

MacMillan art display

World War II paintings and drawings by Henry MacMillan will be on display in the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum until June 30.

After induction into the United States Army in 1942 MacMillan took Engineer basic training and worked on The Art Project at Fort Belvoir. Working on two murals while on The Fort Belvoir Art Project, MacMillan completed one, the subject being Camouflage. The other was completed but studies for it are in the current exhibition.

After going to North Africa as a replacement in June 1943, he was assigned to the 62nd Engineer Topographic Company, the only field topo company in Sicily. All paintings were done during this period while he was on pass. Most of the drawings and paintings were lost when The Fort Belvoir Art Project sent for them. A special messenger delivered them to Belvoir, Virginia, but their final disposition is unknown.

This exhibit consists almost entirely of paintings and drawings done during the year MacMillan was in the XIX Corps. They were presented to the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum by the artist. Pottery and sculpture by Hugh Johnson, III, are also on display until June 30.

The museum is located at 814 Market Street and hours are Tues., Sat. 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m.

What's happening

"ARCHIE BUNKER"

Carroll O'Connor, who plays Archie Bunker on television's ALL IN THE FAMILY, recently criticized Montana Attorney General Robert Woodahl for his charges of obscenity against the University of Montana (UM) student newspaper, the MONTANA KAIMIN.

The KAIMIN has come under attack from Woodahl specifically for publication last October of a book review of the SEX SURROGATES, written by a former UM student, which the attorney general claimed was obscene matter and which precipitated letters of complaint from members of the university community. The board of regents recently concurred that the KAIMIN be informed by UM President Robert Pantzer of their disapproval and criticism of allegedly obscene material published in the newspaper over the years.

O'Connor told the KAIMIN, "I think you should tell him (Woodahl) to mind his own business. He's not in the newspaper business; you are. I think you should tell him that."

O'Connor also revealed to the newspaper that he once resigned from his post as associate editor of the KAIMIN in October, 1949 in protest of the removal of an editorial cartoon by the university Central Board.

The KAIMIN at that time had published on the front page discussions of the university's arguments concerning money allocation on a school bond that was being challenged in a local court. The following day, the newspaper reported that the editor had resigned when the Central Board ordered the removal of an editorial cartoon on the front page which related to the school bond issue. The Central Board unanimously passed a motion ordering the KAIMIN to delete the cartoon.

The following week, O'Connor, the newspaper's associate editor and columnist, resigned in protest over the suppression of the cartoon. However, O'Connor told the KAIMIN's present editors, he could not remember the exact contents of the cartoon.

WOMEN GAIN VOTE IN JORDAN

Jordanian women have finally succeeded in their efforts to gain the right to vote and be elected to Parliament when King Hussein requested an amendment to the country's 1960 election law.

"When I heard the news I could not sleep all night. I consider it one of the great events in our country's history," said one Jordanian woman.

Hussein has recently promised equal rights for women, but, as one woman said, "King Hussein has always shown appreciation for our achievements, but the right to participate in elections seemed a long way off."

The number of women enfranchised is unclear because the voting age for women has not yet been determined. Men may vote at 18 in Jordan.

Bidriya Abdel Jalil, woman member of the executive council of the Jordanian National Union, the country's only political organization, commented, "Part of what we hoped to obtain through the party's charter has come true. It (the party) established the principle of women as equal participants in politics."

"Now we will have to prove our worth so Jordanian women will have to become better acquainted with their political duties and responsibilities."

Jordan's last parliamentary elections were held in April 1967.

Apparently not able to beat them, the state of West Virginia has joined the ranks of moonshiners.

WOMENS & CATHOLIC COLLEGES DYING

The national trend toward coeducation continues, says a report issued by the College Research Center (CRC) of Princeton, N. J.

The results of a nationwide survey show that many of the single-sex undergraduate colleges of the '60s have abandoned that role and have begun coeducational admissions programs. Also, one-third of those schools with strong Roman Catholic affiliations during the '60s have now severed or loosened those ties.

The most striking results of the survey are figures that show the virtual end of the traditional role of women's colleges.

Of 300 women's colleges in 1960, only half were classified as such by 1972. Forty percent of the original group had officially become coed. One in ten had closed its doors altogether, or had announced plans to do so.

Among the 146 institutions that did not change their status, 90 said they were committed to remain women's colleges. The others reported they were still studying the situation on a "wait and see" basis.

The survey found that Roman Catholic and public institutions led the way toward coeducation. Only 73 out of an original group of 185 Roman Catholic institutions continued to operate as women's colleges in 1972. And, bowing to a variety of pressures, 27 Roman Catholic institutions went out of existence.

Many Roman Catholic colleges also began to end formal relationships with the Church during the past decade. Only

The other one-third said they were either independent or maintained loose ties to the Church.

Most resistant to giving up their roles as women's colleges were the stronger, more "prestigious" independent colleges, according to the study. Only 11 out of 41 independent four-year institutions reported a change to coed status since 1960. Only seven out of 21 two-year independent colleges reported a "restrictive" admissions policy.

The trend toward coeducation has not been limited to the women's colleges, however. The study notes that, as the 1970s began, seven out of ten previously for-men-only independent universities and colleges were actively recruiting females.

The survey was based on information gathered on 298 private, public, and religious-affiliated institutions operating as women's colleges in 1960. It was carried out by Kenneth M. Wilson, director of the Center, an agency that concentrates on cooperative research among colleges.

Recent amendments to the federal Higher Education Act require the elimination of sex bias in colleges and universities. The sole exemptions to this mandate are schools that are traditionally single-sex.

Also exempt are the 14 public and private four-year men-only colleges, most of which are military institutions such as Virginia Military Institute. A dozen years ago there were 47 schools in that category.

STRIP TEASE SHOW

A live strip-tease and sex show, presented by the freshman class at Columbia University, resulted in a demonstration, a fist fight, and a false alarm.

Proceeds from the event, which lost $280, were intended to go towards scholarship money.

The show was interrupted by a group of 40 demonstrators protesting the stripper's appearance. The group demanded that they go back stage and speak with Patty Wayne, the evening's star attraction, and also make a brief statement to the crowd of 150.

The protestors insisted that the strip show was "dehumanizing to women." Patty Wayne responded, "I find stripper a dehumanizing word. I consider myself an exotic dancer. I'm out there to entertain, and I can't psychoanalyze every audience. This exotic dancing thing has gone on all over the country."

Two of the demonstrators addressed the audience which was predominantly hostile.

Soon afterwards a bouncer, hired by the event's organizer, freshman class president Mark Kirshner, to "protect the stripper from those who would molest her," began to argue with the demonstrators, telling them to either pay the $1.50 admission fee or leave the auditorium.

In a fist fight that ensued, one demonstrator was punched in the face by the bouncer, and was subsequently taken to the hospital and treated for facial injury.

After the demonstrators left, Wayne went into her act, in which she stripped down to stockings and a thin red fur-piece around her pelvis.

The show ended abruptly at 10 p.m. when a false fire alarm rang out.

Kirshner said after the show ended, "I feel I have the same responsibility the Stones had at Altamont."

To help others

'Open House' seeks help

As the phone rings, Flo Stein notes the time for the call log, "Open House," she answers. "This is Flo."

Thus begins a day at the house, a 24-hour face-to-face emergency help center.

If the caller needs information, Flo attempts to provide it. An easy-reference poster on the wall above the desk lists phone numbers for hospitals, police and fire departments, social service agencies, and every imaginable source of help or information.

Need a place to crash? The house is easily accessible (610 Market Street) and clients may walk in and out at any time.

The house staff is made up of volunteers, but is supplemented by professional consultants who have volunteered to give their services to the program and to individual clients. A community crisis intervention center, the house offers informal counseling, referral, education, and alternative activities for youth.

"It's a really good program," said one believer. "They're good people and they helped me."

But to help others, according to Ms. Stein, the house needs more help. "We really need about ten more volunteers," she stated. Help in numbers is really the most important right now, but the house also needs mattresses, old carpet, blankets, sheets, pillows, furniture of any kind. "I suppose it's dreaming, but a television would be nice."

Since the opening of Open House a week ago today, they have averaged about five visitors a day. Sensationalist say workers on a similar project in Durham. "We waited two months."

Still, the house has its own crisis to face—a manpower shortage. "We'd really like to have about ten more people from the college to help." Interested persons may call Flo or one of the other volunteers at 762-5597.

One of the most beautiful municipal parks in the nation. The five-fingered lake, bordered by stately moss-draped cypress, azaleas, camellias, yaupon, magnolias, live oak, redbud, flowering cherry, crape myrtle, wisteria and dogwood, attracts thousands of visitors each year. Around the scenic five miles, one finds the amphitheatre, the world's largest Rotary Emblem Garden, a rose garden, and a fragrance garden for the blind. Youngsters enjoy the amusement park, kiddie zoo, and boat rides.

History

Explored by the French and Spanish in the 1520's. First English attempt at colonization along western banks of the Cape Fear River in 1664-1665, and was known as Charles Town. In 1670 this colony moved to what is now Charleston, South Carolina. Wilmington, first permanent settlement and principal town, was settled about 1732. First named New Carthage, then New Liverpool, then Newton. In 1739, Governor Johnston renamed the city Wilmington in honor of his friend and patron, Spencer Compton, Earl of Wilmington. Booklet 'History of the Lower Cape Fear' is available at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Hospitals

Cape Fear Memorial, New Hanover Memorial, Babies Hospital are staffed and ready for service anytime. There are five nursing homes with services for many, and the following clinics: pre-natal, mental, orthopedic and physical therapy.

Museums

The Wilmington New Hanover Museum, Fort Fisher Museum, Brunswick Town Museum, and the privately owned Blockade Runner Museum display artifacts, dioramas and other treasures of local, state and national history. The USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial, permanently berthed in the Cape Fear River, houses its museum of World War II mementos.

Rescue Squads

The Ogden Volunteer Rescue Squad is voluntarily operated and provides free emergency service. There are over 30 volunteers with excellent training and equipment. The newly formed New Hanover Volunteer Rescue Squad is doing much to improve rescue duties. Both units operate on budgets provided through donations.

Parks

Wilmington enjoys an extensive program that includes 14 parks, 15 ball fields, 16 tennis courts, 2 stadiums and an amphitheatre, covering a total of 370 acres. There are five 18-hole golf courses,

Orton Plantation:

Legends provide part of its charm

By Frank O'Brien

Down the lane past the bamboo forest, over the Chinese bridge and across the lagoon to its far bank, under a large toadstool sit four limestone leprechauns and a cement frog.

The elfin faces are creased in frozen animation, and the friendly frog couldn't quite make it to deep water before some mysterious wand froze him too, haunch-high, at the water's edge.

There is a quality of never-never land in the scene, as if the pixie people await the arrival of Rip Van Winkle, or the drowning of evil spirits as they tumble from the crooked bridge, or to hope the bamboo forest will trap the north wind.

Visitors who wander this path not only see much of the familiar beauty of the gardens and grounds at Orton Plantation, but also see part of its legend and lore. Though less familiar than the floral splendor, fantasies are part of the historic story of this famed ante-bellum showplace on the Cape Fear river between Wilmington and Southport on the lower coast of North Carolina.

The statues of ageless leprechauns, already dubbed the "weesome foursome," are the newest addition to Orton's-northwest lagoon, where the crooked, Chinese bridge also is located. The statues of the little people, by coincidence, face the ancient graveyard at Orton, where, over 200 years ago, its founder, "King" Roger Moore, was buried in an impressive brick tomb.

Orton's Chinese bridge, which zig-zags through a grove of young cypress trees sprouting in the lagoon, illustrates an Oriental superstition. The bridge is built with many crooks and sharp turns because of an old Chinese belief that evil spirits cannot follow a person who crosses on a crooked bridge. Evil spirits, unable to turn, simply fall overboard and drown, according to the legend.

The Orton bridge was designed by the noted landscape architect, the late Robert Swann Sturtevant of Groton, Conn., who also transformed one of Orton's rice fields into a water garden.

One of the best crooked bridges is in the forbidden city of Peking. It is a mammoth, marble span, and very effective in its purpose, although many evil spirits, Red Chinese variety, may still lurk about.

Another part of the seldom-publicized lore at Orton is the phenomenon of a thickly growing bamboo forest whose leafy tops seem to touch the sky. It is an impressive sight, a very ornamental evergreen which enhances a feeling of the tropics.

The bamboo shoots to heights of 40 feet, or more, and after measures as much as four inches in diameter. It has some commercial value as outriggers for fishing vessels, and manufacture of paper on an experimental basis.

The bamboo forest was planted at Orton, however, for more practical reasons. It serves as a splendid windbreak for the manor house when the north wind streaks across the open swamps and old rice fields.

Orton was described many years ago as "a place in high repute for its salubrity and pleasantness as a summer retreat." Its fables and fantasies, today, broaden its interest and popularity with visitors, including four limestone leprechauns and a cement frog.

By Larry Douglas

Wilmington is blessed with history and stories of great happenings of the past.

Few of us ever take the interest to thumb through the pages of time and review the events which preceded the establishment of what is now the Port City of the Tar Heel state.

The early citizens of the area were the Indians. The Cape Fear tribe has never been clearly identified as to their origin. Indians mounds have been found along the river and into the midlands of the coastal plains. There is some evidence that they were known as "Sapona."

According to history the tribe was exterminated by "King" Roger Moore at the battle of Big Sugar Land following a raid on Orton.

It was in the Orton section, according to tradition, that the upland tribes came each spring to feast on fish and oysters and drink the juice of yaupon.

Known as the Black Drink, this concoction produced a purging effect which the Indians believed to be most helpful.

According to "Events On The Lower Cape Fear" by James Sprunt, hundreds of the natives traveled long distances to partake in this native wood on Smith Island (Bald Head Island) at the mouth of the Cape Fear after a European ship had wrecked on the treacherous shoals. Early explorers also granted the river a variety of names, including River Jordan, Charles River and Cape Fear, indicating the waters' flirtatious nature.

The first English attempt at colonization was made on the west bank of the river 1662 by a group of Massachusetts Bay Colony settlers Staying only a short time, the first settlers were followed by a group from Barbados. The English settlement was known as Charles Town, or Old Town, the second predecessor to what is now Charleston, South Carolina. The settlement existed at the Cape Fear River site until 1667 and current excavations indicate that at least a few of the settlers might have endured conflicts with the Indians and neglect from the Mother Country until well into the 1700's.

In the 18th century the Cape Fear River served as both a legitimate and illegitimate base. For many years pirates found shelter along the river and coastal water, including Bald Head Island and Money Island off Greenville Sound. In a more official light, the town of Brunswick was founded by Colonel Maurice Moore in 1725 on the western side of the Cape Fear about 16 miles below Wilmington. Now a State Historical Site, Brunswick was an influential beginning for commercial and society in the region. The Brunswick Town era included the birth of the area's spacious plantations, some of which are still intact today. A fort on the site also played important roles in both the Revolutionary War and the Civil War, guarding passage along the Cape Fear River.

The Brunswick settlement, however, lost its role of regional leadership when Wilmington was founded about 1732 opposite the junction of the North East and Cape Fear Rivers, approximately 30 miles from the ocean. The first permanent settlement and principal town in the area, Wilmington was first named New Carthage, the New Liverpool. The settlement's name was changed to Newton and became the location of the Colonial Office of Governor Gabriel Johnston in 1734. The following May, the Colonial Council and courts were held, and in 1739 Governor Johnston renamed the infant city in honor of his friend and patron, Spencer Compton, Earl of Wilmington.

The city prospered, particularly in its waterfront location, becoming through the years a major North Carolina and Southern port for ship building and transportation of tar and other native products from the regional pine forests. Its prosperity in its early history can be seen today in the early homes which have been renovated in downtown Wilmington near the waterfront. As a major import-export center in the South, Wilmington was a strategic city during the Civil War, serving as the home berth for innumerable blockade runners. Southern ships which braved the treacherous shoals and the Northern blockades under black-out to bring necessary goods from the islands to the war-stricken Southern states. While the blockades runners were major providers for the Southern states during the war, many met their fate on the Cape Fear shoals and their wrecks now dot the mouth of the river and the New Hanover Coast. The city was protected at the mouth of the river on the eastern shore by Fort Fisher, now a State Historical Site which was the scene of one of the most concentrated bombardments in the war during the famed Battle of Fort Fisher. Following the war, the city regained its commercial standing with its vital connection to the sea, leading to its contemporary status as a major U.S. port with subsidiary marine interests in fishing, boating, and tourism, and also opened the way to new industrial expansion which has solidified the community's diverse economic base. The booklet "History of The Lower Cape Fear" is available free at the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

'I want to be treated like a human being' sports editorial by t. r. woodall

What pleasure can any man receive when calling his fellow man names descriptive of racial overtones? Where is the motivation to deem your brother your lesser? Even as my questions are unanswered, I still have and find more reasons to ask them.

The point of this all is one Henry Aaron, Aaron, star of baseball's Atlanta Braves, has been the subject of much abuse in recent weeks. This abuse has been in the form of threatening letters and jeering sections of spectators during games.

Through the observation of this viewer, these assaults do not characterize a resentment of Aaron's attempt to break the hallowed mark of George Herman (Babe) Ruth's 714 career homeruns, but merely contempt for the color of the man's skin. The name callers are not found in the pro ranks, but in the general public. One assumes, then, that the name callers or letter writers are semi-literate whose thoughts are guided by mid-19th century thinking.

When asked about his feelings due to apparent fan hatred and resentment, Aaron said, "All I want is to be treated as a human being." "I try to pass it off as ignorance," retorts Hank, "but the more it continues it gets to the point that you say, 'What's the use?' I've enjoyed playing in Atlanta... I've loved playing here, but when you get this hatred and resentment..."

Aaron is of the opinion that the abuse and bad mail comes because "some people can't stand the infringement of a black man on this kind of record. I know it happens all over the world," he said, "but I'm only concerned about Atlanta, since that is where I play most of my games." Is it worth it? Is breaking Babe Ruth's record worth the abuse, the name calling, and the mental anguish?

"Well I'm not going to stop because of this," said the 39-year old star. "Put it this way: the more they abuse, the more I want it."

The taunts of course, stem from prejudice, ignorance. How does one legislate against ignorance?

"Just let me know I exist," said Aaron.

The veteran outfielder pointed out he doesn't hear much abuse when the Braves are on the road. Indeed, the boos are heard at home, where, before now, many have stood and cheered Hank on to the stardom which he has achieved. On the road, the only boos heard are those in protest of an opposing pitcher walking Hank intentionally.

"It will pass," said Aaron of the apparent racism. "I hope so anyway. But I felt this was something I had to get off my chest. Five years ago, I probably would have walked away from it, and said nothing. But now I feel I've taken all I can."

Would he want to be traded to another team if it continues?

"No!" said Aaron. It is remarkable, but maybe by not running from the agony of constant public scorn, Henry Aaron can prove himself to his aggressors as a man --- not a patsy that can be forced from achieving his goals because a few are blinded by antique prejudices.

Secretariat bids for 3-Crown

When the bell rings and the gates open Saturday, June 9, Secretariat, pride of Meadow Stables will be attempting to capture racing's elusive triple crown.

No horse in this quarter century has been able to accomplish such a feat. Not since 1948 has any horse been able to win the Preakness, the Kentucky Derby, and the Belmont Stakes in one racing season. The horse that did win the Triple Crown and gain the title of the wonder horse of 1948 was the infamous 'Citation'. In that year, at every meet, Citation was the horse to beat.

Tomorrow, when the starter lines them up for the running of the Belmont Stakes, Secretariat, wonder horse of 1973, will attempt to change racing history and capture the third jewel in racing's prestigious Triple Crown.

ROBINSON HONORED

Brooks Robinson, star third baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, was the recipient of his thirteenth consecutive Gold Glove Award, June 3 before the Orioles - Texas Rangers game in Arlington, Texas. The Oriole management allowed the presentation to be made in Texas in order that fans from Arkansas, Brooks' home state, could witness the ceremonies.

SALT WALTHER STILL CRITICAL

Race driver Salt Walther, seriously burned in a fiery crash at the start of the recent Indianapolis 500, was moved from Methodist Hospital to the burn center at the University of Michigan Hospital, Sunday. The move was made at the request of Walther's family. Walther's condition was described as still serious.

BOBBY RIGGS AGAIN!

Bobby Riggs, the talk of the tennis world since his impressive defeat of Margaret Court, has been scheduled to play young Chris Evert and has also accepted a challenge from Billie Jean King. It seems as if the crafty 55 year old, winner of the USLTA Senior Clay Courts Championships, will once again attempt to expound upon his theory that women professional tennis players are not of equal calibre as that of the men's ranks. Riggs defeated Mrs. Court with relative ease and feels he can do the same with young Evert and seasoned pro Billie Jean. Riggs is currently ranked the number one senior male tennis player in the USLTA.

Auto-Europe offers special program for student faculty car rental

A new 1973 "Student-Faculty Grants and Services" program has been announced by Auto-Europe Inc. offering car purchase, car rental and leasing, motor camper rental and leasing and car rental plus tent throughout Europe.

All are offered at attractive low rates substantially reduced by special grants available only to students and faculty members. A new large format 8 page brochure giving full details of this program is available FREE direct from Auto-Europe headquarters at 1270 2nd Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10021 a group of plans specially useful to students because they combine low cost with realistic age requirements. Wherever possible the minimum age requirement has been lowered to 18.

The program is designed to give flexibility and to provide real economy for group travel. Many of the services are Rent-It Here-Leave-It There allowing pick correction Leave-It There allowing pick up in one country and drop-off in another. Groups of 4 or more will find some very attractive bargains.

Car Leasing is usually the cheapest way to drive for periods of a month or longer and the cars are brand new.

Car Rental is generally more economical than Leasing for 30 days or less. You will be able to pick up a car in any of 18 major cities on the Continent and return it to any of the others at no extra cost. For example, a Volkswagen can be picked up in Stockholm and left in Rome (2,000 miles away) 4 weeks later for $3.20 per person per day based on a group of 4. You can drive as far as you like for just the cost of gas—about $24. for each 1,000 miles. Further examples: 7 sharing a VW bus for 3 weeks will pay only $3.64 each per day; a group of 12 renting a Ford Transit Bus in Britain for a week pay only $1.57 each per day.

Car & Tent is a new rental plan combining car or bus with one or two tents stowed on the roof. The Ford Transit Bus, equipped with 2 tents sleeping 8 costs $2.48 per day for each of them. A Ford Escort Sedan rented for a month with a tent sleeps 4 and costs $3.20 a day each.

Camper rentals utilize motor campers such as the Volkswagen DICA Camper-bus which can be rented for a month at $7.38 each for 4. If you add a tent the two units will sleep 8 and the price is nearly halved to $3.88 each.

Car Purchase grants vary depending on the make and model of the car bought. In addition Auto-Europe will furnish, free, your first night's lodging in Europe at a selected Holiday Inn, Esso Motor Hotel or AGIP Motel. It will be a first class double room at a super modern motel at or near the factory city.

Auto-Europe's new '1973 Student - Faculty Grants and Services' brochure gives full details of 22 different services available throughout Europe. FREE copies are available together with "The ABCs of European Auto Travel" direct from the Auto-Europe office.

AZALEA COAST

Attractions . . .

The City of Wilmington, nearby beaches, and the entire Azalea Coast area offers the tourist-vacationer an amazing variety of ways to enjoy his visit. As this booklet clearly shows, there is also a wide variety of accommodations for any budget. And not the least of the area's attractions is the friendly, gracious nature of its people. You'll enjoy your visit to the Azalea Coast.

BEACHES—Wrightsville Beach, Carolina Beach, and Kure Beach offer access to miles and miles of the finest strand along the Atlantic seaboard. All the customary seashore activities are available, plus the opportunity to relax in solid comfort under the bright Carolina sun.

FISHING—Fine charter fishing boats with experienced skip-pers are available for deep sea fishing at Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches. You may fish for the big ones in the Gulf Stream, or enjoy a short off-shore trip. There are six ocean piers and many miles of clean strand for surf fishing. New Hanover County boasts the world's largest fishing club.

GARDENS—The Azalea Coast is famous for its lovely gardens which reach their peak of beauty in the spring. The formal gardens surrounding the historic house at Orton Plantation are world famous. Airlie Gardens is a wonderland of azaleas, camellias, charming lakes and walkways. Beautiful Greenfield Gardens surrounds a lovely lake and is open to visitors, admission free. Each April at Wilmington the height of the flower season is celebrated with the four-day North Carolina Azalea Festival.

SPORTS—Protected water and the broad Atlantic are both readily available to the boating enthusiast. Fine marinas and launching facilities are available for the smallest dinghy or the largest cruisers—power or sail. Water skiing, surfing, and swimming are quite popular. Golfers enjoy the Azalea Coast courses the year around. Tennis and hunting also are popular outdoor activities.

AMUSEMENTS—A variety of amusements, especially at the beaches is yours to enjoy. There are rides, miniature golf, par 3 golf, and many motion picture theatres. Excellent bowling facilities are available, and there are many fine restaurants, especially for seafood. The area boasts two television stations and several radio stations.

BATTLESHIP GALLEY

Battleship galley on display

According to legend, the Navy has the best food of any of the military services and true to legend the sailors of the battleship USS North Carolina were no exception.

In the giant galley (kitchen) on the second deck of the World War II ship which is now permanently berthed here, visitors can walk through the area where more than 30 cooks were kept busy preparing the ship's tasty menus.

There were 36 cooks, bakers and butchers on the USS North Carolina, plus another 100 men being used to serve the hot meals from the steam serving lines.

Considering the fact there were usually 2,000 men on the sleek battleship during her active-duty war years of 1942-45, the galley was kept humming to provide food for fighting appetites.

More than eight million meals were prepared in the ship's galley during the war years, using the same 80-gallon steam kettles, tureens, electric ranges and special ovens now on display to the public.

The galley and adjoining mess halls makeup the largest open spaces on the ship with over 1,000 square feet... enough for eight average-size homes...being used for meals.

Visitors to the ship, open every day of the year, can see this area.

The USS North Carolina normally carried a 30-day supply of fresh food and a 90-day supply of dry provisions. The fresh food was stored on the third deck in large refrigeration units with the dry foods being stored on the second and third decks.

Putting enough food on the "floating city" to handle three meals a day for 2,000 men was a big job and the battleship took on food in tremendous quantities. If you went shopping for the ship, your list would include 8,400 dozen eggs; 15 tons of potatoes; 128,000 pounds of flour; 21,000 pounds of lard; and etc.

Also on display near the bakery area of the ship is an original cookbook with recipes which include the ingredients to make pumpkin pie, the pie crust and biscuits.

For pumpkin pie, you need 6 cases of pumpkin, a case of canned milk, 30 gallons of water, 100 pounds of sugar, 30 dozen eggs, 22 pounds of cornstarch, 15 pounds of corrected powdered milk, 12 ounces of nutmeg, 12 ounces of ginger, 24 ounces of cinnamon and 14 ounces of salt.

For the crust, you need 100 pounds of shortening, six pounds of salt, 200 pounds of flour and 35 quarts of water. If you want to make biscuits for the neighborhood (a big neighborhood), try 16 pounds of sugar, five pounds of salt, 48 pounds of shortening, 20 pounds of powdered milk, 22 pounds of baking powder and last, but surely not least, 200 pounds of flour.

RIGHT IN THEIR OWN FRONT YARD—The kids of Pilgrim Circle may not have their driver's licenses yet, but after the big rains last Saturday, they "drove" down the streets in rowboats and air mattresses.

Said Union command:

'Fisher must be taken'

One thing had become painfully clear to the Union high command in the closing months of 1864—the guns of Fort Fisher had to be silenced.

The blockade had tightened the noose around the throats of the other Confederate ports, New Orleans was in the hands of the Union forces and only a trickle of supplies were getting into Savannah and Charleston.

But at Wilmington, it was almost business as usual. Shallow draft blockade runners steamed almost into the surf north of Fort Fisher, usually in the Wrightsville Beach vicinity.

Then, keeping just off the beach, they began the life-and-death run for safety under the guns of Fort Fisher.

If a blockade runner spotted one, it would begin a running bombardment until the blockade runner was sunk or reached the area inside the range of the batteries at Fort Fisher.

Some of the blockade runners never made it and the coast today is littered with their wrecks -- the Fannie and Jennie, the Emily, the Sophia, the Georgiana McCall, the Modern Greece, and the Night Hawk were but a few of the vessels which fell victim to the blockaders.

But the vast majority did make it because the blockaders seldom dared venture under the guns of Fort Fisher or among the treacherous shoals in New Inlet.

The blockade runners carried muskets, gun cotton, opium, lead, and the other supplies of war, which were loaded from the wharves in Wilmington to be shipped up the Wilmington-Weldon Railroad to supply General Robert E. Lee's army in Virginia.

Out of Wilmington, they carried agriculture products, chiefly cotton for the looms in the English mills and tobacco for the European auction blocks.

The first battle of Fort Fisher began on December 23, 1864, when the powder ship Louisiana was exploded by the Union forces within 200 yards of the fort, doing no damage.

Union General Benjamin F. Butler landed north of the fort with 2,000 troops. His advance skirmishers were halted by artillery and small arms fire and he decided the fort was too strong, so he withdrew his troops.

On January 13, 1865, the Union force assembled off Fort Fisher to begin the biggest land-sea battle the world had seen up to that time.

More than 55 ships, mounting more than 600 guns began a three-day bombardment, while General Alfred H. Terry landed north of Fort Fisher with 8,000 troops.

Leaving 4,700 men entrenched to stop Confederate General Braxton Bragg and his 6,000 troops from coming (continued on page 2)

Southern National awards scholarship

Southern National Bank's Board of Directors announced the winner of the $5000 1973 Southern National Bank Scholarship Award. The outstanding student chosen this year is Elaine Arrington of Rowland.

Elaine is the daughter of Edward M. Arrington of Rowland and Elizabeth H. Alford of Wilmington. She graduated from Rowland High School this year, with a final standing of number three in her class.

The Southern National Bank Scholarship Award provides for four full years of

Parker appointment effective July 1

Ralph H. Parker, currently an assistant director of admissions at UNC-W, will assume his new duties as Dean of Student Affairs July 1, replacing Thomas P. Brown who will return to full-time teaching in the university's Department of Mathematics, according to Dr. William M. Malloy, vice chancellor for student affairs.

In his new position, Parker will be directly concerned with providing the core of the university's non-academic student services and effecting continued communication between the students and the administration.

In addition to his responsibilities in the area of student housing and health services, he will provide counsel and assistance to returning veterans on the G.I. Bill and serve as Director of Placement, providing career planning assistance to all UNC-W students.

Parker will also assist in the formulation and implementation of policies and procedures relative to student life on campus, including discipline and coordination of the student judiciary, planning and coordination of the annual orientation program for new students, and publication of the Student Handbook.

A native of Southport, Parker was salutatorian of his graduating class at Brunswick County High School and an honor student at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical University, from which he received the B.S. degree in 1962. He was named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" while a student at N.C. A&T.

Currently a candidate for the Master of Education degree in guidance and personnel at North Carolina State University, Parker has also matriculated at East Carolina University and UNC-Wilmington to earn teacher certification renewal credits.

Parker holds membership in both the American and the Carolina Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, the Southern Association of Black Administrative Personnel, Omega Psi Phi, and the College Placement Council.

study at the college or university of the student's choice. Recipients are required only to maintain satisfactory grades once the scholarship has been granted. The candidates are submitted from communities which Southern National serves and the final selection is made by a rotating committee of professional and business men.

Elaine was a member of the National Honor Society while in high school. During school she was also active in intramural sports. She is a member of the Rowland Baptist Church, a pianist and an officer in the Sunday School.

At the present time, Elaine is working for Southern National Bank in Rowland. She will enter the nursing program at UNC-W this fall.

OPEN DOOR

Needs Help

Open Door, 606 Causeway Drive at Wrightsville Beach, an alternative recreation facility geared toward youth 13-18 years old, is seeking volunteers to help staff it.

Volunteers must be at least 18, and work JUST 6 hours a week. Open Door in maintained six nights weekly (it closes Mondays) from 6 p.m. until midnight.

It opened last weekend, the result of almost a year of planning and work. Funded by the beach's town board, it operates under the auspices of the Wrightsville Beach Recreation and Community Improvement Committee.

Opening night featured music provided by Mike Adams, Gary Allen, Linda Goodson, Vernon Jeter, Steve Morrison, and Paul Roethlinger, and a poetry reading by Craig Martin.

Nightly programs will include drama, films, table games, and music, with a live band planned for once a month.

Five professional counselor/advisors provide a backup for the staff. They are Milton Boone, Pat Mach, Louise Reynolds, Flo Stein, and Tom Wilson.

Persons interested in volunteering should contact Linda Goodson, Volunteer Staffing and Programs Head, at the Open Door any night but Monday.

WHAT HAPPENED TO 1970 LIBERAL ARTS GRADS?

What happened to the 1970 Liberal Arts graduates? A questionnaire sent to the '70 graduates of Northwestern U.'s College of Arts and Sciences was answered by 59% of the class. The survey indicated that 3% were neither employed nor in graduate school. About 57% of the grads who were working said their undergraduate education didn't prepare them for their jobs and correspondingly, 57% of all the respondents had attended a graduate school. Among those students now employed, about 50% worked for the government or a non-profit organization and 50% for profit-making companies. Only 11% said they found their jobs through a NU faculty member or the Placement Center.

The "fail" is taken out of the pass-fail grading system at New College (Sarasota, Fla.). Only pass grades are recorded, and each student receives a written description of his performance.

Archie Bunker's photo was recognized by 90% of the students tested by a U. of Northern Iowa professor. Walter Cronkite was recognized by 75%, Henry Kissinger by 72%, and Sen. Edmund Muskie by 50%.

COLLEGE BLACK-WHITE % CLOSES GAP

Blacks now equal whites in the percentage of high school grads going on to college, about 50% for both groups, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

But the final closing of the gap was more the result of a decreasing percentage of white high school grads entering college in recent years than of an increase in black matriculations.

from Wilmington to relieve the fort, Terry took 3,300 men and started toward the fort.

At 3 p.m. on January 15, 2,000 Federal marines and sailors assaulted the beach side of the fort, serving as a diversion for Terry and his men who broke into the river side.

The badly outnumbered defenders gave a good account of themselves in the bloody hand-to-hand combat which followed.

Before the remaining 1,500 Confederates finally surrendered at about 10 p.m., the Union forces sustained 1,300 casualties.

General Lee, upon learning of the fall of Fort Fisher, said, "The lifeline of the Confederacy has been cut." The war may have turned against the South at Gettysburg in 1863, but the fall of Fort Fisher sealed the coffin

Letter to the Ed

Dear Kathi,
FANTASTIC!! I just got a copy of your first issue and it is great! It more than fulfilled my fondest expectations in every way and I really feel the community owes you much for this new service.

I cannot lie. I was most fascinated by the Crisis Line spots all through the issue. They were really great. We believe our work is important and it's so fine to get this kind of vote of confidence from outside.

Many thanks from all of us. Your SUMMER SEAHAWK is destined to flourish and we're so pleased to be aboard!

Highest student anxiety level

SOCIAL, BEHAVIORAL SCIENCE MAJORS

in the social and behavioral sciences.

In making his study, Horn was interested particularly in seeing if basic personality differences exist between students of psychology and engineering.

Horn had about 1,600 college students complete the Maudsley Personality Inventory, a standard test used to measure two personality traits -- extroversion-introversion and proneness to anxiety.

While few significant differences were apparent between the groups of students in the extroversion-introversion factor, the differences in anxiety-proneness between students majoring in different areas were quite large.

Psychology students were found to be the biggest worriers of all and engineering students exhibited the lowest levels of anxiety.

Horn, whose academic interests include behavior genetics and personality development, said his study indicated that persons gravitate to various academic disciplines because of certain personality traits.

Horn hopes his research will be of interest to persons concerned about the types of students attracted to certain professions, for he contends that personality factors over a period of years may unduly influence the composition and direction of a given profession.

To make sure that the college students had not been influenced by their campus academic majors in answering the personality test, Horn tested approximately 450 recent high school graduates, asking them what they intended to major in at college.

The results were essentially the same as for the college students, in that, as a group, high school students, expressing a preference for social and behavioral science majors had a much higher anxiety level than those who said they were going to major in engineering.

"That confirms for me," Horn said, "that high school students are choosing vocations according to personality attributes. The differences are there before they begin their college careers."

Horn speculated that certain kinds of students may be attracted to engineering because it is "a data oriented field not given to armchair theorizing," while the field of psychology is characterized by "a lot of ambiguity and a plethora of contradictory ideas and theories."

As an added part of his research, Horn extracted more information from psychology students than from others. As well as the personality test, he gave them another test that indicates whether a person believes his life is controlled more by external events than by internal factors such as hard work.

Horn found a high correlation between the anxiety proneness of psychology students and their belief that external events shape people's lives.

Famous Rest In Oakdale

Oakdale Cemetery, North 15th Street; of rare and serene beauty; final resting place of illustrious men and women. Old Grave stones tell their own stories of life and death. Among the graves of famous people we find:

ROSE O'NEAL GREEN-HOW, Confederate Spy, who lost her life by drowning off Fort Fisher on Cape Fear River, while returning from England on a business trip for the Confederacy.

HENRY BACON, JR. (1866-1924), architect for the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C.

NANCY MARTIN, a sea captain's daughter, who died at sea, May 25, 1857. Her body was preserved and buried in a cask of rum.

GOVERNOR EDWARD BISHOP DUDLEY, died 1855, first governor elected by the people of North Carolina.

Mrs. W. M. PARSLEY (1842-1920), wife of Col. William Murdock Parsley. She organized the North Carolina Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and served as their first president.

HON. GEORGE DAVIS (1820-1845), Attorney General of the Confederacy.

ROBERT McLAUGHLIN (1807-1845); native of Maryland, first teacher of the famed Odd Fellow's School in Wilmington.

AMY MORRIS BRADLEY (1823-1904); "Our School Mother."

CAPTAIN ALFRED AUGUSTUS WATSON, D.D. (1819-1905); First Bishop of East Carolina Diocese; defied the Union Army Generals when ordered to discontinue prayers for the President of the Confederacy.

DR. WILLIAM C. WILLKINGS; last man killed in a political duel, 1856.

GEN. W.H.C. WHITING; Confederate General at Fort Fisher, died 1865.

CAPT. WM. A. ELLERBROOK; native of Hamburg, Germany; lost his life in a fire, April 11, 1880, age 24 years. His dog tried to save his master and lost his life. The dog rests in the coffin, in his master's arms, one of several dogs permitted to be buried in Oakdale Cemetery.

BEATLES HERE TO STAY

Nearly ten years after the first outbreak of Beatlemania the music industry is once again experiencing renewed excitement from the group and their music.

The two anthology albums issued on the Capitol distributed by Apple label received RIAA (gold record) certification 48 hours before their release and currently hold top positions on all national record charts. According to June 2nd issues of the three national trade magazines the LPs are in the following positions: Beatles 1967-1970 is #3 in Billboard,

#2 in Cash Box and #1 in Record World, while Beatles 1962-1966 is #5 in Billboard, #4 in Cashbox and #4 in Record World.

Paul McCartney's new Red Rose Speedway album and his single "My Love" are riding high on the same charts (both lp and single are number one in Billboard).

The first George Harrison single in two years entitled, "Give Me Love (Give Me Peace on Earth)" b/w "Miss O'Dell" was released shortly before his new album, LIVing in the material world which received RIAA (gold record) certification May 31, 1973, two days after official release.

Meanwhile Ringo Starr is garnering a lot of attention relative to his upcoming album featuring tunes written and performed by former Beatles.

All in all the music industry is once again buzzing with Beatle records, old and new.

Hostel plan guarantees lodging in 45 cities

Register wins Bus/Econ medal

Eastern Airlines is offering active young adults a new answer to one of the major difficulties of summer vacation travel -- a quick, easy way to find comfortable, reasonably priced lodging at their destination. It's a modern approach to an old institution, the youth hostel.

Starting in June and continuing through August, Eastern's Hostel Plan will offer accommodations at $5.25 a night in university dormitories and selected hotels in 45 major cities throughout the U.S. as well as in Canada, Mexico, Jamaica and Puerto Rico.

Cities with Hostel Plan dorms or hotels include Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Chicago, Boston, New York, Washington, D. C., Atlanta, New Orleans and Miami.

No reservations are necessary, for the Hostel Plan guarantees a place to sleep. In the event a dormitory is filled, a representative at the dorm will find comparable lodgings elsewhere at the same price.

Maurice L. Kelley, Jr., vice president - marketing services for Eastern, said, "We're pleased to make our travel services for young adults more complete by offering reasonably priced lodging in addition to Eastern's Youth Fare. Eastern flies to many of the Hostel Plan cities and our Youth Fare provides discounts of about 25 percent from regular coach fare to anyone under 22 who has an Eastern Youth Card."

Use of the Hostel Plan requires the purchase of Bed Checks, available only from Eastern ticket counters or ticket offices. Each Bed Check costs $5.25 and is good for one night. They're also available in books. If not all Bed Checks are used, they will be completely refunded.

Eastern ticket counters also have a brochure that lists all dormitories or hotels participating in the Hostel Plan. More information is available from Eastern ticket and reservation offices.

After arriving at your destination, just go directly to the dormitory or hotel and check in with the Hostel Plan representative. Those staying at the dorm also will have free use of other university facilities, such as swimming pools, game and recreation areas and cafeterias.

Gigliotti gets chem award

Francis B. Gigliotti has been awarded a Certificate and a "CRC Handbook of Chemistry and Physics" by the Chemical Rubber Company for excellence as a student in freshman chemistry at UNC-Wilmington. Gigliotti maintained an average in the high 90's in both lecture and laboratory courses. He was a student of Drs. Lewis E. Nance and Ned H. Martin.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Gigliotti of Painsville, Ohio, he is a biology major.

Albert Neal Register has won THE WALL STREET JOURNAL Student Achievement Award in Business and Economics at UNC-W.

Selected by the faculty of the Department of Business and Economics for outstanding student achievement in the field of economics and business administration, Register will receive a specially designed silver medal and a year's subscription to THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

A member of the Business Club, Student Senate, and University Curriculum Committee, Register also served as a tutor in economics and accounting.

"THE LAST AMERICAN HERO," STOCK CAR THRILLER OPENS

"The Last American Hero," starring Jeff Bridges as a hard-charging young racing whiz, idol of the Southern tracks, is now playing at Oleander Cinema 1. Co-starring are Valerie Perrine, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Art Lund, Ned Beatty, and Tom Ligon.

Directed by Lamont Johnson, the film's title and subject derive from Tom Wolfe's article about the legendary Junior Johnson. "The Last American Hero is Junior Johnson. Yes!" which appeared in Esquire Magazine and later in the compilation of Wolfe articles called "The Kandy-Kolored Tangerine-Flake Streamline Baby."

In "The Last American Hero" Jeff Bridges plays not Johnson but Junior Jackson, a role based upon the early life and career of the legendary although contemporary Johnson whose folk-hero status stems only partially from the fact that his fast driving tricks were learned while running bootleg whiskey for his father.

Time in the film has been updated to take advantage of actual stock car and demolition derbies with sequences staged for the film interspersed. Junior Johnson was at his zenith as an anti-Establishment driver in 1963, a year in which he grossed $100,000 and was already idolized in his hometown and throughout the rural south. Jeff Bridges in the film is a young driver just at the beginning of his racing career, the stuff of which myths are made, not yet the myth. He is a driver of today.

"The Last American Hero" was directed on location in Virginia and the Carolinas by Lamont Johnson.

SECRETARIAT TAKES TRIPLE RACE CROWN

Secretariat, Wonder Horse of 1973, virtually walked away with the 105th running of the Belmont Stakes as he gained racing's coveted triple crown. The red three year old won the race by 31 lengths as he completely out classed the rest of the field. Although rumor has it Secretariat may run as a four year old, he has been sold by Meadow Stables for six million dollars plus to a syndicate of breeders with ownership beginning at the end of this racing season.

SANDLIN NAMED NAIA, DRAFTED BY CARDINALS

Dave Sandlin, star performer for Coach Bill Brooks baseball Hawks, has been named to the NAIA All-America squad. Dave, who has been Mr. Everthine for the Brooksmen these past four seasons, was the first person ever to capture such an award from our District 29 Conference. Not only the coaches think Dave is top calibre, but the St. Louis Cardinals drafted Dave in this summer's free agent draft. Dave will leave today to join the club's farm system in Tampa, Fla.

SOCCER IT TO 'EM

Bill Watkins, former standout goalie for the UNC-W seahawks, has reportedly received several offers from pro soccer teams requesting that he try out. Bill as of now has failed to do so, but the grapevine has it that he has had a change of heart and is considering a tryout with one of four clubs. If Bill should try out and make the squad, it would be a great tribute to the UNC-W athletic department, which now has placed two UNC-W baseball players in the pro ranks.

PARTY DELIGHTS

HAWKS NOW 3-1

The Seahawks of UNC-W season with three consecutive wins before dropping their fourth game to Louisville College. The Hawks three wins came on good pitching and timely hitting and the loss was a result of inability to cash in on base runners.

In the season opener, Duke Sanderson, junior southpaw from Virginia Beach, blanked the Pirates of ECU. The game, played on the home diamond, was marked by Dave Sandlin's first homer of the summer season. Dave's blast came in the Hawk's half of the eighth off reliever Joe Hehner. The shot cleared the 340 mark in left field. Pitcher Sanderson, used a combination of curves, fast balls, and good control as he held the Pirates scoreless, while his mates got him three runs. In the fourth inning UNC-W drew first blood as Howie Edgerton led off with a bloop double to right-center. Howie, then moved to third as Dave Sandlin doubled to left-center. Dave's smash was followed by a safety to the opposite field by third baseman Greg Dalton, allowing Edgerton to score. Then it was 1-2-3' as Bill Godwin, ECU Ace worked his way out of a jam. Two innings later, Dave Sandlin led off with a long fly ball to right which appeared to be caught, but was dropped allowing Dave to advance to third. Greg Dalton then lined out to right scoring Sandlin.

The second game was pitcher's duel against the Tarheels of UNC with Dave Sandlin going the distance to win 1-0. The Hawk's only run came in the fourth inning when Dave Sandlin was batted in by right fielder Duke Sanderson's safety or Duke Sanderson's safety. Dave had just reached third by virtue of a triple, one of a very few hits in the game. This victory ran the Seahawks record to three wins and no losses. The Hawks will give the Tarheels an opportunity to even the score Saturday night at Brook's Field. Probable starter for the Hawks will be Harry Kincaid who dropped his first decision to Louisville College Tuesday night.

In the third contest, the Seahawks remained undefeated as they downed the Camels of Campbell College 5-2. Dave Sandlin hit his second homer of the season and lefthander Paul Fulton went the distance to put Hawk's mark at 3-0 for the in addition to his homer, slammed a triple and two singles in five trips to the plate. Bill Warmack, the first baseman had three unglings and Bobby Schupp banged out three. Fulton went the distance for the Seahawks allowing two runs on ten hits and striking out four.

In Tuesday night's contest the Hawks suffered their first defeat of the summer season. This game was proclaimed as Dave Sandlin Night as Dave was presented with his All-American award. Harry Kincaid got the nod for the Hawks and had little trouble with the Hurricanes of Louisville except in the first inning when with one aboard, left fielder Ethridge banged a towering shot over the 340 mark in left field for a 2-0 Hurricane lead.

The final score was 2-1 as the Hawks did manage one marker in the fifth as pinch runner Stinger scored on third baseman Greg Dalton's safety to left. The Hawks could not seem to capitalize on their eight hits and much credit was given here to quality of the officiating. The game was marked with fans chiding and criticizing the umpires as several judgement calls seemed a bit inaccurate. The loss left the Hawks with a 3-1 mark with home games against ECU and UNC Friday and Saturday nights.

SECRETARIAT TAKES TRIPLE RACE CROWN

Secretariat, Wonder Horse of 1973, virtually walked away with the 105th running of the Belmont Stakes as he gained racing's coveted triple crown. The red three year old won the race by 31 lengths as he completely out classed the rest of the field. Although rumor has it Secretariat may run as a four year old, he has been sold by Meadow Stables for six million dollars plus to a syndicate of breeders with ownership beginning at the end of this racing season.

SANDLIN NAMED NAIA, DRAFTED BY CARDINALS

Dave Sandlin, star performer for Coach Bill Brooks baseball Hawks, has been named to the NAIA All-America squad. Dave, who has been Mr. Everything for the Brooksmen these past four seasons, was the first person ever to capture such an award from our District 29 Conference. Not only the coaches think Dave is top calibre, but the St. Louis Cardinals drafted Dave in this summer's free agent draft. Dave will leave today to join the club's farm system in Tampa, Fla.

SOCCER IT TO 'EM

Bill Watkins, former standout goalie for the UNC-W seahawks, has reportedly received several offers from pro soccer teams requesting that he try out. Bill as of now has failed to do so, but the grapevine has it that he has had a change of heart and is considering a tryout with one of four clubs. If Bill should try out and make the squad, it would be a great tribute to the UNC-W athletic department, which now has placed two UNC-W baseball players in the pro ranks.

HAWKS NOW 3-1

The Seahawks of UNC-W season with three consecutive wins before dropping their fourth game to Louisville College. The Hawks three wins came on good pitching and timely hitting and the loss was a result of inability to cash in on base runners.

In the season opener, Duke Sanderson, junior southpaw from Virginia Beach, blanked the Pirates of ECU. The game, played on the home diamond, was marked by Dave Sandlin's first homer of the summer season. Dave's blast came in the Hawk's half of the eighth off reliever Joe Hebner. The shot cleared the 340 mark in left field. Pitcher Sanderson, used a combination of curves, fast balls, and good control as he held the Pirates scoreless while his mates got him three runs. In the fourth inning UNC-W drew first blood as Howie Edgerton led off with a bloop double to right-center. Howie, then moved to third as Dave Sandlin doubled to left-center. Dave's smash was followed by a safety to the opposite field by third baseman Greg Dalton, allowing Edgerton to score. Then it was 1-2-3 as Bill Godwin, ECU Ace worked his way out of a jam. Two innings later, Dave Sandlin led off with a long fly ball to right which appeared to be caught, but was dropped allowing Dave to advance to third. 1. CITY HALL - THALIAN HALL. Northeast corner, Third and Princess Streets. This Classic Revival building was designed by John Trimmel of New York, and the cornerstone was laid December 27, 1853. Corinthian colonnade illustrated in this folder faces Third Street, and Thalian Hall, in which the first theatrical performance was given October 12, 1858, faces Princess Street. The Thalian Association was formed and had commenced theatrical performances by 1788; its first home occupied the Innes Academy, located on the same site.
2. NEW HANOVER COUNTY COURTHOUSE. Southeast corner, Third and Princess Streets. The courthouse is a red brick Victorian structure built in 1892.
3. ST. JAMES EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Southeast corner, Third and Market Streets. St. James Parish was established in 1729, construction of the first church edifice having been authorized in 1751. The present Gothic Revival building was designed by Thomas U. Walter of Philadelphia, and the cornerstone was laid in 1819. During the Federal occupation in 1865, the keys were seized, the pews removed, and the building used as a Federal Hospital.
4. BURGIN-WRIGHT HOUSE (CORNWALLIS HOUSE). Southwest corner, Third and Market Streets. This colonial house was built in 1772 by John Burgwin, merchant, Clerk of Council, and member of the upper house of the North Carolina Assembly. Foundation of the building was the town gaol. Authentic furnishings are used throughout the house. There is a separate three-story kitchen. In 1781, Lord Cornwallis used the house as his headquarters and the basement as a prison. Now owned by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in North Carolina, the building is open from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday at an admission charge of $1.00 for adults and 25c for students.
5. deROSSET HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Dock Streets. This Classic Revival house was built about 1853 by Dr. A. J. deRosset.
6. ST. THOMAS ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. 208 Dock Street. The cornerstone of this Gothic Revival building was laid in 1846, and the church was dedicated July 18, 1847. The noted James Cardinal Gibbons was vicar here in 1868.
7. MACRAE HOUSE. 108 South Third Street. This Victorian house was built about 1850 by Donald MacRae.
8. HART-KENAN HOUSE. 111 South Third Street. Built about 1850 by Levi Hart this Classic Revival structure has a carriage house which faces Cottage Lane.
9. SAVAGE HOUSE. 120 South Third Street. Col. Alfred Moore Waddell, historian, lived at one time in this Victorian house which was built about 1851 by Edward Savage.
10. ZEBULON LATIMER HOUSE. 126 South Third Street. This dwelling is a Classic Revival structure built for Zebulon Latimer in 1852 by K. B. Wood, or land purchased from Henry Savage. It is a fine example of the double house, with quarters and carriage house in the rear.
11. FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Third and Orange Streets. The original First Presbyterian Church was erected in 1817 on Front Street. The present building, designed by Hobart Upjohn, was completed in 1927. The Rev. Thomas Wilson, father of President Woodrow Wilson, served as minister of this church from 1873 to 1897.
12. HENRY G. LATIMER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Third and Orange Streets. This Victorian house, built in 1881, is now occupied by students of a local business college.
13. EDWARD LATIMER HOUSE. 208 South Third Street. This Victorian dwelling was built in 1881 by Edward Latimer.
14. DIOCESAN HOUSE. Southeast corner, Third and Ann Streets. This house was built by David R. Murchison in 1876 and was presented by his daughter to the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina.
15. DR. WILLIAM J. H. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Orange Streets. Of Classical Revival design, this dwelling was built about 1850 by R. B. Wood.
16. ST. JOHN'S ART GALLERY. 112 Orange Street. This building was originally occupied by St. John's Lodge on December 12, 1805. According to the minutes of the Lodge, the original design was signed January 27, 1803 and the cornerstone laid June 12, 1804. The building was designed by Joseph Jacobs and erected by Benjamin Jacobs.
17. ANDERSON HOUSE. Southeast corner, Front and Orange Streets. Built about 1830, incorporating an Eighteenth Century corner house, this was later the home of Dr. Edwin A. Anderson, Confederate States Army Surgeon. Dr. Anderson's office still stands in the rear, facing Front Street.
18. BROWN-LORD-GROOVER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Ann Streets. Alterations and additions have given this house a Victorian character, but the oldest part seems to date back to the Revolution. It was owned by Robert Wells, prior to 1790.
19. GOVERNOR DUDLEY HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Ann Streets. A Georgian structure built about 1830, this was the home of Edward Bishop Dudley, the first Governor of North Carolina elected by the people. Plans for building the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, of which Dudley was first president, were formulated here. Among outstanding guests entertained by Governor Dudley was the Hon. Daniel Webster, a guest in 1847.
20. CASSIDY-NEUBOLD HOUSE. 1 Church Street. This house was built in the early Nineteenth Century. In 1828 James Cassidy bought the lot, extending from Front Street to the channel of the Cape Fear River. Cassidy Brothers Shipyard and Marine Railway was located at the foot of Church Street.
21. CAMERON-DIXON HOUSE. 6 Church Street. Colonial architecture of the raised cottage type characterizes this late Eighteenth Century house which was bought by Captain George Cameron in 1800. An unusual hanging stairway adds charm to the interior.
22. BEERY HOUSE. Southeast corner, Second and Nun Streets. Built by Captain Benjamin W. Beery prior to 1818, the Beery House was used by Federal troops as a hospital after the fall of Fort Fisher.
23. COOK-WHITTED HOUSE. 125 South Fourth Street. There is an outside brick kitchen in the rear of this Colonial cottage, built in the late Eighteenth Century. This was the residence of Captain Silas Martin during the Civil War.
24. THE CATHOLIC CHURCH OF ST. MARY. Northeast corner, Fifth and Ann Streets. The cornerstone of this church was laid in 1909. The building was designed by Rafael Quastavina, Spanish architect.
25. SUTTON-HOWEY HOUSE. 222 South Fourth Street. Of Colonial design, this was the residence, prior to 1800, of Martha Moore, and her husband, Ephraim Sutton.
26. EILERS HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Orange Streets. Built by H. B. Eilers in the 1850's, this Victorian residence is a brick town house, known for its excellent cast iron work.
27. HATHAWAY-BONEY HOUSE. 120 South Fifth Street. Jacob Wessell built this Classic Revival residence about 1850. It was sold in 1818 to James L. Hathaway, a merchant who resided there until about 1865.
28. PRICE-TOOMER HOUSE. 123 South Fifth Street. This house was constructed in 1840 by Richard W. Price.
29. FARTHING HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Dock Streets. Constructed about 1850, the Farthing house has a well-designed porch with curving steps at either end.
30. WILLIAMS HOUSE. 10 South Fifth Street. Now known as the Azalea Apartments, this house was built by George W. Williams about 1869.
31. PRICE-GAUSE HOUSE. 512 Market Street. A Victorian structure with simple decorative details, this house was built around 1843.
32. ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Sixth and Market Streets. This church was organized in 1858; cornerstone for the Gothic Revival building was laid in 1859. It was used by Federal forces as a hospital in 1865.
33. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Rufus H. Bunnell designed this Classic Revival mansion, and it was built by Dr. John D. Bellamy in 1859. It was used as officers' quarters by Generals Porter, Terry, Colfax and Hawley after the fall of Fort Fisher. Of particular interest are the double parlors with original Confederate Period furnishings. The mansion is open to the public from 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission charge is fifty cents for adults, twenty-five cents for children.
34. FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH. Northwest corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Congregation of this church was organized in 1808. The lot was purchased in 1818, and the Gothic Revival edifice was constructed during the period 1859 to 1869.
35. WILMINGTON PUBLIC LIBRARY. 409 Market Street. Built about 1840 by John Allen Taylor as a residence, this building was bought in 1892 by the Wilmington Light Infantry and given by that organization to the City in 1955.
36. MARTIN-HUGGINS HOUSE. 412 Market Street. Built in 1869 by Alfred Martin, this was the residence of Captain John Newland Maffitt after his marriage to Emma Martin in 1870. Original carriage house still stands.
37. TEMPLE OF ISRAEL. Southeast corner, Fourth and Market Streets. The first Jewish congregation in North Carolina was organized in Wilmington in 1867. The Temple was erected 1875-76.
38. ST. JAMES CEMETERY. Southwest corner, Fourth and Market Streets. This cemetery contains many interesting headstones of Colonial citizens.

Story of 'Showboat' is something to see

Exciting episodes in the life of "The Immortal Showboat", the U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA, are brought to life in a sound-and-light spectacular nightly June 8 through Labor Day. The electronic blending of sound and light stimulates the imagination until audiences virtually see crewmen scurrying to battle stations, a torpedo ripping into the ship's portside and Kamikazes attacking from all sides.

Spectators sit in a 1,200 seat outdoor grandstand just off the port bow of the Battleship. A network of 169 high-fidelity speakers give excellent stereophonic audio and 369 lights of variable intensity and color create the Battleship's many moods. Special effects are used for highlights including simulated gunfire from light anti-aircraft 20mm and 40mm guns and the blast and flame of the larger 5 and 16 inch guns. A brilliant explosion at the waterline simulates the torpedo hit that reminds audiences the U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA took some punishment in her westward march to victory.

A quiet, grey Sunday at the SEAHAWK office, catching up on a perpetual backlog of work.

Then the cry of fire trucks, heading toward the dorm. Residents had, for safety, evacuated, and sat patiently on the lawn. Some joking, discussion of an upcoming test, a suggestion of rain. It was over before it started, confined primarily to a piece of furniture on a floor not occupied this summer.

Relief, a shrug of shoulders-back to the television, study, and work.

Problems endanger 73-74 Fledgling

Numerous problems were encountered in compiling this year's yearbook, THE FLEDGLING. The main problem, lack of staff members, has caused a great deal of concern on campus, and has been the contributing factor in discussion of discontinuation of the yearbook for next year.

'Camelot' splendor returns for special encore showings

After thrilling millions of people in its initial release and winning three Academy Awards, the Warner Bros. multi-million dollar Technicolor-Panavision presentation of "Camelot" has returned to Wilmington and is now playing at one of Oleander's Twin theatres for a special encore engagement. Materials were collected from all over the world for the 3,500 costumes worn by actors and actresses in the production.

Silk, cotton, linen chiffon, wool, tweed, crepe, organza, lame, leather and suede, and every other sewable material known to modern man went into the medieval trappings of the knights, ladies, couriers and clowns.

The estimated cost of the costumes alone for the exciting extravaganza of legendary love, jousting knights, adventurous quests and far-reaching ideals is placed at $2,250,000, which may well be a record for a motion picture and is assuredly a king's ransom in any age.

fees, the cost of the book is approximately $5 for each student. This is very little to invest in a yearbook, since it is considerably less than most textbooks. And a yearbook is a source of enjoyment for years (how many times have you seen your parents and friends point out a photo in their high school or college yearbook and say, "I dated John Doe before I met your father" or "I went to school with her and now she's married to -----"?).

Several staff positions on the FLEDGLING carry scholarships, and like few other extra-curricular activities on campus, students receive satisfaction of a very tangible nature.

The yearbook staff needs help!!! Buttke emphasizes. He has discussed the problem with many people on campus, and though he hasn't worked on a book since high school ("many years ago") he is willing to assume responsibilities for the book "until someone more qualified" volunteers.

Discontinuation of the book would have little other effect except simply that. Student fees would not be decreased, and the money would simply be reappropriated, possibly to finance organizations or activities affecting less students.

Buttke welcomes interested students to call him at 791-6364 or leave their name and number or address with Gwen Croom, Director of Public Information, in the Alderman Administration Building.

Letter to the Ed

Dear Kathi,

On behalf of the Wrightsville Beach Recreation & Community Improvement Committee and the Open Door, I would sincerely like to thank you for your article on our opening night at the Open Door.

Since your article appeared last week, I have gained three new staff members -- proof that people read "Summer Seahawk." Do drop down to see us often, and keep up the good work.

Again, many thanks,

Sincerely,
Debbi (Bowen)

~~~~~Eastern publishes free youth tourism guide~~~~~

A guidebook of spring and summer vacation ideas for young adults, describing such items as scuba diving in the Caribbean, surfing in Puerto Rico and seeing the sights from the Yucatan to Boston, has been published by Eastern Airlines.

Eastern's 'Part of the Earth Catalog' is available free at the airline's ticket counters. For Wilmington townies, being that we have no Eastern counter closer than Raleigh, the catalog is also free by calling 800-432-7700 (toll free). Similar in appearance and content to the popular "Whole Earth Catalog" series, Eastern's catalog provides an access to tourism for all active people.

The "Part of the Earth Catalog" is the result of research by a staff of young people who investigated cities and places Eastern serves and discovered interesting and specific reasons why young adults would want to visit them.

"The 'Part of the Earth Catalog' is the first of what we hope will be a continuing series," said Maurice L. Kelley, Jr., Eastern's vice president-marketing services. "The places Eastern flies to offer some unique experiences for younger people who aren't content with the usual vacation styles."

"We want those who use the catalog to tell us about their trips and offer their valuable information. Their advice and suggestions will be used to expand the book for the next edition."

Among the vacation suggestions in the "Part of the Earth Catalog" are a series of adventure trips conducted by LifeBound Ltd., the group headquartered in Colorado which provides learning experiences in natural environments.

There are LifeBound Scuba Safaris on St. Thomas in the U. S. Virgin Islands and on Cozumel Island near the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico. Visitors learn and practice scuba diving in transparent Caribbean waters along beautiful tropical reefs. The Cozumel scuba program includes an archeology trip to explore the ancient Mayan ruins of Tulum, which was a lonely, sen-try city as large as Seville when the Spanish discovered it in 1518.

One section of the catalog reports on Mexican archeology, giving the history of major works. The archeology section is a useful guide for a trip through the ancient Aztec and Mayan countryside of Mexico.

The catalog covers surfing in Puerto Rico, where more than 40 locations offer conditions that may be better than any beach in Hawaii or Australia. Rincon, on the north-west peninsula of Puerto Rico, was previously the site of the World Surfing Championships.

Eastern's Hostel Plan is included in the book. It's a dormitory access network for short-term housing at $5.25 a night in 45 cities across the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Jamaica. No reservations are needed after Bed Checks have been purchased at any Eastern ticket counter. Accommodations are guaranteed, and if no room is available, a room will be provided at another location.

Using the Hostel Plan to establish an operations base for visits to various cities, the catalog reviews specific reasons for visits to Atlanta, Montreal, Boston, New Orleans and Washington, D.C.

For example, the book cites Underground Atlanta, the historic gaslite area preserved beneath the streets of the modern city, Old Montreal's Place Victoria with numerous shops and boutiques, Boston's Beacon Hill and its fishing fleet on the waterfront, New Orleans' French Quarter, and the museums of Washington's Smithsonian Institute.

The catalog gives instructions on how to take a bicycle along as luggage and it tells about the more than 100 miles of bicycle paths in the Miami and South Florida area.

Eastern Airlines flies daily to nearly all the places in the "Part of the Earth Catalog" and offers discount Youth Fares, about 25 percent less than regular coach fare, to anyone under 22 who has an Eastern Youth Card. The Youth Card is available for $3 and proof of age at any Eastern ticket counter. It also enables travelers to purchase Bed Checks for the Hostel Plan and affords other discounts listed in the catalog.

AZALEA COAST

Attractions . . .

The City of Wilmington, nearby beaches, and the entire Azalea Coast area offers the tourist-vacationer an amazing variety of ways to enjoy his visit. As this booklet clearly shows, there is also a wide variety of accommodations for any budget. And not the least of the area's attractions is the friendly, gracious nature of its people. You'll enjoy your visit to the Azalea Coast.

BEACHES—Wrightsville Beach, Carolina Beach, and Kure Beach offer access to miles and miles of the finest strand along the Atlantic seaboard. All the customary seashore activities are available, plus the opportunity to relax in solid comfort under the bright Carolina sun.

FISHING—Fine charter fishing boats with experienced skippers are available for deep sea fishing at Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches. You may fish for the big ones in the Gulf Stream, or enjoy a short off-shore trip. There are six ocean piers and many miles of clean strand for surf fishing. New Hanover County boasts the world's largest fishing club.

GARDENS—The Azalea Coast is famous for its lovely gardens which reach their peak of beauty in the spring. The formal gardens surrounding the historic house at Orton Plantation are world famous. Airle Gardens is a wonderland of azaleas, camellias, charming lakes and walkways. Beautiful Greenfield Gardens surrounds a lovely lake and is open to visitors, admission free. Each April at Wilmington the height of the flower season is celebrated with the four-day North Carolina Azalea Festival.

SPORTS—Protected water and the broad Atlantic are both readily available to the boating enthusiast. Fine marinas and launching facilities are available for the smallest dinghy or the largest cruisers—power or sail. Water skiing, surfing, and swimming are quite popular. Golfers enjoy the Azalea Coast courses the year around. Tennis and hunting also are popular outdoor activities.

AMUSEMENTS—A variety of amusements, especially at the beaches is yours to enjoy. There are rides, miniature golf, par 3 golf, and many motion picture theatres. Excellent bowling facilities are available, and there are many fine restaurants, especially for seafood. The area boasts two television stations and several radio stations.

Oates resembles, plays 'Dillinger'

Bearing an actual physical resemblance to "Dillinger," Warren Oates heads the cast, fresh from starring roles in Universal's "Two-Lane Blacktop," and "The Hired Hand," with Peter Fonda and Verna Bloom.

Oates' versatility has been displayed in many varied roles since he made his debut as a regular on the "Stony Burke" television show. A few of his many roles include that of a voyeur policeman in "Heat of the Night," a profligate gunman in "The Wild Bunch."

Now he is meeting the challenge of recreating the elusive, swashbuckling, professional bank robber, John Dillinger.

professional bank robber, John Dillinger.

Making her exciting motion picture debut as Billie Frechette, inamorata of Dillinger is Michelle Phillips. As a founder and permanent member of the famed singing group, "The Mamas and the Papas," the beautiful Miss Phillips is well known to music aficionados all over the world.

Now she is adding a new dimension to her career in a diverse, challenging role. Billie Frechette was probably the one true love in John Dillinger's life.

Although he tried desperately to cling to his teenage marriage to Beryl Hovius, separation caused by his long first prison sentence broke them up, Dillinger constantly sought the companionship of attractive women and seldom missed an opportunity for a conquest but Billie seemed to have changed all that.

She became his constant companion, friend, lover, wife and mother all rolled into one. Recreating this real-life multi-dimensional character is a role designed to test the talents of any actress.

Academy Award winner Ben Johnson will portray Melvin Purvis, Chicago Head of the FBI, whose dogged, determined pursuit of Dillinger led to the desperado's death in front of Chicago's Biograph Theatre in 1934. Johnson won the Academy Award for Best Performance by an actor in a Supporting Role in 1971. He was also honored in the same category by The New York Film Critics. His most recent screen credits are co-starring roles with Henry Fonda in, "The Red Pony," a motion picture made for television and, prior to that, "The Get Away," in which he was teamed with Steve McQueen and Ali McGraw. Now as Melvin Purvis, intrepid, cigar smoking FBI chief, he portrays a character almost as flamboyant as that of the bank robber he pursues to the end.

"DILLINGER" is currently playing at Long Leaf Cinema 1.

'Say buddy,'

'Haven't I seen you somewhere before?'

by duff watkins
As it turned out, I had indeed seen 6' 11" Randy Denton before, many times on the ACC game of the week; yet somehow he looks somewhat different when you are on the same court with him, as tall as eight feet maybe. Quite naturally I had to initiate a conversation, so I started off with what must be the all time favorite: "Say, uh, how tall are you?" To which Denton replied calmly, "Oh, about 6' 10" or 6' 11", I really don't know." "Gee," says I, "you sure look taller."

"Must be the hair," said Denton, and on we went shooting the jive and occasionally the ball.

In case basketball is not your thing, Randy Denton played and starred for Duke University from 1967-1970. Upon graduating from Duke, Randy signed with the Carolina Cougars of the ABA.

After a season on the bench behind Jim McDaniels, Denton was traded to Memphis. Although Randy spoke of the displeasure of being traded (the player has no say so when traded) he did feel as if he enjoyed starting for Memphis more than he enjoyed watching from the bench for Carolina.

He spoke of Memphis owner Charlie Finley and the tremendous season the Cougars have just enjoyed. Denton expressed a desire to rejoin the Cougars and play ball with the likes of Billy Cunningham, who Denton feels has turned the franchise around to a very sound club.

I questioned Randy about his fellow players in the ABA, Julius Erving, George McGinnis, and Srtis Gilmore: "Julius----- the best! Unbelievable quickness. McGinnis, has a 44" chest and a 33" waist, a real monster! Artis Gilmore is probably the best all-around center in the ABA. He is a tremendous shot retractor but tends to have problems with the outside shot, say from 12 feet out."

While learning "Who's Who" in the ABA, I couldn't stop wondering what brought Randy Denton to Wilmington and especially UNC-W. Upon inquiring, I discovered Randy's wife has friends in Wilmington and the Dentons were here visiting and enjoying the off-season.

Finally, came the inevitable --- a game of two on two with Denton. The teams evolved into Randy and Joe (UNC-W student,) and T.R. (Hawks Sports Editor) and me.

Despite giving away nearly a foot in height to Denton, I did manage to stay on the court. I must admit he did shoot my eyes out, block three or more of my shots, out rebound me by an average of

Seahawks back on winning track

After consecutive losses to Pembroke State and Louisburg College, the UNC-W nine rallied behind clutch pitching from Duke Sanderson to beat East Carolina 4-2 in Carolina Conference summer play.

The victory was very sweet to Coach Bill Brooks and the Hawks as it helped heal the wounds received from a trouncing (12-0) from regular season champs Pembroke State. Lefthander Sanderson, already victorious on a previous start this summer against E.C.U., has a record of two wins against no losses thus far this summer.

Duke was never seriously threatened until the seventh inning when, with the bases loaded and only one out, he got out of apparent disaster by a brilliant double play to end the inning.

The Hawks were to play unc-Chapel Hill last Saturday night, but the game was called due to rain. Games played or to be played this week include: Tuesday at Campbell; Wednesday, Louisburg at Brook's field; Friday, Pembroke; and Saturday with the Pirates of ECU again visiting the Brooksmen.

There is a possibility, if the current rotation is in effect, that Duke Sanderson will again start against ECU. It would appear to be wise to pitch someone else against the Pirates allowing for the law of percentages, but should Sanderson start against the Bucs, maybe he can continue his mastery of the Pirate's bats.

nine to one, force me to take most of my shots from the parking lot, and generally led me to understand why he was one of the premiere players in the ABA.

With Denton in the pivot, T.R.'s sure layups were turned into out-of-bounds plays, and as you may have surmised by now-----we lost. The thing which seemed even more amazing to me was Denton's fine body control.

For a man almost even correction

For a man almost seven feet tall, Randy was very agile (even more so than the three of us attempting to keep up with this behemoth). Randy seemed deadly from the range of fifteen feet in, and had a special flair and a certain amount of pride for his hook-shot which he developed since running into the likes of Artis Gilmore.

To close this memorable occasion, I recalled something Denton had said before we began playing. This recollection came during the game as Randy broke by me, drove left avoiding T.R., lept into the air making a sweeping circular gesture with his right arm (Denton shoots, or was shooting righthanded) and crammed the ball into the hoop causing the backboard to quake, and his audience of three to shudder.

It was at this point I recalled earlier Denton had said, "I've been laying off for two months now and I'm in really terrible shape." As I reminisced and the tri-colored ABA ball spun through the cords-----I stood helplessly watching, thinking silently how nice it must be to be in such 'terrible shape'.

Fall hoop schedule set

The schedule for the 1973-74 basketball season has been announced by the UNC-W athletic department. The schedule consists of twenty-five games with twelve of these contests to be played on the home court.

Coach Mel Gibson is looking forward to his second season as head coach for the Hawk cagers with Mike Cherry (last season's MVP), Willie Jackson (transfer from Spartanburg J.C. with 19.9 per game average), and a host of lettermen from last year's team.

K. C. JONES TO COACH CAPITAL BULLETS

The former Baltimore Bullets, now known as the Capital Bullets, not only have a new home, but also a new head coach. K. C. Jones has reached an agreement with owner Abe Pollin to coach the Bullets for at least the next three years. Jones, former star with the Boston Celtics, resigned his position with the San Diego Conquistadors to take the job with the Bullets. Jones said he hoped to improve the Bullets' defense, as they seem to have a very strong offense and should prove to be a sound ball club.

THOMAS TO PLAY IN SAN DIEGO

Duane Thomas, premier NFL running back, has apparently come to grips with himself and the San Diego management and plans to play ball this season.

Thomas has been the subject of much attention in the last two seasons due to his unwillingness to conform to club standards at both Dallas and San Diego. Abner Haynes, Thomas' agent, feels Thomas has been working on his attitude and will be ready to play.

Freshmen on campus this week for orientation, registration

At last count, approximately 400 freshmen are expected on campus Sunday, June 24, through Friday, June 29. The students will be attending one of two summer orientation periods set for the week.

They will have a chance to see the campus before plunging into study and the routine of campus life, and they will also be taking placement exams and registration for fall courses.

Reach out to help others

Want to help?

There are numerous ways in which college students can gain a rewarding experience by helping others.

With the problems of the times have come new solutions. One type of solution for today's frustration is the outreach house or the alternative.

Open House, a 24-hour face-to-face emergency help center, offers informal counseling, referral, education, and alternative activities to youths with problems. The House, at 610 Market St., also provides a place to crash.

Open Door, a newer facility opened at Wrightsville Beach (506 Causeway Drive), is an alternative recreational facility geared especially for youth 13-18 years old.

ting for fall courses.

The orientation periods have been carefully planned, and are greatly expanded from previous years.

Underclassmen will begin checking into the dorm at 2 p.m. on Sunday, but the real action will begin Monday morning, when placement exams and a library open house are slated.

Some social events have been planned for the new students, and the orientation and academic counseling will aid them prior to the registration periods on Tuesday.

A second group will begin to check into the dorm on Wednesday afternoon, and they will enjoy a similar schedule of activities.

Some upperclassmen, SGA officials, and many UNC-W faculty and staff members will be on hand during the orientation periods to answer questions.

A fair weather forecast can be predicted for the orientation week, figuratively, at least, due to the great expansion and preliminary preparation, as well as the summer dates slated well in advance of the start of fall semester.

There will be an additional orientation and registration for transfers and freshmen unable to attend next week's program, to be held Aug. 22-24.

The story of "The Immortal Showboat" is told from commissioning on April 9, 1941, through battles of the 12 major campaigns of the Pacific Theatre leading to victory at sea in World War II. The script was written by award - winner Earle Luby, author of the CBS television series "The Twentieth Century." The renowned Bernie Green conducted 40 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to produce the background music. Alexander Scourby narrates while Walter Abel and others bring life and feeling to the dialogue. The voices of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, President Harry S. Truman, Sir Winston Churchill and Adolph Hitler are heard. The U.S. Navy contributed many special effects.

The hour - long production of "The Immortal Showboat" is an action - packed lesson in history and patriotism for the family. It is presented nightly during the summer months at 9 p.m. Admission for adults is $1.50 and 75¢ for children from six through eleven. Children under six are admitted free.

BASEBALL IS A BIG DEAL here, and with reason. We have some fine players. This year, in the pro free agent draft, the Hawks' Mr. Everything, Dave Sandlin, and outstanding hitter and moundman, was chosen by the St. Louis Cardinals pro ball team. He left recently to train with the Cards' farm team in Florida.

EVEN THE STUDY can be fun, rising sophomore Dale Bryan seems to say. Under adviser Dr. Ned Martin, Dale undertook an independent study project in chemistry funded by the Multiple Abilities Program for creative students.

WE MAY NOT BE another UCLA, but the Hawk games are action-packed. One of our men shoots for TWO.

RAIN DAMPENED THE DAY AND THE grounds to prevent the Greek Day games, but it didn't dampen the spirits, and the Championship Basketball game stirred the enthusiasm of all students (Greeks, guests, and non-Greeks) until it reached fever pitch with the dance in the Pub. The sisters made posters to publicize the events, open to all students.

Have you felt
Can you FEEL?

BASEBALL IS A BIG DEAL here, and with reason. We have some fine players. This year, in the pro free agent draft, the Hawks' Mr. Everything, Dave Sandlin, and outstanding hitter and moundman, was chosen by the St. Louis Cardinals pro ball team. He left recently to train with the Cards' farm team in Florida.

EVEN THE STUDY can be fun, rising sophomore Dale Bryan seems to say. Under adviser Dr. Ned Martin, Dale undertook an independent study project in chemistry funded by the Multiple Abilities Program for creative students.

WE MAY NOT BE another UCLA, but the Hawk games are action-packed. One of our men shoots for TWO.

RAIN DAMPENED THE DAY AND THE grounds to prevent the Greek Day games, but it didn't dampen the spirits, and the Championship Basketball game stirred the enthusiasm of all students (Greeks, guests, and non-Greeks) until it reached fever pitch with the dance in the Pub. The sisters made posters to publicize the events, open to all students.

Annual Faces crisis

Numerous problems were encountered in compiling this year's yearbook, THE FLEDGLING. The main problem lack of staff members, has caused a great deal of concern on campus, and has been the contributing factor in discussion of discontinuation of the yearbook for next year.

We cannot allow this to happen, voices senior Thomas Buttkie, who hopes to arouse more concern over the problem of the endangered book.

Through appropriations made by the Student Government with a portion of student fees, the cost of the book is approximately $5 for each student. This is very little to invest in a yearbook, since it is considerably less than most textbooks. And a yearbook, is a source of enjoyment for years (how many times have you seen your parents and friends point out a photo in their high school or college yearbook and say, "I dated John Doe before I met your father" or "I went to school with her and now she's married to ----"?).

Several staff positions on the FLEDGLING carry scholarships, and like few other extra-curricular activities on campus, students receive satisfaction of a very tangible nature. The yearbook staff needs help!!!

Discontinuation of the book would have little other effect except simply that. Student fees would not be decreased, and the money would simply be reappropriated, possibly to finance organizations or activities affecting less students.

Buttkie welcomes interested students to call him at 791-6364 or to leave their name and number or address with Gwen Croom, Director of Public Information, in the Alderman Administration Building.

Information on a free coffee and donut hour sponsored by the three campus publications will be announced soon, and incoming freshmen are encouraged to participate by discussing their ideas with the publications representatives.

Bookstore offers all school supplies, gifts, magazines

The University Bookstore, located in the Student Services Building, (Pub) stocks required textbooks, varied interest books, art and general school supplies, as well as examination blue books. Campus clothing and gift items are also available. The bookstore is open between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., Monday - Friday.

Upon presentation of a University I.D. card, the bookstore will cash small checks for students.

Organization assists educational balance

Recognizing the challenge faced by college students, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Student Association is established to assist students in balancing their academic, social, cultural, and religious education at UNC-W.

Membership includes all members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who are students at UNC-W and is open to all other students regardless of race, color, or creed, who desire to belong to this Association and are willing to maintain its standards.

The International governing body of the Student Association is the General Executive Committee with a local governing body of the Latter-day Saints Student Council.

Anyone interested in the Student Association activities should contact Dr. Frank Allen, advisor. Posters will be placed around campus this fall announcing activities.

Seahawk seeks freshman staff

After a sad excuse for news presentation fall semester, THE SEAHAWK changed staff and format last spring and became an effective part of vital campus communication. But even with the changes, the staff remained small, preventing the most thorough exchange of ideas and concepts.

We want to change that.

We invite all freshmen, whether or not they have interest or experience, to come by the office downstairs in the Pub, and view the equipment and facilities that will produce their weekly guide to activities and forum for their ideas.

There will be a member of the staff on duty during the "free time" periods 4-5:30 p.m. Thursday, June 28 and Monday, June 25. He will be available to explain our procedures, equipment, and policies and to interview informally those who are interested in joining the newspaper staff.

There will be several scholarships available to students who wish to work on the paper and are awarded at the discretion of the editor, Kathi Beall.

THE SEAHAWK is an excellent opportunity for those with experience in working on high school papers to continue a meaningful journalistic extra-curricular activity, and for those without experience, it is a chance to learn to express themselves through writing, photography, art work, and editing.

Several "seasoned" editors and staff members have the experience and desire to channel trained and untrained enthusiasm into productive and rewarding veins.

Even if you just want to see how it's done, the staff members are great talkers as well as listeners, enthusiastic about the publication, and interested in your ideas—about life, the school, and the paper. These are a bulletin board on the door and a mailbox for notes right across the hall, just in case there's no one "at home" when you drop by. Leave a note with your name, phone number, address or how we can get up with you.

REV. MILTON BOONE, minister on campus Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, doesn't hide behind an office door. He enjoys talking and listening to students, and can easily be located walking around campus, talking in the Pub, or having coffee in the snack bar.

Boone functions as religious outreach

Milton Boone is Campus Minister at UNC-W as a Christian resource person to students, faculty and staff. Working through a board of directors known as United Christian Campus Ministry, Boone functions as an outreach of the churches in the Wilmington area challenging people to live out the Christian Gospel in an academic community.

Our minister is a listener who shares your religious interests and personal concerns with understanding. He is on campus Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays.

He has no office to hide him, and functions best on the sidewalk, under a tree or behind a cup of coffee. He'd like to meet you.

Atlantis publishes student writing, art

The ATLANTIS is the literary magazine published twice a year by the students of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. Printed between its covers are short stories, essays, poems and art works representative of the creative talents present on our campus.

In order to make our magazine truly representative of this wide spectrum of talent, we need a big staff, and lots of contributors. Anyone who is interested in any form of literature or art is qualified to be a staff member and is urged to contact the Editor, Leigh Eaton, either in the ATLANTIS or at home.

Contributions to the magazine should be placed in the ATLANTIS office located in the Pub. It's up to the students of UNC-W to make this the best year ever for the NEW ATLANTIS!

Health coverage recommended

Anyone not having health and accident insurance is strongly urged to consider the coverage available under the Student Hospitalization and Surgical Insurance Plan. All students are eligible to participate, at a cost of $27.00 per year, and receive coverage 24 hrs. a day, from August, 1973 through August 1974. Applications are available during this Orientation and in the Student Affairs Office, Room 113, Alderman Administration Building.

"WE WANT STUDENT IDEAS," says Kathi Beall, Seahawk editor. Students with questions or comments on the paper's format or coverage are urged to stop her on campus, or come by the office downstairs in the Pub.

Free counseling, testing center assists students with questions

Counseling and Testing services are available to all University of North Carolina at Wilmington students without charge. Counseling is designed to assist students who have questions concerning their educational - vocational training or problems which prevent them from realizing their potential. Counseling involves confiding dental interviews with a professional counselor and use of psychological tests when appropriate.

Appointments for interviews may be made by visiting the Center in Room 217 of the Administration Building or by phoning ext. 242.

The Counseling and Testing Center also administers group testing programs. These include entrance exams, freshman tests, placement tests and tests required by professional and graduate schools.

Lost and Found

Lost and Found articles can best be located by checking with Ms. Linda Moore, Director of Student Activities, in the Pub. Any article you find on campus should also be turned in to her office.

BARRY ASBURY is advertising director for the newspaper. As a member of its editorial board, he encourages students to stop him anytime to discuss the paper.

'Pub' serves student needs

Governed by the Student Government and the Director of Student Activities, the "Pub" is a flexible, multi-purpose building here to serve student needs. It contains the Bookstore and the offices of the Student Government Association, ATLANTIS, FLEDGLING, SEAHAWK, and the Director of Student Activities.

Two recreation areas provide room for meetings, parties, and casual get-togethers. Pool, ping-pong, television, football, chess, and checkers are available, along with a stereo system to play records or tapes brought in.

Several bulletin boards, a display case, and club mailboxes provide a means of communication.

freshman seahawk

the freshman seahawk is published especially for freshman orientation by the unc-w student affairs staff.

this issue was compiled and coordinated by ms. linda moore, director of student activities, and edited by kathi beall, seahawk editor, assisted by barry asbury, mast head design by bert beall.

Financial Aid Office provides money for students' education

There are many different ways a student can earn money for his education. Larry Crowder, the Student Financial Aid Director, is the best source for this information. He has ideas as well as application blanks for the aid programs listed below. Stop in and see Mr. Crowder any time!

SCHOLARSHIPS: Scholarship awards are given to students who demonstrate financial need, character, leadership and scholarship. These awards may be made by the institutions or by outside organizations. Several student positions on the SEAHAWK and FLEDGLING staffs and in the Student Government are rewarded by scholarships.

EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY GRANTS: Educational Opportunity Grants provide financial aid to students of exceptional financial need, who, for lack of financial means of their own or of their families, would be unable to enter or remain in this institution without such assistance. Students who qualify may be eligible for a grant of up to $1000 per year.

NATIONAL DEFENSE STUDENT loans: Students who can demonstrate financial need and who are taking at least half-time course loads may borrow up to $1000 each academic year up to $5000. The repayment and interest periods begin nine months after a student ends his studies. The loan bears interest at three per cent per year. Prior to graduation or other discontinuation of studies, borrowers in the program are expected to have exit interviews with the Financial Aid office to establish a repayment schedule.

BASIC OPPORTUNITY GRANTS: The Basic Opportunity Grant Programs, more commonly known as Basic Grants, is a new program of student financial aid. This program provides for grants of $1400 (less the expected family contribution) for all eligible students to assist them in meeting educational costs.

In order for a student to receive a Basic Grant, he must have been accepted for enrollment in, or be in good standing at, an eligible institution of higher education. Also, he must be enrolled on at least a half-time basis.

The system for the determination of the family contribution, as well as the program regulations, procedures, and guidelines necessary for implementation of the program are currently being developed.

COLLEGE WORK-STUDY: Students from low-income families are eligible to apply for employment in on-campus jobs under federal work-study programs. Students may work up to fifteen hours weekly while attending classes full-time. Summer employment is also provided off-campus for students who show evidence of financial need. The student is expected to save 80 per cent of his earnings for college expenses during the following year.

COLLEGE FOUNDATION, INC.: Under the Federal Guaranteed Loan, North Carolina students are eligible to borrow up to $7500 for undergraduate study and this maximum may be extended to $10,000 for those who wish to borrow for graduate and professional study. The annual percentage rate is seven per cent simple interest. Upon termination of enrollment, each borrower is allowed at least nine months grace before repayment begins.

PROSPECTIVE TEACHER LOANS: Recipients are eligible to receive $600 per academic year when enrolled in a full-time teacher education program. Repayment may be made by teaching in North Carolina schools after graduation. Application must be made by March 1 of the year of expected fall enrollment.

STUDENT EMPLOYMENT: Students may apply for employment on-campus under state-supported work assistance programs. Students may work up to eight hours weekly under these programs if they are enrolled full-time.

ATHLETIC AWARDS: Athletic awards in varying amounts are available to qualified students who participate in intercollegiate basketball and baseball. For information, see the Director of Athletics.

For information on all aspects of financial aid, Crowder is the man to see.

Use of computing center urged for individual, classes

The Computing Center, located on the second floor of Hoggard Hall, is equipped with a high-speed multi-leaving terminal transmitting at 800 cards per minute and receiving at 600 lines per minute. A card punch and a plotter are also attached. The UNC-W terminal is connected to the Triangle Universities Computation Center by a dedicated telephone circuit.

The university has access to the full resources of TUCC's IBM 370/165 computer, including two million bytes of core storage and 800 million bytes of online storage. In addition, TUCC has 8 setup disk drives and five tape units. This system supports all standard languages and many special purpose processors.

The university has several conversational terminals located on campus that are connected to TUCC through a unique software interface. cps, basic, and APL are available to faculty and students through these machines.

The university encourages the use of the center for individual and class projects. Key punches, references material and assistance are available to students and faculty in the User Room.

The Computing Center has a Xerox copy service available to all faculty and students. Material to be copied should be left with the Dispatcher in the User Room.

Career, placement services available to students

The Career Planning and Placement Office, located in Room 113 of the Administration Building is designed to assist students in identifying and implementing their career goals from the freshman year through graduation.

This office also co-ordinates and arranges job interviews between seniors and employer representatives that are scheduled for campus visitations. If there is a particular company or firm that is not scheduled to send a representative to the campus, upon the request of students, efforts will be made to contact that particular employer. Therefore, seniors interested in securing employment should contact this office early in the academic year and make appointments for job interviews.

Employment opportunities for other students at the University are also available through this office ranging from part-time to full-time positions. Students that are interested in gaining employment should register with the office, listing the type of work desired, special skills, qualifications and hours available for work.

Office serves vets

The office for veterans' affairs is located in Room 113 of the Administration Building. Veterans enrolling for the first time are urged to contact this office to receive complete information concerning their responsibilities.

In order to receive benefits, veteran students must apply every academic term in which they are registered. All veterans are reminded that it is their responsibility to contact this office in case of any change in their academic status.

SRO Straw - Hat Theatre operates as artistic outlet

The S.R.O. Straw - Hat Theatre operates as the artistic and cultural outlet during the summer months on the UNC-W campus.

In the summer of 1959, the first of the S.R.O. Straw-Hat Theatre productions was mounted in the Old Isaac Bear Building on Market Street, the original home of Wilmington College.

During the summer of 1968, summer stock was originated on campus with six productions being presented in a six-weeks period, approximately from July 1 through August 10. Try-outs for the 1973 season, held in early June, were open to all students of UNC-W and residents within the area. Since its inception, it has presented Broadway, Classic, original and musical plays. This program exposes students of UNC-W and other branches of the consolidated university to the unique educational experience of working under summer stock and professional conditions.

The program this year will offer as its first production from June 26 through July 1 "FIDDLER ON THE ROOF" and will be staged in the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium. This is the most moving and memorable musical of modern theatrical history. Tevye, a dairyman, along with his wife and five daughters, comprise one of the hard-working families of the community. Here these people live as their forefathers did, observing the ways handed down to them, following the dictates of "tradition".

This will be followed by six more productions alternating between the large theatre in Kenan Auditorium and the small theatre in Kenan Hall. The productions and their dates are as follows:

|------------|-----------------------------------|
| July 3-8   | "The Drunkard"                    |
| July 10-15 | "Butterflies Are Free"            |
| July 17-22 | "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" |

|                |                                                         |
|----------------|---------------------------------------------------------|
| July 24-29     | "The Mousetrap"                                         |
| July 31-Aug. 5 | "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" |
| Aug. 7-12      | "Brigadoon"                                             |

Season tickets are now on sale and will be offered during the first week's production at the box office. Individual tickets may also be purchased at the box office. Reservations may be made in advance by calling the box office in the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium from 2 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday at 791-9695 - and by calling 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

EVEN THE COMMUNITY realizes the potential and responsibility of today's college student, as evidenced by the UNC-W Night sponsored by NCNB. Students were fed and beveraged as they received instruction on how to use the bank's NCNB 24 check cashing service.

*****SGA needs help*****

The SGA, like the University, is undergoing a tremendous rate of growth. With increased enrollment and more student activities taking place on campus, the SGA needs student manpower in many capacities. The Student Senate allotted over $44,000 of student money to various committees.

This is a large figure, but not nearly as significant as the intangible value that students contribute to the administration in ideas and opinions. Believe it or not, the administration is anxious to hear student opinion and invites student representation in nearly all policy making decisions.

To effectively voice student opinion, there needs to be a strong and efficient student organization. This organization is the SGA. Not only does the SGA collaborate with the university on policy matters, but it is directly responsible for all student activities.

Always there is a need for student help. Know anything about the technical operation of concerts? Want to learn? Join the SGA Concert Committee. Interested in ecology or student rights? There is a job to be filled if you have the time to undertake it. This is an opportunity to extend what you have learned in the classroom to a practical application.

Ever wonder, other than the basic $130 for tuition, where the $50 or so goes that students pay in fees each semester? The finance committee is publishing these figures. This committee, like all others, welcomes new members. With greater student participation, this simply means more student activities--more movies, more concerts, more dances, more everything.

Below are listed a few of the student committees. Be prepared, when you return in the fall, to participate in a few of these. If these don't meet your fancy, plan some of your own.

The Student Consumer Advocate Group is primarily concerned with the student and his money. With high and rising prices, how to get the most for the dollar you spend is important. Your landlord rip you off? Send some money off and didn't receive the goods? This is a group of students working in the students' interests. If you experience a problem don't hesitate to drop by the SGA office and see if this committee may help.

The UNC-W Concert Committee brings to Wilmington bands that would book totally for over $100,000 in a budget of around $6000. This committee has recently brought such bands as Yes (twice), Tranquility (twice), JoJo Gunne, Argent, Rory Gallagher, Savoy Brown, Steeleye Dan, Gentle Giant, Blood, Sweat, and Tears, Billy Preston, Dr. Hook, Goose Creek, John Sebastian, and more. Anyone interested in working with the production of one of these concerts should see Wes Knappe, committee chairman.

The Dance Committee put on some really swinging dances last year and next year can't help but be better. Some of the dances featured as many as fifteen kegs of free beer. The bands, with or without the beer, were excellent.

The Fine Arts Committee is bringing 23 movies to Kenan Auditorium next ***** year at a price of eight cents each. "The Poseidon Adventure," "Woodstock," "Fritz the Cat," and many other current releases are scheduled and season tickets are available for two dollars. Admission at the door is fifty cents. Also this committee has scheduled Pat Paulsen, past presidential candidate and comedian, to speak here. The movies and guest lecturers this committee provides gives students that "something to do" on campus.

Still concerned with entertainment, the Video Tape Committee provides video taped programs. These programs may be ordered on every type of entertainment around. Ballet, comedy, or drama are available on taped programs to be viewed on a special television set. This committee has great potential not only in providing pre-taped programs, but they soon hope to buy a camera to make their own shows.

With all this entertainment, there are also activities available along academic pursuits. THE FLEDGLING (yearbook) needs a competent staff. Kathi Beall, the editor of the SEAHAWK, always welcomes help with the newspaper. The ATLANTIS, the student literary publication, solicits student writing and art, and also needs staff members.

Students are needed in many areas. Please drop by the SGA office in the Pub or ask someone how you can become involved. It is extremely important that students participate. It's for your own good.

Any students interested in running for a class position as president, vice president, or senator should see Bill Renn, SGA President, for more information. The SGA office will be open during orientation with SGA officials there to answer questions.

BILL RENN, STUDENT GOVERNMENT president, encourages all interested students to take part in the running of their student government. He works in the Pub three days weekly, and can

Wind ensemble lends instrumental experience

The Wind Ensemble is organized each semester in order to provide instrumental music experience for those students who desire it. Membership is open to any student who has had instrumental experience, with the approval of the director, and any participant may earn credit. The Wind Ensemble and its smaller ensembles regularly provide music for University functions, civic groups, church groups, and radio and television.

Participation by non-music majors may be supplemented by private lessons, also for credit. Participation in either a vocal or instrumental organization is required of all music majors.

The University Wind Ensemble presents at least two concerts a year and participates in the large stage productions of the Music and Drama Departments.

Faculty and student recitals and special senior recitals are presented by the music department free of charge. The public, and especially all students, are invited to attend.

PE Dept. sponsors men's, women's intramurals

The Physical Education Department organizes and administers the intramural activities for both men and women each semester. This past year, competition was open in frisbee tossing, surfing, and horseshoe throwing, as well as the usual campus sports. Watch for the announcements!

UNC-W BOASTS ACTION PACKED athletic seasons, be it soccer, wrestling, basketball, golf, or baseball.

Orchestra gives four concerts

The UNC-W Community Orchestra seeks to give citizens as well as students the opportunity to use their musical talents in a cooperative endeavor. Four concerts are given during the school year.

Rehearsals are held each Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30. UNC-W students receive on credit hour per semester. Interested students should contact William Adcock in Kenan Hall, Room 116, for information on auditions.

Varsity games free

The University competes each year in soccer, basketball, baseball, golf, tennis, and wrestling. Baseball games are played at Brook's Field and basketball games are played in Hanover Hall.

All regularly enrolled students of the University who have paid the appropriate general fee are admitted without charge to all regular varsity games. Students are urged to support the University teams by attending home games and matches and sitting in the regular cheering section.

During the fall semester seven students are selected to serve as cheerleaders for the University athletic teams. Cheerleaders lead the cheering at games and contribute much to the morale of the teams.

University Theatre trains students

The University Theatre is the producing unit of the Department of Drama and Speech. Its primary functions in the developing University atmosphere is to train students to utilize their abilities to the fullest of their potential in the production of theatre and to provide cultural experiences for the student body, the faculty, and the surrounding community.

This basic dual function is supported by a full season of plays encompassing all important genres of dramatic literature. The plays are open for all students and community participation but primary consideration is given to university students. Five major productions are planned for the academic year with the possibility of student production work supported as the demand arises.

The University Theatre, through faculty participation, is affiliated with The Carolina Dramatic Association, The North Carolina Theatre Association, The Southeastern Theatre Association, and The American Theatre Association.

The Theatre will present as major productions in the academic year 1973-74 the following plays:

Three Penny Opera
The Knight of the Burning Pestle
Leonce and Lena
The Caretaker
"Studio 74"

All our plays exist for our students. The productions are open for any student to participate in any area. We want to welcome and encourage all new students to work with the University Theatre as either a participant or an audience.

Singers earn credit in vocal ensembles

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington Mixed Chorus is organized each semester in order to provide vocal musical experience for those students who desire it. Membership is open to any student in the University, with the approval of the director, and any participant may earn credit.

The University Mixed Chorus and its smaller ensembles regularly provide music for University functions, civic clubs, church groups, radio and television. The small ensembles or groups depend on the composition and interest of the complete mixed chorus.

Participation by non-music majors may be supplemented by private lessons also for credit. Participation in either a vocal or instrumental organization is required of all music majors.

The University Mixed Chorus presents at least two concerts a year and participates in the large stage productions of Music and Drama Departments. In addition, the University Mixed Chorus and its smaller groups have acted as ambassadors to many of the high schools in the surrounding area.

READING, STUDYING, listening, typing, making photostat copies--the library houses all the facilities for students' homework needs, as well as for relaxation.

Library houses 90,000 volumes

The William Madison Randall Library has a book collection of over 90,000 volumes as well as recordings, micro-films, and approximately 30,000 government documents.

Lockers, study rooms, a typing room, Xerox copier (10¢ per page), outside book deposit chute, small auditorium, and listening center are the special features of our library, available to all at UNC-W.

SNCAE provides growth opportunities program to its individual members is to provide opportunities for (1) personal and professional growth; (2) development of leadership skills; (3) understanding of the history, ethics, Leadership, to promote Friendship, to provide Service to humanity, and to further the freedom that is our national, educational and intellectual heritage." Upsilon Nu Chapter at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington received its charter in May, 1969.

Alpha Phi Omega's well-rounded program of service projects, as well as social events, makes it a fraternity with real meaning. The last two years have found the fraternity engaging in a local "Rock-A-Thon" producing money for Easter Seals. Previously our A.P.O. branch has given its services to obtain finances for some new books for the UNC-W library. Among the social highlights of the year are the chapter banquets and parties.

Membership in Alpha Phi Omega shall be open to men of all races, colors, creeds, irrespective of their course of study or other fraternal affiliation, upon the approval of the respective college chapter and after fulfilling the membership requirements prescribed by the National Fraternity and by that chapter.

Engineers active in service projects

The Engineers' Club has traditionally been a very active service organization comprised of the students involved in engineering studies and the allied fields. The arranging of various tours through the local organizations where engineering is a prime factor gives insight into the workings of a particular field and helps many of the students to make a better choice of their fields of study. The social activities of the club, including several informal get-togethers and a banquet at the end of the year are welcome punctuation in the rigorous study routine of the engineering or math student.

FUTURE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL teachers taught special classes during the afternoons for local children with reading problems. They learned by teaching and were rewarded as they watched the children's progress.

TKE oldest social frat

Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity is the oldest social fraternity on campus. Our international fraternity has over 300 chapters with many in North Carolina, including one at nearby Pembroke State.

Our chapter, Mu Chi, is very sports

ADU growing

Alpha Delta Upsilon, the newest and fastest-growing fraternity, was the third social fraternity to be organized at UNC-W. Presently, it is petitioning the international fraternity, Delta Upsilon, for its charter.

Delta Upsilon has high standards of scholarship and brotherhood and ADU is endeavoring to achieve them. We hope to increase our membership significantly this year.

Incoming freshmen are invited to visit ADU at 4525 Market Street. Call 799-1268. Ask any DU conscious, and very active in school functions. Programs for the year include campouts, a ski weekend, beach weekend, water skiing parties, cookouts, concerts and band parties.

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon invite all men and women to come by our houses at 4505 and 4507 Wrightsville Avenue and live with the men of TEKE.

Wantu Wazuri welcomes freshmen

The Wantu Wazuri club of the University of N. C. at Wilmington, expresses a most sincere welcome to all incoming new students. We would invite you to become a part of our organization.

Our purpose is to provide Representation for Blacks on campus, to promote cultural programming which would add to the general cultural atmosphere of our campus and promote social entertainment.

We are looking forward to meeting you in the near future. Stop by our table in the dorm lobby Sunday and Wednesday nights.

Psych meetings feature programs

The purpose of the Psychology Club is to further the interest of psychology. In connection with this aim, the meetings feature programs with invited guest speakers.

At present, membership in the club is open to those students who are interested in the field of psychology.

One of the important projects is to help build up the selection of psychological periodicals in the Randall Library.

2nd year for History club

The History Club is in its second year of existence at UNC-W. The purpose of the club is to engender greater interest in history and its values among students, history majors and non-history majors, through a program of lectures, field trips and other activities. Membership is open to all students at UNC-W.

Debaters participate, sponsor tournaments

The University Debate Team participates in a number of intercollegiate tournaments each year, giving students experience in research, argumentation, and public speaking. The University hosts a tournament for high school debaters in the spring of each year and will sponsor a intercollegiate tournament for the second time in the Fall of 1973. The team is financed through the Studer Government Association. Membership is open to all students with no previous experience necessary. Interested students should contact the team's coach, Mrs. Betty Jo Welch, Kena Auditorium, room 201.

Soc majors urged to join

The purpose of the Sociology Club is to further the interest of Sociology, with particular emphasis on perspective sociology majors. The club will also serve as a means for students to learn about post-graduate opportunities and to acquaint themselves with the various aspects of sociology, sociological research, and sociological applications.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA held a drawing during the spring to determine the winner of a car 8-track stereo outfit. Proceeds went to help finance a bowling league for handicapped children.

Panhellenic coordinates campus women's frats

The UNC-W Panhellenic Association wishes to extend a hearty welcome to all incoming students. The Association is made up of the two campus letter women's fraternities, Zeta Tau Alpha (ZTA) and Phi Mu (OM). Through Panhellenic, both sororities coordinate their common activities and regulations to promote their aims and interests.

Zeta Tau Alpha is an international women's fraternity, founded in 1898. Zeta Tau chapter here at UNC-W became affiliated nationally in 1969 and has gained much recognition since. Not only are there service projects, but also social, both of which can bring much personal satisfaction.

Phi Mu Fraternity was the first local women's fraternity on campus.

Love, honor, and truth are the ideals of Phi Mu and these qualities are exemplified by the sisters on campus.

Chemistry club welcomes members

The Chemistry Club is composed of all interested UNC-W students. Its purpose is to help students learn about post-graduate opportunities and acquaint them with the various aspects of chemistry, chemical research, and chemical applications. Last year ('72-'73) interested students observed the practical aspects of chemistry through tours of local plant facilities, including Hercules and the General Electric Co.

Project Hope is the national philanthropy of Phi Mu. Our "Washboard Band" is very unique and does its share in raising funds for the project's ship, the HOPE.

The Panhellenic Council will sponsor a booth in the dorm lobby Sunday and Wednesday nights. Please come and have your questions answered. Get to know your sororities.

COUNCIL REGULATES FRATERNITY ACTIVITIES

The Inter-Fraternity Council is a coordinating body composed of representatives from the three general fraternities on campus. It has the responsibility of regulating rush, pledging, membership, and other areas where all fraternities are directly involved and representing the interest of members before the administration.

The I.F.C. also organizes athletic competition, joint parties, and sponsors trophies in athletics and scholarship.

Club encourages interest in math

The purpose of the Mathematics Club is to encourage greater interest in mathematics and its values among students, regardless of major, through a program of lectures, films, and other activities. The Club is also designed to create a closer fellowship among those students and faculty who have similar interests in Math. Membership is open to all UNC-W students, alumni, faculty, and staff.

CAMPUS BEAUTIES COMPETED one night for the coveted Miss Residence Hall title. So far as we were able to determine, the judges were so overcome, they could not decide on a winner. Guess you could say they were all losers. But it was a fun night.

Pi Kappa Phi prides itself

in being a 'very personal fraternity'

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi wish to extend a cordial welcome to all new students, both freshmen and transfers, at UNC-W. We hope that you will consider Pi Kappa Phi as well as the other fraternities when you return in the fall.

Pi Kappa Phi National Fraternity was founded on December 10, 1904 at the College of Charleston in Charleston, South Carolina. The national headquarters are in Charlotte, North Carolina with chapters throughout the United States.

The UNC-W chapter, Gamma Theta, was installed on February 28, 1968, the first national fraternity on campus. Since then, Gamma Theta has twice received Pi Kappa Phi's highest chapter award, Grand Master Chapter. Scholarastically, Pi Kappas have won three of the last four IFC scholastic trophies. Athletically, the Gamma Theta Raiders have excelled in both IFC and intramural sports. Pi Kappas serve the community through their annual Christmas and Easter parties for underprivileged children. Social activities include Beach Weekend at Ocean Drive, Rose Ball, and Ma Keel party.

While a closely-knit group of people, Pi Kappa Phi prides itself in being "a very personal fraternity". The Pride of the South invites you to come by the house at 122 Yorktown Dr. or call 762-9422. We wish you well at UNC-Wilmington!

EULOGY

When I first came to college, I knew who I was, I thought I knew it all...

I got my student number and spent a few hours registering. I never realized there was so much to know...

In class they talked about things I really didn't care about, but as one prof said, "Knowledge is knowing"...

Without my old friends or parents to relate to, I got sorta lonely, turned to Jesus, and searched for a spouse...

Now I'm happily married with a degree, a new compact, and a baby girl... College wasn't so bad.

'Drunkard' set to open Tuesday

The second play this season 'The Drunkard' or 'The Fallen Saved' will be mounted in the SRO Theatre in Kenan Hall, beginning this coming Tuesday night, July 3 with performances each night through Sunday, July 8.

Originally written to turn society away from the evils of drink, it is the hilariously funny, tragic tale of young Edward Middleton, played by John Johnson who falls into the clutches of two dastardly villains, alcohol and Lawyer Cribbs, played by PETER SMITH. His drunkenness is mourned by his wife Mary and child Julia, played by WYATT RIDER and BETSY COBB.

They are left penniless and forsaken except for Edward's foster brother, William Dowton, played by BILL LAMBERT. As his drunkenness reaches its lowest depths of horror, Edward is saved by Mr. Rencelaw, played by SAM GARNER and his temperance band played by MARY MAC MOORE, JENNY ADCOCK, and BARBARA McDANIEL. Young Middleton is restored to his former self, his family and his fortune.

Throughout this melodramatic tale of redemption, the grandfather's last will remains a mystery. Many seem to have clues: Agnes, William's half-witted sister, played by MELANIE MICHELLE; Squire Cribbs, again heinous in his villainy, and the landlord of the tavern, played by BOB ROYALL.

Others who weave in and out of 'The Drunkard' are comically foolish old Miss Spindle, unsuccessfully pursuing Edward's affections, played by TONI CAMPBELL, AND Mary's failing mother, Mrs. Wilson, played by TINA FORRESTER. The police officer is played by ROLAND VALENTINE. Townspeople are ANN BRADSTEDDER, DORAGENE GURGANUS, ROXANNE AALAM, ALAN RANDALL, JOEL PERRY and ROLAND VALENTINE.

This burlesque of a gay nineties tragedy with its comic timing is under the direction of Tony Rivenbark and will provide an evening of nostalgic comedy and convince the audience to join with the cast in their cry of 'Down with the rummies, root-hog or die.'

'Fiddler' plays through Sunday

The SRO Straw-Hat Theatre opened its sixth season of summer stock this past Tuesday with the all-time musical 'Fiddler on the Roof.' Performances beginning at 8:30 p.m. each night in the air-conditioned Kenan Auditorium will continue through Sunday, July 1.

The setting for this memorable musical is a small peasant town in Tsarist Russia - Anatevka. Tevye, a dairyman, played by SAM GARNER, along with his wife, portrayed by TONI CAMPBELL, and five daughters comprise one of the most hard-working families of the community. The people of Anatevka live as their forefathers did, observing the ways handed down to them and following the dictates of 'tradition.'

Their lives are filled with simple joys of living guided by their ability to take adversity with gentle humor and faith in God. Enjoyment is found in the daily rituals as well as the dreams and hopes of simple folk.

Tevye, a pious man tries to raise his five daughters, played by WYATT RIDER, NANCY THOMAS, BETSY COBB, KIM WARREN, AND SARAH ROBBNETT, according to the ways of the good book. However, the old ways of 'tradition' no longer suffice and Tevye and his friends will have to become a part of this changing world. After a pogrom, which takes place at the wedding of one of Tevye's daughters, the people realize that the old ways do not work, and at the close of the play, they set out to find new lives in new lands, taking with them their few meager possessions and their abiding faith in God.

TONY RIVENBARK, PETER SMITH, AND BILL LAMBERT play the suitors of Tevye's three oldest daughters, TINA FORRESTER portrays the charming matchmaker, Yenta, with FRANK MCNEIL, TOM JONES, MIKE PARKER AND TIM CONNELLY playing the Inkeeper, Butcher, Rabbid and the Rabbi's son, respectively.

Others in the cast include: Nancy Benson, David Brown, Beverly Cobb, Mary Mac Moore, Joel Perry, Al Pimper, and Roland Valentine. The role of the fiddler is played by Ira Jacobs, III.

In addition, the villagers in Anatevka are played by: Michael Stever, Scott Olson, John Van Johnson, Donna Blaustein, Juanita O'Grady, Emma Mahn, Roxanne Aalam, David Baggett, Sheila Brooks, (continued on p. 7)

Moore's Creek - victory for patriots

The Lexington
And Concord
Of The South

On February 27, 1776, patriots and loyalists of North Carolina clashed at Moore's Creek Bridge in one of the decisive actions of the opening phases of the American Revolution. Here patriot militia under Oola Richard Caswell and Alexander Lillingston threw back a larger loyalist force on their way to rendezvous with a British expeditionary squadron on the coast. Small as the battle was, it had a crucial importance. The victory helped prevent a full-scale invasion of the South, drove North Carolina on April 12, 1776, to instruct its delegation to the Continental Congress to vote for independence—the first colony to do so—and supplied a needed stimulus for the country as a whole in the movement toward sundering the ties with Britain.

PRELUDE TO REVOLT

When the break with Britain loomed in the early 1770's, divided public opinion had left North Carolina ill-prepared for war. The legislature, popularly elected, opposed the royal Governor, Josiah Martin, almost to a man. Yet many in the colony who disliked parliamentary taxation and royal authority over provincial affairs still found the thought of fighting the mother country abhorrent. By 1773 North Carolinians had generally split into two groups: patriots, probably half the people, who were willing to fight England for independence; and loyalists, primarily the Crown's officials, wealthy merchants, planters, and others of a conservative cast who opposed redressing grievances by war. This last party included a large number of Highland Scots newly come to North Carolina after abandoning the lost cause of the Stuarts, and some of the Regulators defeated at Alamance in 1771.

FIRST MOVES TOWARD WAR

The news of the fighting at Lexington and Concord in April 1775, received in North Carolina a month later, quickened the movement toward independence there. As the patriots organized provisional government and pushed military preparations, Martin abandoned New Bern, the royal capital, and fled to Fort Johnston on the Cape Fear River, arriving there on June 2, 1775. Within 6 weeks, militia forced him to flee again, this time offshore to the British warship, Cruiser, as the fort burned behind him.

In exile Martin laid plans for the British conquest of North Carolina. First, he would raise in that colony an army of 10,000 men, two-thirds of them Highlanders and Regulators with strong localist feelings. Next, this army would rendezvous on the coast with a powerful expeditionary force under Lord Cornwallis. Sir Henry Clinton, and Sir Peter Parker. These forces were to concentrate at Brunswick by February 15, 1776. Together they would reestablish royal authority in North and South Carolina, striking wherever rebellion reared its head. Martin convinced his superiors in London and Gen. Thomas Gage in Boston that this host could easily restore order. The British Ministry approved the plan and dispatched orders to the several commanders.

Governor Martin now set about recruiting his army. On January 10, 1776, he called upon all loyal subjects to unite to put down a "most daring, horrid and unnatural rebellion." Six months earlier General Gage had sent Lt. Col. Donald MacDonald and Capt. Donald McLeod to North Carolina to recruit a Highland battalion. Martin now appointed MacDonald a brigadier general and McLeod a lieutenant colonel in the militia, directing them and others to enlist men.

To all Highlanders who pledged service to the Crown the British Government promised 200 acres of land, can (continued on p.4)

Just ask!

Freshmen on campus today for orientation and registration may find the former a pleasant experience, but undoubtedly they will endure the latter feeling frustrated, cheated, and downright angry.

Freshmen are urged to ask questions if they have any concerning registration. In a desire not to appear "stupid" many people do not ask questions whose answers might save them needless headaches and frustration.

As far as basic requirements go, new sections will be added if the need warrants it. The same applies to science courses in which the labs may close out. If a freshman finds himself faced with this situation, he should simply inquire about the arrangements being made.

"Often the reason that we don't answer the questions before they're even asked," explained one upperclassman, "is that we've asked the question so many times ourselves that the answer seems obvious to us."

Consider yourself warned

Hitchhikers play 'roulette' as rapes, beatings mount

Mounting evidence from police and highway officials across the nation indicates that violence against youthful hitchhikers - especially girls - has become a major crime wave.

Consider just these chilling statistics, noted in a July Reader's Digest article: nearly 70 percent of all rape victims in Boulder, Colorado, last year were hitchhikers; in Boston the figure was 33 percent. In Berkeley, California, 30 percent of the rapes committed in the first two months of 1973 followed the abduction of hitchhikers.

Writes author Nathan Adams in the article: "In the case of a girl who hitchhikes, the odds against her reaching her destination unmolested are today literally no better than if she played Russian roulette. Police estimates, victim interviews and a polling of young hitchhikers reveal that one out of every six will become the victim of some category of sex crime, ranging from indecent exposure to forcible rape."

Nor is rape necessarily the worst fate a ride-thumper can suffer. In Boston recently, seven girls were murdered in as many months; six had been abducted while hitchhiking. And more than a quarter of the hitchhikers victimized by sex criminals were beaten, slashed or shot. Since last fall, six young women in Santa Cruz, California, have been the victims of grisly murders.

"So tempting a target is the single hitchhiker that some criminals regularly patrol roads frequented by hitchhikers - usually near cities where major universities or colleges are located," he writes. Some highway rapists even prepare to "welcome" their victims by removing inside door handles from their cars to prevent girls from escaping, and by pre-scouting remote locations to which they can drive their young victims.

Despite the mounting evidence of danger, says Adams, girls are turning out on the roads in greater numbers than ever before, motivated by lack of funds for scheduled transportation and an astonishing naivete about what could happen to them.

Although every state has some form of anti-hitchhiking law on its books, legislation that would ban the practice entirely has been vigorously opposed by students lobby groups, and many law makers are convinced that an outright ban would be unconstitutional. Moreover, enforcement would be a nightmare for police.

A better answer would be to improve public transportation services near colleges and universities. The Digest also recommends overhauling legal procedures to spare rape victims the ordeal of embarrassment they suffer when they report the crime. (An estimated four out of every five hitchhikers who have been raped do not even report the incident!) Wider use of police-women in rape investigations, and curbs on courtroom voyeur-spectators might help.

Finally, the article urges, a nationwide educational campaign is available, authorized under the Highway Safety Act of 1960.

"HI! I'M FROM A NEWSPAPER SURVEY. DO YOU THINK THERE'S ANY VALIDITY TO THE FEAR THAT REPORTERS' SOURCES WILL DRY-UP AS A RESULT OF RECENT SUPREME COURT DECISIONS THAT..."

Trend growing stronger

Austin, Texas - (I.P.) - The trend toward individual fulfillment and self-development among college students appears to be growing stronger with every entering freshman class. Young people no longer view college as a transition to adulthood. They consider themselves adults, who happen to be college students.

"I think there's no question that college and university students are showing more concern for their physical environment and also for the social and political environment in which they live and do their work," observes Dr. Ronald M. Brown, vice president for student affairs at The University of Texas, Austin.

Dr. Brown recently joined Dick Benson, president of student government, and David Powell, editor of The Daily Texan, to discuss changes in student attitudes and concerns on "Insight: Tomorrow's University," a weekly radio series of the University of Texas.

Commenting on changes in student government activities on college campuses across the nation, Benson stated: "Over the past two or three years, there has been an increasingly intense demand on the part of students that student government become more competent and more directed toward pertinent and important aspects of their lives."

"Consequently, we've become extremely involved in local political situations. We've set up lobby organizations, and we've looked for ways to utilize the students' economic resources. So we've taken a turn toward much more serious kinds of activities that are involved in the students' whole lives, rather than simply university or classroom affairs."

Powell adds that student newspapers from around the country are also reflecting off-campus interests, particularly in political areas. The two student leaders mention particular efforts under way by the UT Austin student government organization and campus newspaper, including the establishment of a new legislative district, aimed at increasing effective student input in important legislative decisions.

Benson describes a current effort by the UT Austin student government to "gather together the economic resources of the university community" called the "University Economic Community" project.

"I think we've got a handle on something that's going to eventually turn out to be a really important new aspect of the community," says Benson. "As I understand it, it is not being done or never has been done anywhere. But what I think it will ultimately culminate in is a student-run and student-controlled financial enterprise on the scale of a credit union or a mutual savings and loan or a commercial bank.

"And I don't think any of those things are impossible. We have the resources in terms of money, in terms of numbers, in terms of legal expertise, in terms of just raw political connections."

Benson adds that the successful establishment of such an economic organization among students would provide them with a valuable sense of competency, a sense of themselves as responsible citizens actively involved in their community.

Both Powell and Benson cite two factors which have pushed this generation of college students to demand that their student governments, newspapers, and leaders become politically capable; frustrations resulting from ineffective attempts to influence political decisions; and the assurance of the 18-year-old vote, which granted them some voice in political affairs.

cellation of land fees, and 20 years' tax exemption. These terms, and Martin's efforts among other groups, brought in large numbers of recruits. The call went out for loyalists to assemble under MacDonald near Cross Creek (Fayetteville) and then march to the coast. When the force finally organized about February 15, there were about 700 Highlanders, 700 other loyalists, and 150 Regulators—altogether nearly 1,600 men.

Meantime, the patriots had not been idle. While Martin tossed at sea, they began to mobilize their forces. Since Martin was technically out of the colony, the patriots set up a Provincial Council to govern in his stead. Upon the recommendation of the Continental Congress, two regiments of the Continental Line had already been raised, as well as several battalions of minutemen and militia.

At the first news that the loyalists were assembling at Cross Creek, patriots began gathering their forces. In Wilmington they threw up breastworks and prepared for fighting; in New Bern authorities mustered the district's militia under Col. Richard Caswell and ordered it to join with other militia in countering the loyalist uprising. Col. James Moore, the senior officer and the first to take the field, was in command.

The loyalists' plan was to advance along the southwest side of the Cape Fear River to the coast, provision the British troops arriving by sea, and then join them in conquering the colony. On February 20 MacDonald began his movement toward the coast. Blocked by Moore at Rockfish Creek, he marched eastward in the general direction of Caswell's force, crossed the Cape Fear River, and proceeded toward the Black River Road, a route into Wilmington along which he expected little opposition. Outmaneuvered by MacDonald's march tactics, Caswell withdrew from defending Corbett's Ferry on the Black River to "take possession of the Bridge upon Widow Moore's Creek," some 20 miles above Wilmington and a place the loyalists must cross on their way to the coast. Moore, after sending Col. Alexander Lillington to join Caswell, fell back toward Wilmington, hoping to fall on MacDonald's rear as Caswell obstructed him in front.

Victory for patriots

THE ENGAGEMENT AT MOORES CREEK

When Lillington arrived at the bridge on the 25th, he quickly saw the position's defensive advantages. The creek, a dark, sluggish stream about 50 feet wide and nearly 5 feet deep, wound through swampy terrain and could be crossed in the vicinity only over this narrow timber bridge. To dominate the crossing Lillington threw up a low earthwork on a slight rise overlooking the bridge and approach. Joining Lillington the next day, Caswell sent his men across the bridge to throw up embankments there.

So by the evening of February 26 the bulk of the patriot forces, under the immediate command of Caswell, straddled Moores Creek Bridge. Lillington, with 200 men, waited on the east side of the creek, and Caswell, with 800 men, dug in on the west. MacDonald's loyalists, 1,600 strong but with arms for only half that many, camped 6 miles away.

MacDonald had lost the race to the bridge. The loyalists now had to decide whether to avoid fighting once more or to cut through their opponents. At a council of war their younger leaders carried the debate, and eventually all agreed that the enemy should be attacked. An element in the decision was the report by a scout that Caswell's position lay on their side of the river and thus was vulnerable.

At 1 a.m. on the 27th the loyalists marched to the attack, with a party of 75 picked broadswordsmen under Capt. John Campbell in the lead. By now MacDonald had fallen ill, and Lt. Col. Donald McLeod was in command. The going was slow, for the route lay through thickets and swampy ground.

During the night Caswell had abandoned camp and withdrawn across the creek, where he threw up a breastwork and posted artillery to cover the bridge. But once on the other bank, Caswell's men removed the floor and greased the girders. In darkness they now waited for the advancing Scots.

An hour before dawn the loyalists hit Caswell's deserted trenches and found only the fires burning low. Moving on to a nearby woods, McLeod regrouped his troops, as a rallying cry, "King George and Broad Swords," passed along the line. There they waited for daybreak. Suddenly a burst of rifle fire sounded near the bridge. Though it was not yet light, McLeod could wait no longer. Three cheers rang out—the signal for attack—and the loyalists rushed the partly demolished bridge with claymores out and bagpipes skirling. As the Highlanders of McLeod and Campbell stormed over, they were met by a withering musket and artillery fire. Many fell into the water. Nearly all the small advance party were cut down, and the whole force soon retreated. It was all over in 5 minutes. Pursuit turned the victory into a rout. The patriots lost only one man.

Within 2 weeks Moore's forces had captured most of the loyalist leaders, about 850 troops, and 1,500 muskets, 350 guns and shot bags, 150 swords and dirks, 2 medicine chests, and about $75,000 in gold. The leaders were imprisoned or banished from the colony; the troops were paroled to their homes.

Though the battle was small, the implications were great. For the patriots the victory ended the uprising of the clans, discouraged the growth of loyalist sentiment in North and South Carolina, and spurred revolutionary sentiment throughout the colonies. More immediately, the victory thwarted the intended invasion of North Carolina. The British force moved on to Sullivan's Island off Charleston, S.C., where militia repulsed Sir Peter Parker's naval attack 4 months later, ending British hopes of squashing rebellion in the South for 4 years. "Had the South been conquered in the first half of 1776," the historian Edward Channing has concluded, "it is entirely conceivable that rebellion would never have turned into revolution. . . . At Moores Creek, and Sullivan's Island, the Carolinians turned aside the one combination of circumstances that might have made British conquest possible."

ABOUT YOUR VISIT

Moores Creek National Military Park is about 20 miles northwest of Wilmington, N.C., and can be reached via U.S. 421 and N.C. 910.

The park is open daily except Christmas Day. We suggest that you begin your visit at the visitor center, a short distance from the park entrance. Exhibits there describe the battle. Battlefield tours start from this point. Guide services are available for educational and other groups if advance arrangements are made with the superintendent.

ADMINISTRATION

MOORES CREEK NATIONAL MILITARY PARK, established in 1926 and containing 50 acres, is administered by the National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior.

The National Park System, of which this area is a unit, is dedicated to conserving the scenic, scientific, and historic heritage of the United States for the benefit and inspiration of the people.

A superintendent, whose address is Currie, N.C. 28455, is in immediate charge of the park.

AMERICA'S NATURAL RESOURCES

Created in 1849, the Department of the Interior—America's Department of Natural Resources—is concerned with the management, conservation, and development of the Nation's water, wildlife, mineral, forest, and park and recreational resources. It also has major responsibilities for Indian and territorial affairs.

As the Nation's principal conservation agency, the Department works to assure that nonrenewable resources are developed and used wisely, that park and recreational resources are conserved for the future, and that renewable resources make their full contribution to the progress, prosperity, and security of the United States—now and in the future.

Student aid doubles

While other colleges and universities are experiencing some decreases in their federally funded programs, UNC-W has more than doubled its amount of aid available to students.

"The fact that the program has doubled in 12-18 months' time demonstrates Larry Crowder's dedication," says Dr. William Malloy, vice chancellor for student affairs. "I feel that this is an indication of Mr. Crowder's awareness relative to student financial needs on this campus."

Schools receive help on the basis of the financial needs of the students. But someone must compile and evaluate data for federal consideration. This is part of Crowder's job as Director of Student Financial Aid.

As a result of his reports and requests, allocations for the Student Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG) jump from $10,105 for 72-73 to a proposed $36,668 for 73-74.

For College Work-Study, the difference is better than $30,500. Tuesday Crowder was notified that the National Direct Student Loan allocation for the coming year has been projected in the neighborhood of $75,000. This figure has been tripled in two years' time.

Crowder has also put into play the use of the computer in analyzing financial needs. Information dealing with the student's financial situation is fed into the computer, which assigns the student a code number indicating the degree of need.

Computer use insures that each student will be treated fairly. The scholarships are then awarded to the most needy first, then to those of lesser need, until the money runs out.

In all, the total financial aid monies available to students exceeds $5.5 million.

The increased program has made necessary a larger office as well as the addition of a full-time accounting clerk for 73-74.

Larry Crowder, Director of Student Financial Aid, has announced that the UNC-W allotment for 73-74 exceeds one-half million dollars, which represents a doubling of last year's monies. How's that for progress?

"THE SOUND OF MUSIC,"

Winner of five Academy Awards including Best Picture and Best Direction, Robert Wise's production of "The Sound of Music" stars Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer, and co-stars Eleanor Parker, Richard Haydn and Peggy Wood. The Todd-AO and DeLuxe Color musical was produced and directed by Wise. Richard Rodgers wrote music and lyrics for two new songs for the film production, which has a screenplay by Ernest Lehman.

Wise took his cast and crew to Salzburg, Austria, to film the story of the famous Von Trapp family singers against the authentic background of the world-famed "City of Music." They spent 11 weeks filming in many of the city's landmarks such as Mirabell Gardens, Nonnberg Abbey, Winkler's Terrace and the Mozart foot-bridge.

During the course of the location shooting, which occupied virtually one-half of the production schedule, "The Sound of Music" company utilized historic Frohnburg Castle, now a dormitory for music students at the Mozarteum, to simulate the Von Trapp villa. The actual home of the family was occupied by Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler during World War II and is now surrounded by a high wall, making it useless for filming purposes.

The famous Salzburg Music Festival scenes were shot in the most spectacular of the city's landmarks, the Felsenreitschule or Rocky Riding School. The stage of the vast amphitheatre is backgrounded by scores of arched tunnels carved out of the rocky mountain that surrounds the city,

Something For Everyone

Natural and man-made diversions make Greenfield Lake a delight for the entire family.

Acres of camelias, magnolias, live oaks, dogwood, wild plum, wisteria, crepe myrtle and water lilies may excite naturalists. And this and more may be seen on a five mile drive around the lake, as well as by strolling well over a mile of shaded walks.

A zoo, many rides, and playground equipment entertain the children. And for the older sportsmen, there are tennis courts.

Picnic tables watched over by hugh shade trees encourage all-day outings, and there are restrooms and refreshment stands.

Julie Andrews as the Von Trapp family's new governess is shocked at the Baron's (Christopher Plummer) method of calling his children. The movie is now playing at the Oleander Cinema.

Roger Moore New James Bond In Exciting 'Live and Let Die'

"Live and Let Die" is the eighth in the successful series of James Bond films based on the novels of Ian Fleming, produced by Albert R. Broccoli and Harry Saltzman. The film marks the debut of Roger Moore in the role of Fleming's indestructible Agent 007, battling against the malevolent and mysterious black ruler, Dr. Kananga, played by Yaphet Kotto, who plans to dominate the western world with an onslaught of Voodoo and hard drug addiction. He is assisted in his use of the occult by a stunningly beautiful seer named Solitaire, who is portrayed with sensuous innocence by newcomer Jane Seymour.

Guy Hamilton, who directed the third Bond film, "Goldfinger," and who put so much of the style and sparkle into the recent "Diamonds Are Forever," is at the helm of "Live and Let Die," released by United Artists, an entertainment service of Transamerica Corporation. The screenplay is by Tom Mankiewicz, who co-authored "Diamonds Are Forever."

The selection of British film and television star Roger Moore to portray James Bond in "Live and Let Die," ended months of speculation, tests and conferences concerning the star of the latest Ian Fleming screen thriller, Moore, whose suave, sophisticated style and physically impressive manner conforms to author Fleming's concept of British Agent 007, made entertainment history by starring in five, top-rated international television series: "The Saint," "The Persuaders," "Ivanhoe," "The Alaskans" and "Maverick." He also appeared in a number of films, among them "The Last Time I Saw Paris" and "Rachel Cade."

Producers Broccoli and Saltzman were determined to have an Englishman for the role, and London-born and educated Roger Moore struck them as the ideal choice.

James Bond has a spectacular new leading lady. She is Jane Seymour, a 22-year-old raven-haired British beauty who plays the coveted role of Solitaire. Jane, a former ballet-dancer-turned-actress lives up to author Ian Fleming's description of Solitaire as "one of the most beautiful women Bond had ever seen." Solitaire also is one of Bond's most unusual leading ladies. She possesses remarkable telepathic powers which are used by Bond's dangerous enemy in a criminal plot to rule the world.

Oates resembles, plays 'Dillinger'

Bearing an actual physical resemblance to "Dillinger," Warren Oates heads the cast, fresh from starring roles in Universal's "Two-Lane Blacktop," and "The Hired Hand," with Peter Fonda and Verna Bloom.

Oates' versatility has been displayed in many varied roles since he made his debut as a regular on the "Stony Burke" television show. A few of his many roles include that of a voyeur policeman in "Heat of the Night," a profligate gunman in "The Wild Bunch."

Now he is meeting the challenge of recreating the elusive, swashbuckling, professional bank robber, John Dillinger.

Making her exciting motion picture debut as Billie Frechette, inamorata of Dillinger is Michelle Phillips. As a founder and permanent member of the famed singing group, "The Mamas and the Papas," the beautiful Miss Phillips is well known to music aficionados all over the world.

Now she is adding a new dimension to her career in a diverse, challenging role, Billie Frechette was probably the one true love in John Dillinger's life.

Although he tried desperately to cling to his teenage marriage to Beryl Hovius, separation caused by his long first prison sentence broke them up, Dillinger constantly sought the companionship of attractive women and seldom missed an opportunity for a conquest but Billie seemed to have changed all that.

She became his constant companion, friend, lover, wife and mother all rolled into one. Recreating this real-life multi-dimensional character is a role designed to test the talents of any actress.

Academy Award winner Ben Johnson will portray Melvin Purvis, Chicago Head of the FBI, whose dogged, determined pursuit of Dillinger led to the desperado's death in front of Chicago's Biograph Theatre in 1934. Johnson won the Academy Award for Best Performance by an actor in a Supporting Role in 1971. He was also honored in the same category by The New York Film Critics. His most recent screen credits are co-starring roles with Henry Fonda in, "The Red Pony," a motion picture made for television and, prior to that "The Get Away," in which he was teamed with Steve McQueen and Ali McGraw. Now as Melvin Purvis, intrepid, cigar smoking FBI chief, he portrays a character almost as flamboyant as that of the bank robber he pursues to the end.

"DILLINGER" is currently playing at Long Leaf Cinema

Nine-year-old Tatum O'Neal makes her motion picture debut co-starring with her father Ryan O'Neal in Peter Bogdanovich's Production of "Paper Moon." The Directors Company Presentation for Paramount Pictures Release is the tale of an unlikely alliance between a small-time con artist and a little girl who turns out to be better at the game than he is.

The new James Bond (Roger Moore) with the voluptuous Madeline Smith in Ian Fleming's "Live and Let Die."

Danger in the national park system

Take a minute to read these simple, but important safety rules.
Then go on to a pleasant experience in the national park system.

protect your park and yourself

Your visit to one of the areas in the National Park System can be a most pleasurable and rewarding experience—or it can be a time of vexation, distress, or even tragedy. Much depends on how you and your family observe these simple rules and avoid hazards. Park regulations are designed to protect the natural beauty of the area and to provide for your safety, comfort, and convenience. The use of snowmobiles, all-terrain vehicles, and fires, and the participation in such activities as fishing and swimming are governed by regulations that take into account local conditions and problems. Park rangers are here to help and advise you as well as to enforce regulations. If you need information or are in difficulty, see a park ranger. Complete regulations can be read in the superintendent's office.

don't swim alone

Be alert for underwater obstructions, and when swimming at national seashores, be wary of tidal currents. Never swim or dive alone; always take a friend. Stay within rescue distance of another person and within protected or guarded areas, and always let someone know exactly what you intend to do. Know your capabilities and stay within them. Don't take chances.

register your boat

In all parks where boating is permitted, safety regulations are strictly enforced. Ignoring such rules will not only place your vessel in jeopardy but will endanger your life and the lives of others. You must register your boat with park authorities, and you must meet certain safety standards. It is well worth a few moments to familiarize yourself with the rules.

heed fishing regulations

There is relatively little danger in fishing in any of the parks except in deep water and rapids. Follow posted signs and warnings, and obey park fishing regulations, which, in most cases, are in accordance with State regulations.

be cautious of thermal pools

In thermal pool areas, stay on the trails or boardwalks at all times. The boiling heat is deadly. Keep children under restraint. Leave pets behind.

drive carefully

Park roads were deliberately designed for slow-moving vehicles. Stop at overlooks; don't try to see everything from behind the wheel. Be a considerate driver and watch out for those who are not.

dress properly

Even in the heat of summer it is often cool in the mountainous parks. If you are hiking on rough terrain, be sure to wear sturdy shoes or boots. Some swamp and forest areas are plagued with mosquitoes. An advance check with park employees about protective clothing and repellents will help prevent problems.

Private museum offers surprise

For those who think they don't like museums, the BLOCKADE RUNNER MUSEUM offers an exciting surprise.

It's the story of the over 2,000 ships that attempted the Carolina ports through the Northern blockade, the massive fort that sought to protect them as they approached the coast, and the city that received the vital supplies that meant so much to the Confederacy.

The relating of this vast operation is superlatively told through the medium of perfectly executed dioramas, each with its own tape explaining the action, expertly crafted models of ships that were 20 years ahead of their time, and cases of weapons and artifacts, many brought to the surface from sunken blockade runners by divers.

The highlight of a visit to the museum is the 40 foot diorama of Fort Fisher. Situated to command the approaches to the mouth of the Cape Fear River and Wilmington, Fort Fisher played a vital role in maintaining this last lifeline of the Confederacy.

The history of the fort and the blockade is presented in a 15 minute narration accompanied by martial music, projected pictures, the sounds of battle, and smoke from the guns of the fleet.

The museum was presented a national award in 1967 as an outstanding contribution to National, State and local history.

CAPITOL

ON WINNING STREAK

Capitol Records is currently experiencing one of its hottest LP streaks in chart action in company history. Four Capitol releases presently hold four of the top five positions on Cash Box's Top 100 Album chart listings for the issue dated June 23 beginning with Paul McCartney's RED ROSE SPEEDWAY LP continuing in the number one spot. Also included is George Harrison's LIVING IN THE MATERIAL WORLD which first appeared on the chart the previous week at number 48 and has soared to the number 3 position. The two retrospective Beatle albums have placed in the number 4 position, THE BEATLES: 1966/1970, and the number 5 position, THE BEATLES: 1962/1966. In BILLBOARD this week, Harrison's LIVING IN THE MATERIAL WORLD has dethroned Paul McCartney's RED ROSE SPEEDWAY for the number one spot after making a debut at the number eleven spot in the June 16 issue.

Pink Floyd's DARK SIDE OF THE MOON LP on the Harvest label has maintained its number 8 position in Cash Box along with The Letterman's ALIVE AGAIN... NATURALLY and LIVE AT THE LONDON PALLADIUM, the historic concert recording of Liza Minnelli and Judy Garland appearing on the charts for the first time. Also continuing progress are Anne Murray's DANNY'S SONG album and the SKYLARK album, several of the Capitol distributed albums are future contenders for top chart positions. Surely Leon Russell's newly released LIVE set will be among the strongest. Freddie King's WOMANACROSS THE RIVER and Edward Bear's CLOSE YOUR EYES are two more strong contenders.

"NIGHT IN NEW ORLEANS" EUROPEAN STYLE

Atlantic Records is presenting a gala "Night in New Orleans" in three European cities. The cities... Paris, London, and Montreux. Dr. John, The Meters, Allen Toussaint, and Professor Longhair are the stars of the show. The New Orleans night concert was originally set only for the Montreux Jazz Festival, but after the talent line-up was set for the jazz festival, the eagerness to have the show presented in other countries led to the London and Paris dates.

Dr. John is making this trip to Europe on the crest of his hit single, "Right Place, Wrong Time" from his album IN THE RIGHT PLACE. Dr. John's recordings were produced by Toussaint with the Meters providing the backup tracks.

Atlantic Records has announced it plans to record the Montreux performance with the album of it ready for release later this year.

KENNY RANKIN MONTH

Kenny Rankin, who records for Little David Records, now has his own month. July has been named Kenny Rankin month by his recording company. On July 3 Kenny opens at the famed Los Angeles Troubadour, where he plays a week stand. On July 5 he will appear on the Helen Reddy TV Show over the NBC-TV network. On July 6 Kenny appears as one of the stars on the Burns & Schreiber Show over the ABC-TV NETWORK. On both the segs Rankin sings "Peaceful" his most recent single. Rankin is now working on a new album which is scheduled for release this fall.

JOPLIN MUSIC BACK NO NOT JANIS BUT SCOTT

Angel Records has put on the market a rare "single" release of two tracks from its pre-jazz classic hit THE RED BACK BOOK by America's first great black composer Scott Joplin. The RED BACK BOOK album, recorded in Boston by the New England Conservatory Ragtime Ensemble led by composer-conductor and jazz scholar Gunther Schuller, hit the best seller charts both pop and classical, within three weeks of its release. "This proves again the artificiality of the old categories, because Joplin's music appeals to all kinds of people. Ragtime can't be categorized, because it's classical pop music and popular classical music. These authentic original orchestrations are a happy sound that few people alive had ever heard before." Records. The tracks selected for Angel's single are the famous "Maple Leaf Rag" and "The Cascades," a piece of water music composed for the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904.

EDGAR WINTER IN F'VILLE

The Edgar Winter Group appears in concert Thursday, July 5th in the Cumberland County Memorial Arena at 8:00 p.m. Blue Oyster Cult will also be appearing in the same concert. This looks like another excellent concert even though we in New Hanover County have to drive a hundred miles to attend it.

THEIR DAY WILL COME

Heather is a local rock 'n' roll band. For the more hip, they really boogie. It just doesn't happen that you attend a gig that they play and you don't wind up as part of the crowd gathered around the stage. All they need is the person to pull a string and they will be on their merry way. There is no stopping anything that is as good as this band. There is no band in the area that can move a crowd the way Heather can. They aren't playing a steady job like several other area bands are, but there is no comparison in Heather's music and the music of these other mediocre bands. Heather writes some themselves, so you'll be hearing from them. These other bands will still be playing for peanuts when Heather has gone on to greener pastures. The good always does better in the long-run as someone wise always says. So much for the editorial--until next time of course. ??????????????????????

Kincaid goose-eggs Heels

Harry Kincaid goose-egged the Tarheels of UNC and Howie Edgerton singled home Mike Brannan as the Seahawks of UNC-W defeated the 'Heels 1-0.

Kincaid's effort raised his season mark to 2-1, as he has won his last two outings. Along with Kincaid's three hit pitching were fielding gems by first-baseman Bill Warmack and rightfielder Brannan.

A double-play in the sixth inning cut short any hope the 'Heels had, and virtually sewed up the game for the Hawks. Although UNC pitcher Mike Merritt struck - out eleven Hawk batters, his mates couldn't muster any runs.

The lone run of this pitcher's duel, came in the Hawk's half of the fifth, when Mike Brannan walked to open the inning and then promptly stole second. Howie Edgerton followed with a line shot to right and Brannan raced home for the only marker of the evening.

watch your children

Don't let children stray. Your knowledge, experience, and wisdom cannot help a child who is beyond your protective reach and warning voice.

respect wildlife

Most parks are the natural home of numerous wild animals. You are the intruder. Before starting out on your park adventure, find out where the animals are and what to do in the event you come face to face with one of them. As a rule, wild animals need only to be left alone. Be alert for reptiles.

Bears are dangerous—particularly when accompanied by young. It is reckless to approach bears closely. Even though they may appear tame, bears may turn suddenly and inflict serious injury. Do not feed, tease, frighten, or molest them in any way; such acts are violations of park regulations. On foot, give all bears a wide berth. If one approaches your car, stay inside with the windows closed. In a park inhabited by grizzlies, read the warnings carefully. Observe all precautions recommended for back-country travel and camping.

Poisonous snakes are found in all States but Alaska, Hawaii, and Maine. Know which ones are found in the parks you are visiting, and learn what precautions to take to avoid being bitten. Generally it is a matter of knowing what habitat they occupy, and then keeping alert. Seldom does a snake bite unless disturbed or molested.

don't travel alone

Two heads are safer than one. Whether it's a short hike in the woods or a month-long climb, a companion may save your life in an emergency.

preserve natural, historical features

While "preserving" yourself, help preserve the park's natural life and historical properties. Destruction, injury, or disturbance

book review

OF CLERICAL BONDAGE

Every year thousands of American girls look for secretarial jobs, confidently anticipating the good pay, pleasant working conditions, interesting fellow-workers and excellent chances of advancement promised by the classified ads. Only too many wind up in what lively--well informed--author Mary Kathleen Benét calls THE SECRETARIAL GHETTO (McGraw-Hill, $5.95).

Ms. Benét has worked in many offices on both sides of the Atlantic, including those of the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE, the CHICAGO SUN-TIMES, McALL'S, and a book publishing house. She has also been a journalist, an advertising copywriter, and a literary agent. Her views are frank, outspoken--and controversial.

As Ms. Benét notes, well over 60 per cent of American office workers are women. By the sheer force of their numbers and the variety of tasks they perform, they have become indispensable to the smooth functioning of American business.

How many receive the recognition they deserve? What does a secretary's job really mean today? Does it bring independence and fulfillment? Or does it perpetuate, in a new setting, a whole range of stereotyped female roles, all subservient to the functions and prerogatives of the male?

the secretarial GHETTO tackles all these questions straight on. Secretaries will clamor to read this book--and their bosses can't afford not to.

Hawks calm Hurricane winds

The UNC Wilmington Sea-hawks, behind Southpaw fast-baller Paul Fulton, held the Hurricanes of Louisburg College scoreless to gain their sixth victory against only two set-backs. Fulton gained his second win in as many starts by three hitting the Hurricanes and never allowing a runner past first.

The game was decided in the eleventh inning when catcher Bruce Cavanaugh led off the inning with a safety to left. Bruce went to third when short-stop Swain Smith bunted and went to second on a bad throw by the Louisburg catcher. Bill Warmack, Hawk first baseman, was intentionally passed to load the bases, and Mike Brannon followed with a single to end the game as Cavanaugh scored.

Fulton was never seriously threatened although he did allow three hits. Paul showed good control as he walked only three (each in separate innings) throughout the entire eleven innings. Fulton is now sporting a 1.00 ERA, and is averaging four strikeouts per game.

The former Jacksonville star feels the Hawks have a very good chance of winning the summer championship, if the pitching stays as good as it has been and the defense is sound for the remainder of the summer. Fulton will probably get his next start against the Pirates of East Carolina University, victims of the Hawks twice thus far this summer.

The win against the Hurricanes not only tied the Hawks with the Tarheels of UNC AT Chapel Hill, but allowed them to move to first place after a Tarheel loss the following night. The Hawks will have a heavy schedule this week as they have had five games rained out since the start of the summer season, and will attempt to make these games this week and next week. Games scheduled for this week are: at Chapel Hill, Tuesday; at Campbell, Thursday; Pembroke State at Brook's Field, Saturday night.

SPORTS POTS

DALTON LEADING 'HAWK STICKMEN

Greg Dalton, starting third baseman for Coach Bill Brooks' Summer Hawks, is currently leading the team with a batting average of .463. The slugging right hander went hitless in five at-bats in the Hawks last outing against the Hurricanes of Louisburg College, but is still leading the team. Other Hawks Robert Ivey and Bobby Schupp are hitting .322 and .282 respectively.

MEN BOYCOTT WIMBLEDON

All but two (approximately 73 players have chosen not to play) of the tennis world's premier performers in the men's ranks have chosen to be absent when the judges begin this year's Wimbledon Championships. The boycott stems from a dispute which erupted when the International Lawn Tennis Federation suspended Yugoslavian star, Nikki Pilic. A host of unknowns are in Wimbledon with hopes of sneaking into the limelight now that the top seeds are gone.

MORE FROM WIMBLEDON

The Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) have asked Britain's Roger Taylor, Romania's Ilie Nastase, and Australia's Ray Keldie to resign from the ATP due to their refusal to boycott the Wimbledon tourney along with 73 fellow members. Word from the three has not been released as of now.

LYLE RECEIVES AWARD

Star relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees received the 1972 American League Fireman of the Year award between the Detroit-Yankee double-header last correction award between the Detroit-Yankee double-header last Sunday. Lyle was presented the award by the New York starting staff, as he had 35 saves in 1972, which is the new American League record.

DPH TO RETURN .400 HITTER?

Currently, Ron Bloomberg of baseball's New York Yankees is leading the American League, as well as the NL, with an impressive .410 batting average. Bloomberg is the designated hitter for the Yanks, and is very pleased with his job. Mickey Lolich, of the Detroit Tigers, however, feels the DPH is detrimental to baseball, but this seems to be the typical sentiment of the pitchers, except in New York, where we hear no complaint.

Battleship memorial open daily for tours

The U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA Battleship Memorial is open every day of the year. In the summer months, you may tour the Battleship between 8 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Visitors report a period of about an hour should be allowed to adequately inspect the Showboat's many features. Open to the public are such typical areas as the crew's living spaces, an engine room, 16-inch gun turrets, anti-aircraft gun mounts and the pilot house. A museum and adjoining room memorializing the names of North Carolina's 10,000 World War II dead are highlights of the tour.

The route through the Battleship is clearly marked, making tour guides unnecessary and the self-guided tour may be taken at your leisure and areas of special interest may be revisited. In addition to explanatory plaques located about the ship, there are automatic speakers to describe certain especially interesting areas.

'Drunkard' set to play through Sunday

Sunday night, July 8, will see the final presentation of the delightful old-time melodrama "The Drunkard" produced by the Straw-Hat Theatre. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. in the air-conditioned SRO Theatre on the UNC-W campus.

Originally written to turn society away from the evils of drink, it is the hilariously funny, tragic tale of young Edward Middleton, played by John Johnson who falls into the clutches of two dastardly villains, alcohol and Lawyer Cribbs, played by PETER SMITH. His drunkenness is mourned by his wife Mary and child Julia, played by WYATT RIDER and BETSY COBB.

They are left penniless and forsaken except for Edward's foster brother, William Dow-ton, played by BILL LAMBERT. As his drunkenness reaches it lowest depths of horror, Edward is saved by Mr. Rencelaw, played by SAM GARNER and his temperance band played by MARY MAC MOORE, JENNY ADCOCK, and BARBARA McDANIEL. Young Middleton is restored to his former self, his family and his fortune.

Throughout this melodramatic tale of redemption, the grandfather's past will remain a mystery. Many seem to have clues: Agnes, William's half-witted sister, played by MELANIE MICHELE; Squire Cribbs, again heinous in his villainy, and the landlord of the tavern, played by BOB ROYALL.

Others who weave in and out of "The Drunkard" are comically foolish old Miss Spindle, unsuccessfully pursuing Edward's affections, played by TONICAMPBELL, AND Mary's failing mother, Mrs. Wilson, played by TINA FORRESTER. The police officer is played by ROLAND VALENTINE, Townspeople are ANN BRAD-

STEDDER, DORAGENE GURGANUS, ROXANNE AALAM, ALAN RANDALL, JOEL PERRY and ROLAND VALENTINE.

This burlesque of a gay nineties tragedy with its comic timing is under the direction of Tony Rivenbark and will provide an evening of nostalgic comedy and convince the audience to join with the cast in their cry of "Down with the rummies, root-hog or die."

Museum exhibits African culture

The "African Culture Exhibition" opened July 1 at the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum. Everyone is invited to come and experience the aura of African art which is a very integral part of their ceremony, dances, costumes, and music.

The great variety of objects on exhibition originate from three separate collections. Donors to the exhibition are Vincent & Elizabeth Hovanec who are with the state department in Africa and Charles & Kent Davis who toured Africa for six and a half months.

The Museum's Ida Black Collection is also part of the exhibition. The show features a slide show which presents an excellent look at present day tribal life in Africa.

"Sculpture and Things", a ceramic sculpture show, will open July 8. The exhibition is by Nicholas Batounis, graduate of UNC-W. Batounis's exhibition is a unique and original collection of art.

The Wilmington-New Hanover Museum is located at ## SRO offers 'Butterflies' Tues.

"Butterflies Are Free" is the third offering of the SRO Straw-Hat Theatre of UNC at Wilmington. This comedy opens Tuesday, July 10, and plays nightly at 8:30 in Kenan Auditorium through Sunday, July 15.

Leonard Gersche, the author of "Butterflies Are Free" won an academy award nomination for the original screen play "Funny Face" and has authored the book for the Broadway musical "Destiny Rides Again." One morning Gersche was listening to a radio interview with a blind Harvard law student who was chuckling over the fact that his draft board had classified him 1-A. "I had never met a blind person, and was bowled over by this boy's humor and healthy attitude about his situation," Gersche says.

The author had also been thinking about the personality of a friend of his, a young Hollywood star who was wary of committing himself to any permanent relationship. He was intrigued by the idea of bringing these two characters together in a play. And so "Butterflies Are Free" came to be.

When one is young and moves into an apartment for the first time, even if it's a cramped cold-water flat in Manhattan's lower East Side, then one knows what exhilaration is. It is here that we find Don Baker, played by Tom Sweeney, who is trying to determine if he can manage on his own by living away from his strong, protective mother for the first time in his life. Mrs. Baker is portrayed by Kay Swink.

After one month, an unusual wrinkle is added to his experience when Jill, played by Melanie Michele, a 19-year-old divorcee, invites herself over for a cup of coffee. She has recently moved into the next apartment - just beyond Don's paper-thin walls.

The fourth member of the cast is a free-wheeling off-Broadway director named Ralph Austin, played by Sam Garner, who serves to put

Progress in student aid

How many times have you or a fellow student groaned over the prohibitive cost of a higher education? We thought so.

Well, there's a little more relief these days. A little???

Actually, the available aid for students has doubled since last year. We now have relief to the tune of $500,000. Or, in more graphic terms, a half a million portraits of General George, father of his country, now finance at least part of the higher education of many UNC-W students.

"How's that for progress?" asks Student Financial Aid Director Larry Crowder. As we see it, Larry, that's pretty damn good.

Federal apportionment of student aid is the result of data on need and resources at individual institutions. But someone has to inform government agencies of the number of students who are denied an education because of lack of finances. At UNC-W that someone comes in the form of one of our graduates, Larry Crowder.

The fact that Crowder was himself a student, and by definition hard-pressed for money, is clearly one of the big pluses in his favor. But even more important is the fact that he, now in a staff position, has not lost touch in sensing and evaluating the needs of the students.

"No one should say they cannot afford to go to school due to a shortage of funds," Crowder told freshmen at orientation last week. "We can get you the money." This is the message he would convey to all students.

Many times in the past, present, and most undoubtedly the future, students constantly ride the backs of faculty, staff, and administrators for lack of dedication or response to student needs. It is only fitting that they should offer some word of appreciation for a job well done.

So, for the word of appreciation, the most appropriate we can think of is thanks, Larry.

Dear Kathi,

Please accept my sincere thanks for all your help concerning the yearbook. Your article detailing our problems aroused much interest, and has prompted many students to reply. With such enthusiasm, I'm sure we can hold an optimistic outlook for "Fledgling" 1974. You have proved invaluable and I hope I can return the favor.

Many thanks,
Thomas M. Butkie

Dear Kathi,

The staff at the Open House would like to thank you and the Seahawk for your interest and the great publicity you have given us. Our House is for the "people" and we think you are great people. Thanks again.

Bicyclers beware... There are an estimated 80 million bike riders — nearly four times the number of people who live in California. And this year, nearly 750 riders will be killed and another 150,000 seriously injured in bicycle accidents. Why is this? Well, many simply don't know how to ride a bike; others ride bikes that don't "fit."

"The biggest problem today is inappropriately-sized bikes," says Harris Faigel, M.D., an expert in pediatric emergency services. Too large a bike is difficult for a child to control, says the doctor, who pedals a three-speed English model to work everyday in Brookline, Massachusetts. One too small is harder than necessary to ride.

For a proper fit, the seat must be high enough so that when the pedal is at the bottom of its sweep, the rider's leg is fully extended. Otherwise, the expert says, the rider cannot deliver safely maneuver.

Bicycles should have chain guards, and the shift levers on racing models should be mounted on the handlebars. Those located on the crossbar just ahead of the seat can cause groin injury. Dr. Faigel explained that the Food and Drug Administration recently condemned this type as "unsafe." Seats for infants and young children should provide chair, arm rests, and leg protector molded of a single piece of plastic, to prevent tiny feet, ankles, and shins from entangling in the spokes.

Statistics show that bicycling accidents most often result from errors in judgment. Among the major causes are:

1. Swooping into the street from driveway without looking.
2. Pushing off from a blind spot between two parked cars.
3. Coasting too fast downhill in traffic.

need to be cautious and they do need to be reminded of that, especially at the start of the season," says Dr. Faigel. "The lesson of bicycle safety may be best learned in the family, when the parents get out and ride, safely, with their children.

NEW SOUND OF MUSIC TO SALZBURG

"How sweet," wrote Shakespeare almost 400 years ago, "the moonlight sleeps upon this bank! Here will we sit and let the sound of music creep in our ears!"

When the bank is the gently sloping shore of the Sal-zach River in Salzburg, Austria, the "sound of music" almost always has to be Mozart.

A few years ago, however, Mozart was temporarily replaced by Rodgers & Hammerstein.

Not that the populace suddenly deserted Wolfgang Amadeus, but Salzburg was invaded—for a hectic 11-week period—by producer-director Robert Wise who, accompanied by a troupe of some 60 actors and technicians, utilized the picturesque city and its surroundings for location shooting of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music."

The story, of course, is about the Von Trapp Family singers, who came originally from Salzburg, and Wise's Todd-AO and DeLuxe color cameras were kept busy capturing the scenic wonders of the 1,500-year-old city and the surrounding Salzkammergut region which is regarded as one of the most beautiful areas in the world.

But the location was not without problems.

"We were on a tight schedule," Wise points out. "We had to get our material and get out of town before we were kicked out—by hotels which had been booked for months in advance by tourists planning to attend the annual Salzburg Festival. And we ran into the worst Spring that part of Europe has known in many years."

As an example of the "worst Spring," on one occasion the company sat, huddled in ponchos at a lakeside, for four successive days waiting for the rain to stop to get one vitally-needed scene.

Reach out to help others

Want to help?

There are numerous ways in which college students can gain a rewarding experience by helping others.

With the problems of the times have come new solutions. One type of solution for today's frustration is the outreach house or the alternative.

Open House. a 24-hour face-to-face emergency help center, offers informal counseling, referral, education, and alternative activities to youths with problems. The House, at 610 Market St., also provides a place to crash.

Open Door. a newer facility opened at Wrightsville Beach (606 Causeway Drive), is an alternative recreational facility geared especially for youth 13-18 years old.

But to be effective, both facilities need volunteer help. Both require that staff members be at least 18 years old.

Want to help? Great! To serve at the Door, contact Linda Goodson at the Open Door nightly except Monday from 6 p.m. to midnight.

For work at Open House, call Flo Stein or one of the other House volunteers at 762-5597 any time.

Julie as Maria

And snow in the mountains, on the last day of June, brought still another delay to Wise's plans to complete his exteriors and return to the 20th Century-Fox Studios in Hollywood for interior filming. It is a matter of record that the company finally departed, 20 hours before the deadline.

The Salzburg location underscores some of the changes that Ernest Lehman's screenplay made in the basic stage musical. To take advantage of the fluidity of the camera, and undisputed eye appeal of such Salzburg landmarks as the Felsenreitschule (Rocky Riding School) where opera is performed under the stars and against a fantastic labyrinth of stone arches, Lehman wrote in scenes which were only hinted at on stage. Thus, when Maria (Julie Andrews) leaves the Abbey to become a governess at the Von Trapp Villa, the camera follows her down the cobblestoned lane that leads from historic Nonnberg Abbey, perched on one of the bluffs overlooking the city. It brings her down through the center of town and onto a creaking bus that takes her to her new life. And when she takes the Von Trapp children on a picnic and teaches them to sing, utilizing the song "Do-Re-Mi," audiences are taken on a scenic tour of such places as the world-famous Mirabell Gardens, the Scharfberg cog railway and the shores of Wolfgangsee, the mountain lake on which the original White Horse Inn of musical fame is located.

All of the cast of "The Sound of Music" was on hand for the location work, including stars

Miss Andrews, Christopher Plummer, Eleanor Parker, Richard Haydn and Peggy Wood. Approximately half the production was shot in Salzburg—and the "City of Music" will never be the same.

For Wise this was his first musical following "West Side Story," which brought an Academy Award-winning bonanza. And, of course, history repeated itself when "The Sound of Music" won five Academy Awards including Best Picture and Best Direction.

No, this is not a different institution. Here we are in the early seventies, Wilco turned UNC-W. To the original three buildings, we have added Hanover Hall (the gym), the residence hall, the cafeteria-snack bar, Kenan Hall, Arnold Kimsey King Hall (the ed-psych building), William Madison Randall Library, Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium, and the chemistry-physics building. Not built at the time the photo was made, but since added is the new Isaac Bear business and economics building.

This famous structure was purchased in 1937 by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the state of North Carolina, and restored to its former eminence and charm.

The house was built in 1771, using the walls of the local jail for its stone foundations, Cornwallis used this area for a prison and dungeon while the house served as his headquarters.

BURT REYNOLDS: ON THE MOVE

If Burt Reynolds had grown up wanting to become an actor, he might never have become the superstar he is today.

That's the way he figures it, anyway.

"My boyhood heroes were guys like Doak Walker," he recalls. "The biggies in sports were the ones I looked up to, and I thought all actors were sissies. The theater and books never interested me as a kid. Luckily, later on some wonderful teachers opened up the world of the arts for me."

But while his horizons were broadening, Reynolds focused on athletics, football in particular, eventually developing into a pigskin great at Florida State. He even signed a contract to play professionally, but an automobile accident smashed his plans for a gridiron career.

"It was the end of one way of life and the beginning of another," he notes. "I had appeared in some theatricals at school and enjoyed it immensely, so acting was a natural thing to turn to. And I've been able to utilize my sports experience in performing. So far I've done a lot of 'action' acting — parts that call not only for characterization but also plenty of movement and body skills."

Nowhere is this more evident than in Reynolds' newest motion picture, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," in which he stars opposite Sarah Miles as a disillusioned ex-cavalry officer caught between love and family tragedy. In the course of the film, a Martin Poll Production also starring Lee J. Cobb, Jack Warden and George Hamilton, Burt accomplishes such derring-do as leaping off a fast-moving train in one scene and onto a racing horse in another. He also engages in a furious no-blows-barred fight with burly Jack Warden that would have turned the Marquis of Queensbury chalk white, and generally comports himself as if he were the invincible man.

"In one way you could say I've been in training to become an actor most of my life, even though I didn't have that specific ambition in the front of my mind all the time," he comments. "I was always out there trying to excel at what I was doing — whether it was football or whatever."

Is that how he won the moniker of "The Palm Beach Flash"?

He grimaces but admits it.

"Those tags always come back to haunt you," he grins.

So do other things. His enthusiastic approach to life sometimes expressed itself in the form of juvenile high jinks in his high school days. Witness this episode:

"My father, a wonderful straight-ahead guy, used to be the sheriff."

George Hamilton portrays Sarah Miles' disagreeable husband in MGM's "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing."

Reynolds recounts. "One night a couple of friends and I got busted by him for some harmless but annoying prank. He put us in separate cells, called the respective parents and then came by to tell each boy his father would be along soon to take him home. When he got to me, he just stared and finally said, 'I can't locate your father.'"

"It was one of his great lessons, and forgive me if it sounds like a cliché but I must say I'm proud to be his son. Jay Grobart, the character I play in "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," has some of my father's qualities. They're the kind of men who talk only when they have something to say and who give their all to complete a job and do it well. The stuff of which our pioneers were made."

This and other things about the role make Grobart one of Reynolds' favorite cinematic creations.

"The part is filled with action, but it also has great depth to it," he points out. "Jay isn't just a guy who's terrific at zapping someone who gets out of line. He's introspective and feels deeply about things. And this is the kind of role I'm particularly interested in taking these days."

"The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," the filmization of Marilyn Durham's best-selling novel, was adapted for the screen by Eleanor Perry and directed by Richard C. Sarafian. Martin Poll and Ms. Perry produced.

"I wanted to do the film version from the time I read the book," Reynolds says. "It's one of those marvelous properties that spotlights the fact that an action film can also be an actor's film."

For Reynolds, who's so at home in both the sports and speech departments, it's a particularly choice course.

Burt Reynolds starring as "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing," finds a new romance with Sarah Miles who stars as a woman running from her husband in the MGM adventure.

as it was countless oping their the guitar in the paper n we went that I can't remember them all," said Evoy. "Originally I was just going to sing. When I was 14 or 15 I took drum lessons for a couple of years. — marching lessons from one of the Queen's Own Rifles marching band. I used to drum in between times; every time we lost a drummer. Then we'd get another guy and I'd go back to singing; we'd lose the new drummer and I'd fill in again. It was crazy to go through all that, so after a couple of times I just kept drumming."

By this time Edward Bear was playing more often, earning a good local reputation in clubs like the Rock Pile and appearing on television. Their manager had been trying to contact Paul White, the A and R man for Capitol Records for about a year; in the end it was White who approached them. According to Evoy, "I think he saw a TV show that we did, and that's what made him decide. He wanted to sign us, and until that point he'd never seen us live."

Just before they signed with Capitol their bass player left, and they began to go through the same old hassles. "We tried four different people, and they were completely different from us. When you've been playing together for a while it's hard to find someone who can fit in right away, so we decided to forget it. Paul got a piano bass and we signed with Capitol as a three-piece band."

Things began to go very well with their first album, "Bearings". The single was selling well, bookings got better, and everyone expected Edward Bear to follow "You, Me, and Mexico" with more hit singles and another solid album. Instead, they pulled away and began to squabble among themselves about their musical direction. "Danny was a very bluesy guitar player," said Evoy. "After 'You, Me, and Mexico' he kept saying, 'We can't just be a popper band; we've gotta be heavy'. So the second album was heavy, and it went nowhere. We pulled the wrong single, 'You Can't Deny It', and it died."

Jobs began to get bad, the worst fiasco being a western tour just after the second album. "Eclipse" was recorded. Evoy remembers it as a bad joke. "We lost $5,000 doing that tour. It was completely demoralizing; we could've stayed home and had a vacation." When the tour was finished they began working with Roger

Ellis as a fill-in act, doing folk songs between their sets. Their situation showed no sign of improving, and eventually Danny Marks decided to leave the band. That's when Larry and Paul decided to work with Roger. "He wrote good songs, sang very well, and was a good guy to have around," said Evoy. "For the first time we found a replacement who fit right in."

The new Edward Bear was burdened with a 'has-been' image, and it was hard to get things rolling again. Nobody seemed to want to hear about a one hit band. They released a couple of non-descript singles and filled in with high school gigs and taverns. It wasn't until early 1972 that they had another well-received

James Bond In Exciting 'Live and Let Die'

ies of pro- film ming's nt and l by ment ora- Tom Dia- and television star Roger Moore to portray James Bond in "Live and Let Die," ended months of speculation, tests and conferences concerning the star of the latest Ian Fleming screen thriller. Moore, whose suave, sophisticated style and physically impressive manner conforms to author Fleming's concept of British Agent 007, made entertainment history by starring in five, top-rated international television series: "The Saint," "The Persuaders," "Ivanhoe," "The Alaskans" and "Maverick." He also appeared in a number of films, among them "The Last Time I Saw Paris" and "Rachel Cade."

Producers Broccoli and Saltzman were determined to have an Englishman for the role, and London-born and educated Roger Moore struck them as the ideal choice.

James Bond has a spectacular new leading lady. She is Jane Seymour, a 22-year-old raven-haired British beauty who plays the coveted role of Solitaire. Jane, a former ballet-dancer-turned-actress lives up to author Ian Fleming's description of Solitaire as "one of the most beautiful women Bond had ever seen." Solitaire also is one of Bond's most unusual leading ladies. She possesses remarkable telepathic powers which are used by Bond's dangerous enemy in a criminal plot to rule the world.

James Bond, fits the role perfectly as portrayed by Roger Moore and Harry Saltzman. He heard any good ones lately?

1. CITY HALL-THALIAN HALL. Northeast corner, Third and Princess Streets. This Classic Revival building was designed by John Trimmel of New York, and the cornerstone was laid December 27, 1815. Corinthian columns illustrated in this folder face Third Street, and Thalian Hall, in which the first theatrical performance was given October 12, 1818, faces Princess Street. The Thalian Association was formed and had commenced theatrical performances by 1788; its first home occupied the Innes Academy, located on the same site.
2. NEW HANOVER COUNTY COURTHOUSE. Southeast corner, Third and Princess Streets. The courthouse is a red brick Victorian structure built in 1892.
3. ST. JAMES EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Southeast corner, Third and Market Streets. St. James Parish was established in 1729, construction of the first church edifice having been authorized in 1711. The present Gothic Revival building was designed by Thomas U. Walter of Philadelphia, and the cornerstone was laid in 1839. During the Federal occupation in 1865, the keys were seized, the pews removed, and the building used as a Federal Hospital.
4. BURGWIN-WRIGHT HOUSE (CORNWALLIS HOUSE). Southwest corner, Third and Market Streets. This colonial house was built in 1772 by John Burgwin, merchant, Clerk of Council, and member of the upper house of the North Carolina Assembly. Founder of the building was the town pool. Authentic furnishings are used throughout the house. There is a separate three-story kitchen. In 1781, Lord Cornwallis used the house as his headquarters and the basement as a prison. Now owned by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in North Carolina, the building is open from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday at an admission charge of $1.00 for adults and 25c for students.
5. deROSSET HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Dock Streets. This Classic Revival house was built about 1853 by Dr. A. J. deRosset.
6. ST. THOMAS ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. 208 Dock Street. The cornerstone of this Gothic Revival building was laid in 1846, and the church was dedicated July 18, 1847. The noted James Cardinal Gibbons was vicar here in 1868.
7. MACRAE HOUSE. 108 South Third Street. This Victorian house was built about 1850 by Donald MacRae.
8. HART-KENAN HOUSE. 111 South Third Street. Built about 1810 by Levi Hart this Classic Revival structure has a carriage house which faces Cottage Lane.
9. SAVAGE HOUSE. 120 South Third Street. Col. Alfred Moore Waddell, historian, lived at one time in this Victorian house which was built about 1851 by Edward Savage.
10. ZEBULON LATIMER HOUSE. 126 South Third Street. This dwelling is a Classic Revival structure built for Zebulon Latimer in 1852 by R. B. Wood, on land purchased from Henry Savage. It is a fine example of the double house, with quarters and carriage house in the rear.
11. FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Third and Orange Streets. The original First Presbyterian Church was erected in 1817 on Front Street. The present building, designed by Hobart Upjohn, was completed in 1927. The Rev. Thomas Wilson, father of President Woodrow Wilson, was pastor of this church from 1872 to 1897.
12. HENRY G. LATIMER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Third and Orange Streets. This Victorian house, built in 1881, is now occupied by students of a local business college.
13. EDWARD LATIMER HOUSE. 208 South Third Street. This Victorian dwelling was built in 1881 by Edward Latimer.
14. DIOCESAN HOUSE. Southeast corner, Third and Ann Streets. This house was built by David R. Murchison in 1876 and was presented by his daughter to the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina.
15. DR. WILLIAM J. H. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Orange Streets. Of Classical Revival design, this dwelling was built about 1850 by R. B. Wood.
16. ST. JOHN'S ART GALLERY. 112 Orange Street. This building was originally occupied by St. John's Lodge on December 12, 1801. According to the minutes of the Lodge, the original deed was signed January 27, 1803 and the cornerstone laid June 12, 1804. The building was designed by Joseph Jacobs and erected by Benjamin Jacobs.
17. ANDERSON HOUSE. Southeast corner, Front and Orange Streets. Built about 1830, incorporating an Eighteenth Century corner house, this was later the home of Dr. Edwin A. Anderson, Confederate States Army Surgeon. Dr. Anderson's office still stands in the rear, facing Front Street.
18. BROWN-LORD-GROOVER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Ann Streets. Alterations and additions have given this house a Victorian character, but the oldest part seems to date back to the Revolution. It was owned by Robert Wells, prior to 1790.
19. GOVERNOR DUDLEY HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Nan Streets. A Georgian structure built about 1810, this was the home of Edward Bishop Dudley, the first Governor of North Carolina elected by the people. Plans for building the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, of which Dudley was first president, were formulated here. Among outstanding guests entertained by Governor Dudley was the Hon. Daniel Webster, a guest in 1847.
20. CASSIDY-NEWBOLD HOUSE. 1 Church Street. This house was built in the early Nineteenth Century. In 1828 James Cassidy bought the lot, extending from Front Street to the channel of the Cape Fear River. Cassidy Brothers Shipyards and Marine Railway was located at the foot of Church Street.
21. CAMERON-DIXON HOUSE. 6 Church Street. Colonial architecture of the raised cottage type characterizes this late Eighteenth Century house which was bought by Captain George Cameron in 1800. An unusual hanging stairway adds charm to the interior.
22. BEERY HOUSE. Southeast corner, Second and Nan Streets. Built by Captain Benjamin W. Beery prior to 1878, the Beery House was used by Federal troops as a hospital after the fall of Fort Fisher.
23. COOK-WHITTED HOUSE. 321 South Fourth Street. There is an outside brick kitchen in the rear of this Colonial cottage, built in the late Eighteenth Century. This was the residence of Captain Silas Martin during the Civil War.
24. THE CATHOLIC CHURCH OF ST. MARY. Northeast corner, Fifth and Ann Streets. The cornerstone of this church was laid in 1869. The building was designed
25. SUTTON-HOWEY HOUSE. 223 South Fourth Street. Of Colonial design, this was the residence, prior to 1800, of Martha Moore, and her husband, Ephraim Sutton.
26. EILERS HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Orange Streets. Built by H. B. Eilers in the 1850's, this Victorian residence is a brick town house, known for its excellent cast iron work.
27. HATHAWAY-BONEY HOUSE. 120 South Fifth Street. Jacob Wessell built this Classic Revival residence about 1850. It was sold in 1858 to James L. Hathaway, a merchant who resided there until about 1865.
28. PRICE-TOOMER HOUSE. 125 South Fifth Street. This house was constructed in 1840 by Richard W. Price.
29. FARTHING HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Dock Streets. Constructed about 1850, the Farthing house has a well-designed porch with curving steps at either end.
30. WILLIAMS HOUSE. 10 South Fifth Street. Now known as the Azalea Apartments, this house was built by George W. Williams about 1869.
31. PRICE-GAUSE HOUSE. 514 Market Street. A Victorian structure with simple decorative details, this house was built around 1845.
32. ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Sixth and Market Streets. This church was organized in 1818; cornerstone for the Gothic Revival building was laid in 1819. It was used by Federal forces as a hospital in 1865.
33. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Rufus H. Bunnell designed this Classic Revival mansion, and it was built by Dr. John D. Bellamy in 1859. It was used as officers' quarters by Generals Porter, Terry, Colfax and Hawley after the fall of Fort Fisher. Of particular interest are the double parlors with original Confederate Period furnishings. The mansion is open to the public from 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission charge is fifty cents for adults, twenty-five cents for children.
34. FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH. Northwest corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Congregation of this church was organized in 1808. The lot was purchased in 1818, and the Gothic Revival edifice was constructed during the period 1859 to 1869.
35. WILMINGTON PUBLIC LIBRARY. 409 Market Street. Built about 1840 by John Allen Taylor as a residence, this building was bought in 1892 by the Wilmington Light Infantry and given by that organization to the City in 1915.
36. MARTIN-HUGGINS HOUSE. 413 Market Street. Built in 1869 by Alfred Martin, this was the residence of Captain John Newland Maffitt after his marriage to Emma Martin in 1870. Original carriage house still stands.
37. TEMPLE OF ISRAEL. Southeast corner, Fourth and Market Streets. The first Jewish congregation in North Carolina was organized in Wilmington in 1867. The Temple was erected in 1874-76.
38. ST. JAMES CEMETERY. Southwest corner, Fourth and Market Streets. This cemetery contains many interesting headstones of Colonial citizens.

release, "Fly Across The Sea" it was recorded for the ECLIPSE album, but Larry, Paul, and Roger re-recorded it for single release. "When we finally got it done the way it should have been, it was like following up "You, Me, and Mexico", only two years later," said Evoy. "It built from there; "Masquerade" did pretty well, and we were getting airplay again. Then we changed producers, Terry Brown did our early records in Toronto Sound, but when we switched to Gene Martynec we moved to Thunder, because that's where he liked to work. It doesn't make much difference to me. Some people are really picky because they find it hard to feel comfortable anywhere but one or two places. As long as we're not recording in a barn I don't have too much trouble getting settled down."

"The Last Song" has been a major turning point for Edward Bear. Soon after it's release it was certified as a Canadian gold record (50,000 Canadian sales). Within a few months it also received an American gold record for more than a million sales; the Bear not only came back, but they were bigger than ever.

Paul Weldon recently left the band, not because of differences, but because of other commitments. He established a graphic design company, which began to do so well that he couldn't afford the time to travel with the band. "His wife just had a baby," said Evoy, "and he wasn't ever really crazy about all the traveling. With a family, who needs it?" Weldon still lives close to Evoy, and they get together quite often. The new organist, Bob Kendall, is a perfect replacement. He has adjusted very well to the Edward Bear style of music and after all the false starts, he doesn't plan to stray too far from it again. "There's no reason to, because that style is me; it's how I write songs, and it's how we play them. It took us long enough to find out what we should be doing. Now the idea is to keep it going, to produce creatively what you know people enjoy and want to hear."

Now that we've got people interested in Edward Bear again, we're going to try to keep them interested and listening."

AZALEA COAST

Attractions . . .

The City of Wilmington, nearby beaches, and the entire Azalea Coast area offers the tourist-vacationer an amazing variety of ways to enjoy his visit. As this booklet clearly shows, there is also a wide variety of accommodations for any budget. And not the least of the area's attractions is the friendly, gracious nature of its people. You'll enjoy your visit to the Azalea Coast.

BEACHES—Wrightsville Beach, Carolina Beach, and Kure Beach offer access to miles and miles of the finest strand along the Atlantic seaboard. All the customary seashore activities are available, plus the opportunity to relax in solid comfort under the bright Carolina sun.

FISHING—Fine charter fishing boats with experienced skippers are available for deep sea fishing at Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches. You may fish for the big ones in the Gulf Stream, or enjoy a short off-shore trip. There are six ocean piers and many miles of clean strand for surf fishing. New Hanover County boasts the world's largest fishing club.

GARDENS—The Azalea Coast is famous for its lovely gardens which reach their peak of beauty in the spring. The formal gardens surrounding the historic house at Orton Plantation are world famous. Airlie Gardens is a wonderland of azaleas, camellias, charming lakes and walkways. Beautiful Greenfield Gardens surrounds a lovely lake and is open to visitors, admission free. Each April at Wilmington the height of the flower season is celebrated with the four-day North Carolina Azalea Festival.

SPORTS—Protected water and the broad Atlantic are both readily available to the boating enthusiast. Fine marinas and launching facilities are available for the smallest dinghy or the largest cruisers—power or sail. Water skiing, surfing, and swimming are quite popular. Golfers enjoy the Azalea Coast courses the year around. Tennis and hunting also are popular outdoor activities.

AMUSEMENTS—A variety of amusements, especially at the beaches is yours to enjoy. There are rides, miniature golf, par 3 golf, and many motion picture theatres. Excellent bowling facilities are available, and there are many fine restaurants, especially for seafood. The area boasts two television stations and several radio stations.

'73 ... the year of the brave ?

pembroke state enjoys banner year

by Gene Warren
Public Information Director,
Pembroke State University

Any way you look at it, 1972-73 was a remarkable sports year for Pembroke State University. So many championship flags were flying at PSU, it resembled the United Nations. A cavern-sized trophy case became a No. 1 priority.

Looking at the PSU sweep reminds one of Secretary's Triple Crown triumphs:

-- Pembroke State won NAIA District 29 championships in basketball, baseball, cross country, indoor track, outdoor track and wrestling.

-- In each of those six sports, the coach of the Braves was voted by his District 29 peers as "Coach of the Year". The coaches were Lacey Gane, basketball, Harold Ellen, baseball; Ed Crain, cross country, indoor and outdoor track; and Mike Olson, wrestling. Gane heads the program as athletic director.

--The PSU basketball team reached the NAIA National Tournament at Kansas City, Mo., and the PSU baseball team battled its way to the NAIA World Series at Phoenix, Ariz. Thus Pembroke athletes seemed to stay airborne.

--Pitcher Ron Norman of the baseball team won first team NAIA All-American honors and led the nation in strikeouts with 200 strikeouts victims in 141 2/3 innings. He was the talk of the state when he went 57 innings without yielding a run.

--Dave Phillips won All-American in the high jump in both indoor and outdoor track.

--Bob Hudkins, wrestling in the 177-pound class, became the university's first NAIA wrestling All-American after becoming its first state champion in the 190-pound class.

There were many other highlights. Alphonzo McRae, the Braves' great shooter in basketball with high-scoring performances of 31 and 30 points, was chosen NAIA honorable mention All-American.

In baseball, pitcher Ronnie Rudd was selected the winner of the NAIA's Gene Waldron Scholarship Award, presented annually at Phoenix to the best student-athlete in NAIA baseball. Considering there are some 11,000 young men playing baseball for 468 NAIA schools in America, this was perhaps the greatest honor of all for Rudd and his school. Rudd's teammates--Ron Norman, Rudy all made all-state.

PSU had NAIA District 29's "Most Valuable" performer in the following sports: Basketball - Alphonzo McRae; baseball - Rudy Rudacille; indoor track - Dave Phillips; outdoor track - Dennis Graham; wrestling - Bob Hudkins. Phillips was also chosen the "Most Valuable" in the VMI relays.

In two basketball tournaments, PSU cagers reaped other plaudits. Barry O'Brien was chosen the MVP in the Campbell Tip-Off Tournament at Fayetteville, won by PSU, and two of his teammates--Tom St. Clair and McRae--were picked on the all-tournament team. Everett Hambric made the all-tournament team in the Quaker Classic at Greensboro.

The Braves had so many all-district athletes, it was difficult to keep track of them. They added up to 37 in number.

NAIA District 29 is composed of 17 universities and colleges in Eastern North Carolina and Virginia.

Somehow--no one at Pembroke seems to understand why--the Braves did not also win the soccer, tennis, and golf titles. Lynchburg was champion in soccer, Atlantic Christian took tennis and Campbell won out in golf. "Oh, well," the PSU coaches may rationalize, "what's that old saying about you can't win them all?"

The coaches wear that look of the cat-that-swallowed-the-canary. They know they had a VERY good year.

And what is bound to cause nightmares for the opposition is that the vast majority of those athletes return--plus many blue-chip recruits.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Not only did PSU display its talents in baseball this spring, but currently are sitting only a few percentage points behind UNC-W in summer play. Also, Ron Norman, star PSU pitcher, is boasting a 5-0 record thus far this summer in the Virginia Valley League. It seems that PSU sports know no seasons--save winning.

SPORTS POTS

MURCER CLAIMS FINE UNJUST

Bobby Murcer, all star centerfielder for the New York Yankees, was fined recently by baseball's commissioner Bowie Kuhn. The fine was imposed when the slugging leftlander called Kuhn "gutless". The reasoning behind Murcer's outburst was Kuhn's failure to do something about the use of an illegal pitch by Cleveland's Gaylord Perry. It seems Perry, in attempt to keep ahead of the batters, has been applying vaseline to his armpits before games and greasing the ball while on the mound. Murcer's fine was $250.

SWEDE SAVAGE DIES FROM INDY 500 INJURIES

Swede Savage, the youngest driver on the United States Auto Club championship circuit, died at age 26 from injuries he received in a fiery crash May 20 during the Indianapolis 500. Savage is one of three to lose his life in this year's Indy with critically injured Salt Walther still in serious condition.

ALLEN, FISK EARN ALL-STAR BERTHS

With only one week left in the balloting for starting berths on the American League all-star team, first baseman Dick Allen and catcher Carlton Fisk (of Chicago and Boston respectively) appear to win starting berths. Perennial all-star Brooks Robinson also has his seasonal task of protecting the third base line for the stars as the balloting currently shows him leading third baseman by some 100,000 votes. Balloting ends July 8.

FOREMAN SAYS HE THINKS BUGNER BEAT FRAZIER

After what seemed to be a most impressive victory for Joe Frazier, world heavyweight champion George Foreman said he was surprised at the decision. Foreman, who was a ringside, said he thought it was a most impressive fight, but also he thought Bugner had outpointed the former Champ.

Wine is the child of sun and earth, the collaboration of art, patience, time and care, the ripe communion. Firstly with the soil into which it sinks its roots and from which it receives soul and body. Secondly, communion with ourselves. It educates our taste, training us to turn our attention inward, from the mind, and illuminates the intelligence. Lastly, wine is a symbol and the means of social communion. Around a table, of guests are at the same level as the cup goes round.

HAWKS REMAIN ALOFT IN SUMMER LOOP ACTION

Duke Sanderson put the Bucs of ECU away for the third time this season as the Hawks regained sole possession of first place in Carolina Summer League play. This was Duke's 4th start of the season as he ran his record to 3-1.

This victory teamed with Paul Fulton's victory over Pembroke last week and helped avenge the trouncing received at the hands of Campbell College (22-).

The Hawks are now half way through the summer season and if the pitching remains as good as it has been, it is likely that the 1973 summer championship trophy will be in the showcase in Hanover Hall along with other awards earned by Coach Bill Brooks' teams.

It's Here— Reggae Rock

—Loraine Alterman in THE NEW YORK TIMES

WHEN anyone mentions West Indian music, steel bands and calypso instantly echo in the mind, but Jamaica's most popular music is reggae (rhymes with olé) which has a rhythm as pronounced as a Jamaican accent. If you heard Paul Simon's "Mother and Child Reunion" which he recorded in Kingston's chief studio,

Dynamic Sounds, two years ago, you were hearing reggae by the first white American musician to plunge into Jamaica's number one beat. More recently radio stations have been throbbing with Johnny Nash's huge hit I Can See Clearly Now. That Nash single and album of the same name (Epic KE 31697) plus two brand new releases by Jamaicans — The Wailers

Catch a Fire (Island SW 9329) and Jimmy Cliff The Harder They Come (Mango MAN 1)—just could make reggae as vital a trend as hard rock or folk rock.

Initially called ska, then rock steady and now reggae, Jamaican pop music has occasionally hit the charts here, first in 1964 with Millie Small's "My Boy Lollipop." Five years later Desmond Dekker's "Israelites" and Jimmy Cliff's "Wonderful World, Beautiful People" garnered big sales as did Dave and Ansell Collins' "Double Barrel" a couple of years ago. Aside from Americans Paul Simon and Johnny Nash, other non-Jamaicans who picked up on the island sound were the Beatles ("Ob-La-Di, Ob-La-Da"), Paul McCartney ("Love Is Strange") and "C Moon") and, though they're not making a reggae record, the Rolling Stones just recorded at Dynamic Sounds. The Staple Singers hit single, "I'll Take You There," cops the bass line from a reggae record called "The Liquidator."

Whereas in England, with its large West Indian population, real reggae possesses a strong following and identity, America has not yet tuned into this special sound.

Although difficult to define, reggae is characterized by a strong, pulsating bass guitar line with the drums coming in on the offbeat—"a strange feeling of syncopation," as Paul Simon puts it. The choked, stuttering guitar you hear on Simon's record is played by Jamaica's heaviest guitarist, Huku Brown, who developed this unique style that he uses on numerous reggae records.

But words can't do justice to the music. Just listen to The Harder They Come, the soundtrack album to the marvelous Jamaican film of the same name opening in New York this Thursday. The album not only contains cuts by the film's star, Jimmy Cliff, Jamaica's best known reggae singer, but it also includes numbers by other popular Jamaican performers like the Maytals, Melodians, Slickers and Desmond Dekker. In fact, the film's producer and director, Perry Henzell, decided against having a film score written so that he could work into the soundtrack all the reggae records that hit him hard in the past three or four years. Both the album and the film provide a solid and irresistible introduction to reggae.

Right off, your body can't resist the rhythm—a sensual rhythm not marked by the raw sexual thrust of rhythm and blues, but charged with the languid heat of the tropics. Sometimes difficult to understand because of the Jamaican dialect, reggae lyrics, like the blues, express the life style of the Jamaican blacks forgotten in all those pitches for the luxury playgrounds of Montego Bay. Songs like Desmond Dekker's "Shanty Town" and The Slickers' "Johnny Too Bad" vividly depict the crime that lures desperate young men in the slums just as it does in Harlem and Watts.

Other songs protest the vicious heritage of slavery and poverty like Cliff's "You Can Get It If You Really Want" and "The Harder They Come" and, on the Wailers' album, "Concrete Jungle" and "Slave Driver." But, as Simon notes: "The lyrics still are positive in the sense that they say 'I'm going to get my thing' rather than 'the man is sitting on me.'" Then there's reggae's sexy side as in The Wailers' "Rock It Baby," "Sittin' Up" and "Kinky Reggae," which is downright raunchy.

All of the Wailers' songs, except for two, were written by their lead vocalist and guitarist, Bob Marley. Marley co-produced the album with Island Records' boss, Chris Blackwell, a white Jamaican who is, to a great extent, responsible for popularizing reggae in Britain. This album shows just why Marley has been ranked in the same innovative class as Sly Stone and Marvin Gaye. Though reggae's insinuating beat has sometimes been called monotonous by the uninitiated, Marley's production brings out the fascinating interplay between bassist Aston "Family Man" Barrett and his brother, drummer Carlton Barrett. Marley's lead vocals, supported by the backup high harmonies of keyboard man Peter Mackintosh and percussionist Bunny Livingston, are filled with the intensity of the best soul singers.

Though not every cut on Johnny Nash's LP is reggae, the huge impact of the single "I Can See Clearly Now" must help establish the music here. Songs like "Guava Jelly," "Stir It Up" and "Comma Comma"—all written by Marley who is also a friend and associate of Nash—capture the Jamaican sound. A black American who got hooked on Jamaica and its music several years ago, Nash adds instruments over and above the basic reggae rhythm section so that his sound comes across richer and more musically sophisticated.

It is important to remember that ska, rock steady and now reggae are all music to dance to. No one seems to know the origins of the word "reggae," but the music's roots are diverse. According to disc jockey Jeff Barnes who is Jamaican: "Much of the Jamaican music is an indigenous form but it had its beginnings in American down-south rhythm and blues. Then there's a religious sect in Jamaica called 'Poco Mania'—it means little madness—and that started to have some influence on it. Another thing which had some heavy influence was another Jamaican music called mento which is similar to calypso."

In a sense, reggae's growth parallels that of another original black music, the blues. In the beginning as a basic ghetto music, reggae was not really respectable. But when superstars like Paul Simon and Paul McCartney gave reggae their blessings, it was exposed to a wider audience. At a time when the borders between different types of contemporary rock music have become blurred, reggae remains a distinctive, exciting style. As demonstrated so well by The Wailers, Jimmy Cliff and Johnny Nash, reggae has the energy and momentum to get the fans up out of their concert hall seats and dancing in the aisles once again.

Butterflies flutter out Sunday

Sunday night, July 15, will end the run of the delightful comedy "Butterflies Are Free" at the air-conditioned Kenan Auditorium on the UNC-W campus. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. and reservations may be made by calling 791-9695.

Leonard Gersche, the author of "Butterflies Are Free" won an academy award nomination for the original screen play "Funny Face" and has authored the book for the Broadway musical "Destry Rides Again."

One morning Gersche was listening to a radio interview with a blind Harvard law student who was chuckling over the fact that his draft board had classified him 1-A. "I had never met a blind person, and was bowled over by this boy's humor and healthy attitude about his situation," Gersche says.

The author had also been thinking about the personality of a friend of his, a young Hollywood star who was wary of committing himself to any permanent relationship. He was intrigued by the idea of bringing these two characters together in a play. And so "Butterflies Are Free" came to be.

When one is young and moves into an apartment for the first time, even if it's a cramped cold-water flat in Manhattan's lower East Side, then one knows what exhilaration is. It is here that we find Don Baker, played by Tom Sweeney, who is trying to determine if he can manage on his own by living away from his strong, protective mother for the first time in his life. Mrs. Baker is portrayed by Kay Swink.

After one month, an unusual wrinkle is added to his experience when Jill, played by Melanie Michele, a 19-year-old divorcee, invites herself over for a cup of coffee. She has recently moved into the next apartment - just beyond Don's paper-thin walls.

The fourth member of the cast is a free-wheeling off-Broadway director named Ralph Austin, played by Sam Garner, who serves to put the other three into sharp focus. He is the wedge that Mrs. Baker drives between her son and Jill.

Mary Mac Moore serves as stage manager with Ramona Hutton as technical director. The production has been designed by Cam Baird, with Doug W. Swink as director.

Tickets and seat reservations are available by calling the box office between 2 and 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday at 791-9695, and by calling 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

Brunswick Town-Fort Anderson ruins provide archaeological interest

The colonial town of Brunswick was begun in 1726 by Maurice Moore as a real estate venture. The town soon grew into a major port for the exportation of tar and lumber from the forests of southeastern North Carolina.

In the 1730's Brunswick was the county seat of New Hanover County. In 1764 it became the center of government for Brunswick County. The North Carolina Assembly often met in the courthouse, particularly during the twelve years Brunswick was the residence of Royal Governors Dobbs and Tryon.

In 1748 the town was captured by Spanish sailors and held for three days before being recaptured by the citizens under the leadership of William Dry.

It was at Brunswick in 1765 that a group of citizens led by Cornelius Harnett surrounded the home of Governor Tryon and protested the Stamp Act by placing the Governor under house arrest. The use of arms by this group was one of the first incidents of armed resistance to British authority in America.

At the outbreak of the American Revolution in 1775 the citizens began to fear that British warships would attack the town. Because of this they moved away, and in 1776 their fears were realized when Brunswick was burned by British sailors.

Only two or three families moved back after the war, (continued to p. 3)

"You won't look like a hippie. You'll look hip." Melanie Michele and Tom Sweeney star in "Butterflies Are Free."

BOOK REVIEWS

SCHOOLS UNDER PRESSURE

The tension and unrest on American campuses in the 1960s may have been widespread, but it did not have uniform causes and was not amenable to uniform solutions. This is one of the conclusions of ACADEMIC TRANSFORMATION: SEVENTEEN INSTITUTIONS UNDER PRESSURE, edited by David Riesman, Henry Ford II Professor of Social Sciences at Harvard, and Verne A. Stadt-man, Assistant Director of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education (McGraw-Hill, $12.50).

The colleges and universities reported upon are Antioch College, the University of California at Berkeley, the City College of New York, the Federal City College, Harvard, M.I.T., the University of Michigan, Old Westbury College, the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton University, Rutgers, San Francisco State College, Stanford University, Swarthmore, the University of Toronto, Wesleyan, and the University of Wisconsin.

The 17 authors of the reports are experienced observers of American higher education, and have had prolonged associations with the institutions they write about.

Common issues, perceived as "central to the most disruptive events of the period," include the individual and political rights of students; the war in Vietnam and war-related issues; the urge to extend opportunities for higher education to members of minority groups; the issue of student participation in campus decision making.

ACADEMIA AND URBAN CRISIS

The involvement of eight colleges and universities in efforts to solve urban, community, and minority group problems is reviewed in THE UNIVERSITY AND THE CITY by George Nash, Director of the Drug Abuse Treatment Information Project for the State of New Jersey, and his collaborators Dan Waldorf and Robert Price (a Carnegie Commission on Higher Education book published by McGraw-Hill, $6.95).

"The university can and should become involved in urban crisis," argues Dr.

Nash, "the debate revolves around the manner and style of involvement, and the criteria for deciding whether a given university should attempt a given project."

The book presents examples of how a higher educational institution in an urban setting can become involved as an educator; as a neighbor and citizen; as a provider of services, and as a model for the rest of society.

"The key element in all the studies is leadership," states Dr. Nash, "each is a story revolving around personalities.... Our conclusion is that any institution should choose carefully from the vast list of things it might do, so as not to dissipate its resources or disappoint those who seek its help."

This study was an influential resource document for the Carnegie Commission report, THE CAMPUS AND THE CITY, published by McGraw-Hill in December, 1972.

AZALEA COAST

Attractions . . .

The City of Wilmington, nearby beaches, and the entire Azalea Coast area offers the tourist-vacationer an amazing variety of ways to enjoy his visit. As this booklet clearly shows, there is also a wide variety of accommodations for any budget. And not the least of the area's attractions is the friendly, gracious nature of its people. You'll enjoy your visit to the Azalea Coast.

BEACHES—Wrightsville Beach, Carolina Beach, and Kure Beach offer access to miles and miles of the finest strand along the Atlantic seaboard. All the customary seashore activities are available, plus the opportunity to relax in solid comfort under the bright Carolina sun.

FISHING—Fine charter fishing boats with experienced skippers are available for deep sea fishing at Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches. You may fish for the big ones in the Gulf Stream, or enjoy a short off-shore trip. There are six ocean piers and many miles of clean strand for surf fishing. New Hanover County boasts the world's largest fishing club.

GARDENS—The Azalea Coast is famous for its lovely gardens which reach their peak of beauty in the spring. The formal gardens surrounding the historic house at Orton Plantation are world famous. Airline Gardens is a wonderland of azaleas, camellias, charming lakes and walkways. Beautiful Greenfield Gardens surrounds a lovely lake and is open to visitors, admission free. Each April at Wilmington the height of the flower season is celebrated with the four-day North Carolina Azalea Festival.

SPORTS—Protected water and the broad Atlantic are both readily available to the boating enthusiast. Fine marinas and launching facilities are available for the smallest dinghy or the largest cruisers—power or sail. Water skiing, surfing, and swimming are quite popular. Golfers enjoy the Azalea Coast courses the year around. Tennis and hunting also are popular outdoor activities.

AMUSEMENTS—A variety of amusements, especially at the beaches is yours to enjoy. There are rides, miniature golf, par 3 golf, and many motion picture theatres. Excellent bowling facilities are available, and there are many fine restaurants, especially for seafood. The area boasts two television stations and several radio stations.

Seahawk plans publication of 'opportunities' supplement

A Special "Student Seahawk" supplement will be published with the first fall issue of The Seahawk set for release August 27.

Providing and emphasizing information not necessarily covered in the student handbook, the supplement will center on the various opportunities and activities on campus which are open to students.

Facilities for individual research and inquiry, contests and activities, and University services such as those provided by the office of Student Affairs (placement center, counseling and testing, student health service) are among those things that will be outlined and explained.

Students having questions about any of the University services or functions should direct them to The Seahawk office in the Pub (Student Services Building).

SRO actors dream with Walter Mitty

Opening on Tuesday, July 17 and running for six performances in the S.R.O. Theatre in Kenan Hall on campus will be the new musical comedy, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty." This catchy little musical is based on the well-known James Thurber character, Walter Mitty, and is a chronicle of Mitty's everyday life in reality and in his dreams.

Peter Smith will play the title role with Melanie Mechele as his wife Agnes. Interwoven with Mitty's daily routine of making a living as a toy salesman and dealing with his daughter Peninnah (Sarah Robinette), local barkeep Harry (Tony Rivenbark) and his old school chum now turned big wheeler Fred Gorman (Sam Garner) are the people of his dreams and aspirations.

There are dreams of valor in times of war with Commander MacMillan (John Van Johnson); dreams of being a playboy with Willa de Wisp (Sue Hall), Hazel (Wyatt Rider), Ruthie (Mary Mac Moore), and Sylvia (Barbara McDaniels); dreams of Mitty the great physician with doctors portrayed by Joel Perry, Pat Parker, and Allen Randall; and dreams of being an astronaut and others.

Walter Mitty's dream girl

Sue Hall is involved with a muscle-building health food fanatic Irving (Bill Lambert) who acts as a foil to Mitty in more than one scene, Irving and Willa (Miss Hall) move throughout the play as examples of Mitty's ability to dream and yet incorporate people of reality in his dreams.

Actually a combination of serious drama and light comedy, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" is a new and different approach to the classic idea that man must have his dreams but his dreams and his real life must work together—neither must over power the other.

The musical direction for the play is being handled by Bob Alexander with piano by Susan Dermid. The show is directed by Doug Swink and Roland Valentine is stage manager. Designer Cam Baird has come up with many portable settings for the play to showcase the dream scenes with his usual artistic ability.

Tickets and seat reservations are available by calling the box office between 2 and 5 p.m., Monday thru Friday at 791-9695 and by calling 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

The next S.R.O. Theatre summer straw hat production is the Agatha Christie mystery, the longest running London play of its type, "The Mousetrap" which will be directed by Sam Garner and will open on Tuesday, July 24 and run thru Sunday, July 29 at Kenan Auditorium.

BRUNSWICK—FT. ANDERSON

FORT ANDERSON

During the Civil War, after Brunswick Town had lain in ruins for almost a century, a Confederate fort was built diagonally across the site. After the fall of Fort Fisher in January, 1865, Fort Anderson held out for thirty days. It was abandoned after a three-day bombardment by the Union Navy and an encircling movement on land by General Schofield's Army of the Ohio.

The earthworks of Fort Anderson stand today as an enormous monument of the Civil War and offer a vantage point from which to view the ruins of Brunswick.

Archaeology conducted during the summer of 1966 revealed several burials and additional footings inside the ruin of St. Philips Church.

A Visitor Center-Museum has been completed which houses exhibits, a lecture room, rest rooms, and administrative and research areas. A picnic area is available also.

and by 1830 the town was totally in ruins. In 1842 the site was sold to Frederick J. Hill for $4.25, and was added to the lands of Orton Plantation.

To date twelve of the sixty foundations located by the archaeologist have been excavated, and many objects of scientific and historical interest have been found. Field displays throughout the town area explain the site to the visitor. No reconstruction of houses is planned. Rather the foundations and other features will be uncovered

Nitty Gritty ain't dirt...it's country

Many people would say that the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band don't play country music. They do. Just a little differently.

Until Mother Maybelle Carter's historic double album is released, the most significant album to be recorded in Nashville was brought about by the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band. It's titled "Will The Circle Be Unbroken" and Mother Maybelle played on that too. So just who are the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band members and what are they trying to do?

They originally got together in 1966 and the five current members were united in 69. They are: John McEuen, tall, bearded and 28-years-old. He plays five-string banjo. Twenty-six-year-old Jeff Hanna is a city boy, like the rest of the band—he's from Detroit. Jeff plays guitar and washboard and once played in Linda Ronstadt's band. Jimmie Fadden, a year younger, was born and raised in Long Beach, Calif., which is a long way from the Appalachian mountains where the autoharp used to be so popular. Nevertheless, Jimmie's first instrument was autoharp, after which he took up harmonica. Les Thompson, who plays guitar, bass and mandolin, also lives in Long Beach but spent his childhood in Canada and Alaska. There, he was "brought up to appreciate what was put on earth to enjoy". The remaining member, 26-year-old Jim Ebotson, grew up with rock 'n' roll. He plays drums and has a degree in Economics. Their goal is to play good music for people who like to be entertained.

Onstage the band maintains a fast pace and good humour. They switch instruments a lot, mainly acoustic, and color their string band music with strict bluegrass, country, rock'n'roll and hard rock. They even make a brief appearance in the film version of "Paint Your Wagon". Clearly they believe in enjoying themselves, and they expect their audiences—most young college people—to do the same. But they're serious about their records.

Their early albums for United Artist were uneven, attempting to portray the many styles of the band, but all have the earthiness so much a part of the aptly-named Nitty Gritty Dirt Band. Their album sleeves featured reproductions of photographs of old engines, belching smoke as they crossed trestle bridges, where many record sleeves are blank or advertise other albums. One album, titled "Uncle Charlie And His Dog Teddy", carries a photograph of the old man playing guitar and harmonica with his dog at his feet. The record includes a passage of Uncle Charlie taken from an old wire tape recording. The music reflects this fascination with old music and old, country, trains and Americana. City boys searching for their heritage. They finally found it in Nashville, Tenn.

"Will The Circle Be Unbroken" is a three record set. Apart from the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, the names listed on the cover are Mother Maybelle Carter, Earl Scruggs, Doc Watson, Roy Acuff, Merle Travis, Jimmy Martin, Vassar Clements, the late Junior Huskey, Norman Blake and Pete Kirby-Oswald. Bill Monroe was respectfully invited to join these country music greats but declined, reportedly because he considered the Colorado-based Nitty Gritty Dirt Band were not sufficiently serious about what they were doing and were using famous names to enhance their own reputation. If so, he was proved sadly wrong. He should have played on this record.

The lavishly packaged album includes many color photographs of the sessions, which were at Woodland Sound Studios, trains, early aeroplanes, wildflowers, horses and a number of pictures of Vassar Clements' carved fiddle, whose magnificent carving and inlay was matched by its superb tone. More pictures are on the sleeves, together with reprints of articles in "The Tennessean" and "Rolling Stone" and a symbolic photograph of the Ryman Auditorium with classical fountain superimposed.

The 37 songs begin with Hylo Brown's "Grand Ole Opry Song" featuring Jimmy Martin and Vassar Clements and end with Earl Scruggs' supremely talented son, Randy, playing Joni Mitchell's song "Both Sides Now" on solo guitar and underlining the point that "music forms a new circle" ... Each Nashville artist takes lead on a portion of the album and most usually helps out elsewhere. The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band play the lesser role most of the time, with John McEuen occasionally taking a banjo solo.

Doc Watson and Vassar Clements appeared to have enjoyed the sessions most and Mother Maybelle gave an indication of what her own forthcoming album might be like. Roy Acuff told Jack Hurst, then of the "Tennessean", that "I did it because Wesley Rose asked me to do it. He said he thought it might sort of increase the respect between our brand of music and theirs." Jimmy Martin praised the Dirt Band: "If you could hire musicians like them around here to go with you on the road, there's no telling what you'd be able to do." Roy Acuff's only real reservation concerned the length of their hair, which was long but tidy.

"Mary Poppins" Reissue Marks One Decade in Hollywood for Julie Andrews

In 1963 Julie Andrews was a sensation on Broadway and in London. But she couldn't get a break in Hollywood.

Rumors had been circulating that, though Julie was talented "and delicately pretty in an aloof sort of way," she just didn't look good on screen. Her jaw was too firmly set.

"My only screen test had been for MGM in England when I was 13," Julie says. "I had a freak adult larynx, skinny legs, and the poise you'd expect from a 13-year-old. They dressed me in white organdy with black patent shoes, coiffed me with curls, and breathlessly awaited the emergence of an English combination of Deanna Durbin and Shirley Temple. It just didn't come off."

Julie persevered on the stage. In 1961, she was enjoying the successful Broadway run of Lerner and Loewe's "Camelot," as Queen Guinevere to Richard Burton's King Arthur. She had just meandered through a year of semi-leisure after playing Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady" for nearly four years in London and on Broadway.

Julie knew that Warner Brothers was planning to film "My Fair Lady" and she was anxiously awaiting word.

"I wanted the part at the time," explains Julie. "After all I felt I had all of the qualifications."

Playing Eliza in a big budgeted film version of "Lady" would have been a desirable way to make a grand Hollywood entrance.

She was still waiting for that phone call when after a performance of "Camelot" one evening, Walt Disney appeared in her life and offered her the title role in "Mary Poppins."

Dilemma. A firm offer to go to Hollywood for Disney. A chance of playing Eliza for Warners.

The decision was made for her. Since Julie had no name at the movie box-office, producer Jack Warner figured that established star Audrey Hepburn was better suited for "My Fair Lady."

"Mary Poppins" was made. And "Mary Poppins" made Julie. In 1964 the Disney musical, scheduled to go into re-release this summer, won her the Academy Award for Best Actress.

Walt Disney and Bill Walsh, co-producer on the picture, had helped her immeasurably. First by casting her in one of the studio's most acclaimed films. And second, by promoting her in Hollywood.

Early in the production of "Mary Poppins," which also starred Dick Van Dyke, David Tomlinson and Glynis Johns, Disney permitted 20th Century-Fox and MGM producers to view rushes of Julie and Dick doing musical numbers together. The rushes were sketchy and technically incomplete but Julie and Dick glistened in them.

20th signed Julie for "The Sound of Music" and MGM gave her the title role in "The Americanization of Emily." Julie not only had her break in Hollywood; she was taking the town over.

Things were happening fast. Having won her Oscar for "Mary Poppins" she was nominated again for "The Sound of Music." She made "Hawaii" and was drawing like crazy at those same box-offices that had ignored her just two years before.

By 1965 her films had grossed nearly $125 million. By 1971 she was Hollywood's top grossing box-office draw.

Even now, ten years later, she still holds on to those "Mary Poppins" days. When she fluffs a line while taping her weekly TV show, she'll utter, "Mary Poppins blew it again." And about the image the picture established for her. "I'd like to a sex symbol, but I'm not and never will be. Umbrellas suit me better."

Filmed in brilliant Technicolor, and based on the famed Mary Poppins books by P. L. Travers, this whimsical story of an English nanny and her marvelous, magical adventures also stars Julie Andrews and Dick Van Dyke. Robert Stevenson directed and Bill Walsh co-produced. ## DIRECTOR OF TEACHERS EXPELLED

Jonathan Kaplan, director of the new film "The Student Teachers," was expelled from high school recently at the age of twenty-five.

Mr. Kaplan tells his story this way, "To research the picture I decided to go back to high school. It was a public school in the city and was so overcrowded, I was there off and on for almost three weeks and nobody noticed. The kids noticed, some of them, but no one else. There were sixty students in rooms that held thirty. Most of them have contempt for high school. One student took me to his locker and showed me his weapon collection. I once spent an hour and a half in the principal's office 'cause I was two minutes late to class. There were so many of us there they didn't even ask our names. We waited 89 minutes, then the assistant principal came out, gave us a thirty second spiel on promptness, and sent us on to the next class.

"Two days later I got caught. They said they could have me arrested but settled on seeing my picture when it was finished. I had an 'A' average but if they see my film, I'll probably fail."

Lovely Susan Damante continues her rise to stardom in the new comedy film, "The Student Teachers," now playing at the Colony theatre. Susan last starred in "The Candidate" with Robert Redford and "The Great American Beauty Contest," a recent ABC Movie of the Week.

Nine Year Old Tatum O'Neal Makes Debut As Leading Lady

Tatum O'Neal, nine years old, is a lady in the guise of a little girl. Her wide eyes catch everything around her as if she is recording impressions in mental videotape to replay as a memory.

For two months Tatum played with movie cameras instead of dolls, taking on the very adult responsibility of leading lady to her father Ryan O'Neal in Peter Bogdanovich's production of "Paper Moon."

"What do you like most about acting?" someone asks her.

"Working with my Daddy," Tatum says quickly and she means it. She's a girl of independent wisdom and decided a year ago she wanted to live with Ryan in Malibu, packed up her suitcase and got there (Ryan and Joanna Moore, her parents, were divorced several years ago).

"Acting is tremendously hard work," Ryan, shouldering the dual duties of being both father and co-star, explains, "and take enormous discipline from everyone involved. Tatum is very shy, and the hard work and the long days and nights of filming, that's difficult for her."

It was director-producer Bogdanovich's idea to cast Tatum in the Directors Company presentation of "Paper Moon" for Paramount Pictures release. He had seen Tatum briefly when she came to visit her father on the set of "What's Up, Doc?", and "liked her pugnacious quality, which I thought right for the part," and her "wonderful kind of openness." Ryan was hesitant at first, but he finally agreed.

Ryan insists this is the only film Tatum will do until she reaches an age where she can make her own decision about an acting career.

Pinning Tatum down for an interview is a formidable task. She shows you the magic marker star her friend Sue has scribbled on a piece of gummed paper that Tatum wears proudly on her blue jacket. She lets you catch the hoop on the carousel, she even shares her cotton candy with you, but fame and success and acting are new and special words to her.

"Do you want to become an actress?" she is asked.

"No," Tatum says quickly. "I just like being with my Daddy."

Later, on the set, Tatum establishes that all of this stardom is just part of a game. She's made little stars for all her friends which she has placed onto their jackets.

"See, you've got a star, too," Tatum says to one of the other little girls in her group. The flash of smiles make you wish childhood games could be played by adults.

Tatum O'Neal, starring with her father Ryan O'Neal, overhears a telling conversation in Peter Bogdanovich's Production of "Paper Moon." The Directors Company Presentation for Paramount Pictures Release is the tale of an unlikely alliance between a small-time con artist and a 9-year-old who turns out to be better at the game than he is. The film, set during the Depression, was directed and produced by Peter Bogdanovich.

Ryan O'Neal and 9-year-old Tatum O'Neal (making her screen debut) try to outsmart saleslady Dorothy Price in Peter Bogdanovich's Production of "Paper Moon."

Davis' song is BMI's most performed in '72

The 125 writers and 76 publishers of 99 songs licensed for public performance by BMI (Broadcast Music, Inc.) received Citations of Achievement for the most performed songs in the BMI repertoire for the calendar year 1972.

In addition, special engraved glass plaques were presented to Mac Davis, the writer, and to Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc., the publisher, of "Baby Don't Get Hooked On Me," the most performed BMI song during 1972.

The awards were presented at Los Angeles' Century Plaza

Hotel in June, by BMI president Edward M. Cramer, with the assistance of members of the firm's writer and publisher administration division, of which Mrs. Theodora Zavin is senior vice president.

The top 1972 writer-award winners are Paul Simon, with four songs, followed by Thomas Bell with three. Double-award winners included Mac Davis, Donna Fargo, Kris Kristofferson, Gene MacLellan, Don McLean, and Billy Sherrill.

Multiple publisher-award recipients included the Al Gallico Group, with six awards; the Blackwood Music Group and Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc., each with five songs; and ABC-Dunhill Music, Inc., Charing Cross Music, Inc., Interior Music Corp., Irving Music, Inc. and the Warner - Tamarlane Group, all with four songs each.

Twenty-seven of the songs honored with BMI awards were presented with citations marking previous awards.

Included in sixth-year awards were Dramatis Music Corp. for "By The Time I Get to Phoenix" and "Up, Up and Away" and to John Hartford and Glaser

Publications, Inc. for "Gentle On My Mind."

Among third-year awards recipients were Kris Kristofferson and Buckhorn Music Publishing, Inc. for "For The Good Times"; Joe South and Lowery Music Co., Inc. for "I Never Promised You A ROSE GARDEN"; Gene MacLellan and Beechwood Music for "Snowbird"; Bud y Bule, James B. Cobb, Jr., Emory Lee Gordy, Jr. and Low-Sal Music Co. for "Traces."

Honored for the second time were "Gone," by Smokey Rogers, published by Dallas Music Co., Inc. and Hill and Range Songs, Inc.; "Help Me Make It Through The Night," by Kris Kristofferson, published by Combine Music Corp.; "I Can't Stop Loving You," by Don Gibson, published by Acuff - Rose Publications, Inc.; and "Put Your Hand In The Hand," by Gene MacLellan, published by Beechwood Music.

BOOK REVIEW

THE MEANING OF MODERN DEGREES

Those responsible for graduate education in American schools of arts and science must remove the confusion surrounding the meaning of modern degrees, decide what the roles of human relevance and professionalism should be, and resolve conflicts between teaching and research.

Such is the message of THE BEGINNING OF THE FUTURE: A HISTORICAL APPROACH TO GRADUATE EDUCATION IN THE ARTS AND SCIENCES by Richard Storr, a Carnegie Commission on Higher Education book (McGraw-Hill, $5.95).

The study shows how, from the granting of the first Ph.D. at Yale over a century ago, the graduate schools of arts and science have established themselves in positions of centrality in modern universities. Their problems, however, are currently immense. They face declining markets for their degree holders and a growing lack of consensus as to what their purpose is within the modern university.

Historian Storr establishes that "substance and form" have drifted apart in graduate study and must, he argues, be brought into class correlation again if the current problems are to be solved.

In his concluding chapter Storr explores two approaches to resolving the current malaise. Basic to both is the conviction that the roles of "inquiry" and "research" must be clearly and finally distinguished. Graduate schools must face up to what each activity and the degree granted for it means, and they must clarify the issue without further delay.

Museum exhibits African culture

The "African Culture Exhibition" opened July 1 at the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum. Everyone is invited to come and experience the aura of African art which is a very integral part of their ceremony, dances, costumes, and music.

The great variety of objects on exhibition originate from three separate collections. Donors to the exhibition are Vincent & Elizabeth Hovance who are with the state department in Africa and Charles & Kent Davis who toured Africa for six and a half months.

The Museum's Ida Black Collection is also part of the exhibition. The show features a slide show which presents an excellent look at present day tribal life in Africa.

"Sculpture and Things", a ceramic sculpture show, will open July 8. The exhibition is by Nicholas Batounis, graduate of UNC-W. Batounis's exhibition is a unique and original collection of art.

The Wilmington-New Hanover Museum is located at 814 Market Street. Hours are: Tuesday through Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charged and groups are welcomed.

McLAIN TO COME BACK???

Denny McLain, former Cy Young winner while with the Detroit Tigers, is now pitching for the Shreveport Captains, an AA team in the Texas League. McLain says he will be in top form after four or five good starts and appears to have his eye on the Chicago White Sox, who in the last month have developed pitching problems.

McLain was released by Atlanta during this past season's spring training.

TREVINO BIDS FOR THIRD STRAIGHT BRITISH OPEN

Lee Trevino, the fiery Texan of the P.G.A., feels confident he will win the British Open for the third consecutive time. Odds-makers say Trevino will finish second behind Jack Nicklaus. Lee feels his type of shot is more suitable to the layout at the site of the 114th British Open, Trane, Scotland.

The course is more advantageous to the low projectory type golfer, such is Trevino's style, as opposed to the high smashing driver type like Jack Nicklaus. Trevino was quoted as saying, "big Jack might just as well stay home".

JIMMY THE GREEK PICKS PROBABLE WINNERS

Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder, Las Vegas oddsmaker, has picked the Chicago Cubs and Los Angeles Dodgers as likely pennant winners in the National League, while his choices are the New York Yankees and The Oakland Athletics in the American League. Snyder feels his choices are virtually shoo-ins, but feels the Yankees will receive a close challenge from the Baltimore Orioles.

CHARLIE Q. GIVES WILLIAMS CONTRACT THRU 1975

Amid locker room squabbles, personal outbursts against the management, and a complete state of disorder, the World Champion Oakland Athletics are managing a slim lead in the American League's Western Division. Although the season is marked by apparent player discontent, owner Charlie Finley seems very contented with his system and manager Dick Williams.

Finley has extended Williams contract through 1975. Williams becomes the first Athletic manager under Finley to not lose his job after a season or less. Williams is Finley's 10th manager since he purchased the A's.

CAREW LEADS ROJAS IN ALL-STAR BID

Rod Carew, star second baseman for the Minnesota Twins of baseball's American League, has a slight lead in the balloting for the starting position in the July 24th tilt. All other starting positions are sewn up, but the balloting has been so close up until this point the Commissioner's office will not be certain who will Commissioner's office will not be certain who will start at second until all the votes have been counted.

NITTY GRITTY

The music is there to enjoy, all-time country greats singing and playing for each other. The real lessons to be learned are the value of musical tolerance, respect for country tradition, that music is to be played well, played right, and played for fun.

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and their friends did the teaching.

The lesson was for Nashville. And it was learned.

Wine is the child of sun and earth, the collaboration of art, patience, time and care, the triple communion: Firstly with the soil into which it sinks its roots and from which it receives soul and body. Secondly, communion with ourselves. It educates our taste, training us to turn our attention inward, from the mind, and illuminates the intelligence. Lastly, wine is a symbol and the means of social communion. Around a table, all guests are at the same level as the cup goes round. Paul Claudel

Hawks remain #1 by two games

The UNC-W Seahawks are continuing their winning ways allowing them to stretch their lead to two games over second place Pembroke State. In their last three outings prior to Tuesday night's game, the Hawks won two and dropped a tight one to Pembroke 6-5 in ten innings.

The two Hawk victories were against the Camels of Campbell College and the Hurricanes of Lousburg. The Hawks (prior to Tuesday's contest) were boasting an incredible 14-5 record. The Braves of P.S.U. trail with a mark of 10-5.

In their triumph against the Camels, righthander Harry Kincald struck out six, walked one Campbell batter, and allowed only three safeties as he pitched his way to his fourth victory against only one set-back. Harry has been quite stingy in his last four starts as he has pitched two shut-outs and refused to be challenged by opposing batters.

Kincald's only flaw this summer was in his first start against the Tarheels of UNC-Chapel Hill. In that contest, Harry allowed only one hit—a homer—but his mates could not scratch and Harry lost a really well pitched game. Since that day Kincald has been very cautious, allowing naught but a few hits and no homers.

The veteran seems to be on the way to the best season of his career. Harry is not only boasting an impressive 4-1 won-lost record, but has an ERA of less than 1.50.

The Hawks gained another victory behind the excellent control of Duke Sanderson. Duke calmed the bats of the Lousburg Hurricanes as he ran his record to 4-1. Duke's win ran the team record to 14-4 and gave the Hawks victories in their last seven starts. The thrill of victory was short lived as the Pembroke Braves won a ten inning squeaker the following afternoon. This defeat handed the Hawks, left Coach Brooks' warriors at 14-5, but still two complete games ahead of the victorious Braves.

The Hawks have a busy schedule for the week of the 8th. After Sunday's loss to

Hawks soar to league lead

On this mid-July afternoon, it appears the Summer Hawks have turned their fears into a large amount of fanatical garble. I guess we all remember the pre-season critic lacking a lot of favor in the hopes of this summer's baseball team. We now find this same individual intently watching in an attempt to find the reasoning behind the Hawks, obviously trying to set the summer league on fire, current record of 14 wins and only 4 losses.

The big fears of the critics prior to the beginning of this current season, seemed to lay in the obvious lack of good pitching and in the defense. The latter was supposedly as permeable as a boat hull constructed of screen wire. This has not been held true, and the pitching has not been short of perfection in some instances. With an over-all record of 14-4 the Hawks whose confirmed power lie in their war-clubs, began the season with shut-outs in their first three games and have had more since. The defense has yet to be the cause for one of the four losses.

The big guns are virtually quiet in 'Hawkville' this summer. Dave Sardin, former pitcher, left-fielder, firstbaseman, and leading hitter, is currently enjoying the summer in Florida. Dave is in the St. Louis Cardinal's rookie camp with hopes of making his way into the majors as a left-fielder by way of his bat. Bruce Cavanaugh is playing only the home games due to the fact that away games, with allowance for travel time, take him away from his job. The lay-off is seemingly taking it's toll for the Hawks long-ball threat. Bruce has thus far this summer hit only one home run which is unusual for the Wilmington native. (Bruce hit nine homers during the past spring season.) Rather than the fifteen-hit barrage that has been so prevalent in Hawks baseball history, the current team is averaging less than one run every three innings. The games this summer are won more so on sticky defense, good pitching, a lot of hustle, and the planning of ever-alert Coach, Bill Brooks.

The ball players themselves seem amazed at their progress this summer. Some say the odds will catch up with them before the summer is over, but for the most part they seem to be enjoying their success as it helps pass the hot summer days and to this point seems to have baffled all of this spring's pessimists as the Hawks have turned into the hottest thing in District 29 play.

Aaron belts two more... within 18 of the Babe!!!

Hammerin' Hank Aaron of the hapless Atlanta Braves, is steadily closing in on the unprecedented mark of Babe Ruth.

Aaron ran his seasonal moner total to twenty-three as he walloped two 350 footers against the New York Mets as the Atlanta Braves enjoyed one of their few wins they've earned this season. The two blasts came in the fourth and sixth innings. The former was a sole shot, but the latter came with a man aboard as Aaron accounted for three of four runs and was the difference as the Braves won 4-2.

At his present rate, Hank should pass the Babe this season. Critics have it the hotter July and August days will slow Aaron and he will not pass Ruth this season. It appears these few are not realizing that Hank is not playing every day and is given rest at practically his own discretion. Well rested, whether it is 100 or 75 Hammerin' Hank is a very dangerous man when he steps into the Batters box.

It is the opinion of this observer, that Aaron will indeed break Ruth's mark this season. I am also convinced that Hank is the type of individual worthy of an accomplishment of this magnitude. Not only is he a dedicated family man, but Henry Aaron (soon to be baseball's homerun king) is not overwhelmed by his fame.

When stopped on the street or at the ball park, Aaron always seems to smile, pose for a picture, give an autograph, and appear as if that were not the 89th time today he has been asked if he has a chance at Ruth's mark. A chance? I'll say he has a chance. Only disaster can stop Hank from becoming the premier homer swatter of all time.

GREENFIELD GARDENS constitutes a true "People's Park." It has been named among the most beautiful municipal parks in the nation. The five-fingered lake, bordered by stately moss-draped cypress, attracts many visitors in all seasons, but the gardens reach their peak beauty in the spring when millions of azaleas blanket the banks and islands with colorful hues. Each spring the gardens are viewed by thousands of visitors as the city stages its annual Azalea Festival.

All of this natural beauty is mirrored by the reflective waters of the 125 acre lake. Native trees and shrubs grow in profusion, and plants from other areas have been introduced for variety.

While the azalea is the reigning beauty at the park, additional color and greenery is provided by camellias, yaupon, mountain laurel, magnolias, bay, live oaks, holly, hawthorn, crab apple, dogwood, redbud, wild plum, flowering cherry, quince, peach, crepe myrtle, wistaria, wild roses, water lilies and thousands of jonquils and daffodils.

Greenfield Gardens has achieved its far-reaching fame during the past decade through the City of Wilmington's support of its Department of Parks and Recreation. With a background of magnificent natural beauty, acres of surrounding swamp land have been drained and beautified with results that are magnificent.

'Mousetrap' springs July 24

Opening Tuesday evening, July 24, will be the long-run British mystery by Agatha Christie, "The Mousetrap." Performances will be each evening, Tuesday thru Sunday in the air-conditioned Kenan Auditorium on the UNC-W campus at 8:30.

The play is about a group of strangers stranded in a boarding house during a snow storm, one of whom is a murderer. The suspects include a newly married couple who run the house (Melanie Mechele and Bill Lambert) and the suspicions that are planted in their minds nearly wreck their marriage.

Others are a spinster with a curious background (Rhesa Stone); an architect who seems better equipped to be a chef (Tony Rivenbark); a retired Army major (Joel Perry); a strange little man who claims his car has overturned in a drift (Roland Valentine); and a feminine jurist who makes life miserable for everyone (Margaret Chatfield).

Into their midst comes a policeman, traveling on skis (John Van Johnson) and no sooner arrives than the jurist is killed. Two down and one to go. To get to the rationale of the murderer's pattern, the policeman probes the background of everyone present and rattles a lot of skeletons. This, like other Agatha Christie mysteries, has a surprise finish which keeps the audience guessing throughout the play until the final curtain.

Directed for the S.R.Q. Summer Straw Hat Theatre by Sam Garner, head of the Drama Department at Millbrook High School in Raleigh, this production is designed by Cam Baird with lighting designed by Ramona Hutton. Sound is being taped from an original sound-track production and will be handled by Allen Randall. Property mistress for "The Mousetrap" is Karla West and costumes are being designed by Jane Divine and Tony Rivenbark.

Reservations may be made by calling 791-9695 2-5 p.m. weekdays or 763-7922.

VOLUNTARY ACTION CENTER

The Voluntary Action Center (VAC) is an agency created to serve two purposes: one, to operate a volunteer placement center by having on file a listing of special requirements and current openings of volunteer needs of the entire community and match those needs from a file of interviewed volunteers; two, to study and identify areas of needed volunteer effort that do not currently exist in the community and to have these project areas on file for use by groups seeking projects for volunteer activity.

Counselors of high school age or above are needed at YWCA's Camp Kirkwood.

Openings in all areas of camp activities are available, and room and board will be provided.

Interested persons can contact Miss Hunt at YWCA headquarters, 709 Market Street.

VAC is a non-governmental, non-profit organization headed by a volunteer board of directors and is financed by voluntary contributions. Though the Cape Fear VAC is a local and totally independent agency, it has access to an enormous amount of information of thousands of project mechanisms and efforts from all over the country through the National Center for Voluntary Action.

The specific functions of the Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center are:

1. In cooperation with public and private planning or coordinating bodies, to identify community needs that require volunteers.
2. To keep an up to date inventory of needs for volunteers in the community and make this information available to all.
3. To seek potential volunteers, and put them in touch with jobs to be done or agencies doing those jobs.
4. To inventory for a central file each volunteers experience, abilities, interests, hours available, transportation, age, etc., thus eliminating much duplication and filing for all agencies.
5. To stimulate the design, planning, and development of new projects, helping to expand the range of existing agencies and persuade new group action where needed.

6. To establish an information and referral service for volunteerism.
7. To serve as counselor for volunteer groups.
8. To publicize achievements of volunteers and opportunities for service, working to focus attention on the value of citizen participation in community projects.

If you feel the fulfilling need to volunteer in any area of our community and need information, call

SRO actors dream with Walter Mitty

This weekend will mark the closing of the new musical comedy, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" which is presently running a week's engagement at the S.R.O. Theatre in Kenan Hall.

Peter Smith will play the title role with Melanie Mechele as his wife Agnes. Interwoven with Mitty's daily routine of making a living as a toy salesman and dealing with his daughter Peninnah (Sarah Robbinette), local bar-keep Harry (Tony Rivenbark) and his old school chum now turned big wheeler Fred Gorman (Sam Garner) are the people of his dreams and aspirations.

Actually a combination of serious drama and light comedy, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" is a new and different approach to the classic idea that man must have his dreams but his dreams and his real life must work together—neither must over power the other.

There are dreams of valor in times of war with Commander MacMillan (John Van Johnson); dreams of being a playboy with Willa de Wisp (sue Hall), Hazel (Wyatt Rider), Ruthie (Mary Mac Moore), and Sylvia (Barbara McDaniels); dreams of Mitty the great physician with doctors portrayed by Joel Perry, Pat Parker, and Allen Randall; and dreams of being an astronaut and others.

Walter Mitty's dream girl Sue Hall is involved with a muscle-building health food fanatic Irving (Bill Lambert) who acts as a foil to Mitty in more than one scene. Irving and Willa (Miss Hall) move throughout the play as examples of Mitty's ability to dream and yet incorporate people of reality in his dreams.

The musical direction for the play is being handled by Bob Alexander with piano by Susan Dermid. The show is directed by Doug Swink and Roland Valentine is stage manager. Designer Cam Baird has come up with many portable settings for the play to showcase the dream scenes with his usual artistic ability. Tickets and seat reservations are available by calling the box office between 2 and 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday at 791-9695 and by calling 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

Randall Library shows growth

Can't go to the malt shop today - That was yesterday. And these students (1966 variety) study in the "Wilmington College" Library.

Did somebody say??? - Yes, we did. The students seated on the right in this 1966 version of the library study in what is now the registrar's office. Hard to believe, perhaps, but true.

(Photos, except where credited, provided from files of office of university relations, by director Gwen Groom.)

TREMENDOUS GROWTH

William Madison Randall Library has undergone tremendous growth since, when it occupied space in the Alderman (Administration) Building, it was known as "Wilmington College Library."

100,000 MARK

As of June 30, 1972, the library contained about 91,500 bound volumes. It has increased holdings steadily since then, and will hit the 100,000 mark this year.

OUTSIDE HELP

Other than through the regular University channels, the library also receives considerable help through "outside" sources, from clubs and organizations, industries, businesses, and individual donations and contributions. One of the major contributors every year is a local group known as "The Friends of UNC-W."

10 YEARS- $46,000

Consisting of community residents, business and industrial concerns, and civic organizations, The Friends have contributed more than $46,000 to the library over the past ten years.

1972 HOLDINGS

According to figures in the "Statistical Abstract of Higher Education in North Carolina, 1972-73," compiled by the consolidated UNC Division of Institutional Research, library holdings included 91,498 bound volumes, 38,000 unbound government documents; 3,933 reels of microfilm; 2,528 physical items of microform except microfilm; and 1,269 periodical titles. This data shows the holdings as of June 30, 1972. During the 71-72 fiscal year, 9,658 volumes were added to the library's collection.

MORE FRIENDS NEEDED

Even with these impressive figures, however, the library meets the standards for a student body of 1,500, according to Mrs. Richard Stickney of The Friends. With student registration currently 2,200, and with new courses and curricula being planned, "quite obviously more Friends are needed to help build our library and our college into an institution of excellence," states Mrs. Stickney.

ANNUAL DRIVE

The annual drive of The Friends is currently underway, and will continue until November. The Business, Industry and Civic Organization Committee is actively seeking the support of campus student organizations.

According to Miss Helen Hagan, librarian, the $5,000 contribution made by The Friends this year has been divided among library departments, which are expanding services and holdings.

Additional information on The Friends is available from Mrs. Stickney, or from other committee members, Mrs. Robert Little and Mrs. Milton Finkelstein.

Imagining - Miss Helen Hagan, librarian, imagines how the new William Madison Randall Library will look when completed.

Now the library houses numerous features, including nearly 100,000 volumes,

Seahawk plans publication of 'opportunities' supplement

A Special "Student Seahawk" supplement will be published with the first fall issue of The Seahawk set for release August 27. Providing and emphasizing information not necessarily covered in the student handbook, the supplement will center on the various opportunities and activities on campus which are open to students.

Facilities for individual research and inquiry, contests and activities, and University services such as those provided by the office of Student Affairs (placement center, counseling and testing, student health service) are among those things that will be outlined and explained.

Students having questions about any of the University services or functions should direct them to The Seahawk office in the Pub (Student Services Building).

AMERICA'S LEADING CHEESE STORES

Julie Andrews Came to Hollywood for "Mary Poppins" and Hasn't Left Since

Julie Andrews' life in Hollywood began in 1963 when Walt Disney brought her from New York for his most successful motion picture "Mary Poppins" scheduled to be re-released this summer. Julie played the role of a magical nursemaid in the five-Oscar-winning musical, which also starred Dick Van Dyke and costarred David Tomlinson and Glynis Johns.

Disney, Julie's most enthusiastic booster, allowed two rival producers to view her rushes for "Poppins" so that they could determine whether or not to cast her in "The Sound of Music" and "The Americanization of Emily." Her personality came off so well, both producers signed her.

Following her triumphant film bow, Hollywood seemed determined to keep Julie close at hand. She went on to star in "Hawaii," "Torn Curtain," "Thoroughly Modern Millie," "Darling Lili," and "Star!"

By 1971, Julie was Hollywood's all-time top-grossing box office attraction. So far she has to her credit an Academy Award for Best Actress in "Mary Poppins," an Oscar nomination for Best Actress in "The Sound of Music," three Golden Globe Awards, and awards for Best Actress of the Year and The World's Favorite Actress, presented her by the Theatre Owners of America.

Julie was born Oct. 1 in Walton-on-Thames, a small town 20 miles south of London. Her parents were divorced when she was very young and her mother married an entertainer, Ted Andrews, whose name Julie adopted.

During World War II, when schools were forced to close, Julie was given singing lessons to keep her occupied. It was then discovered that she had the vocal ability to range five octaves.

At age 12 she astounded an audience at the London Hippodrome by singing a difficult operatic aria.

She went on to appear in a variety of revues and concert tours. Her big break came while she was performing in a pantomime of "Cinderella" at the London Palladium. She was seen and signed for the Broadway run of "The Boy Friend," which would lead to her triumphant part in "My Fair Lady."

Julie spent a total of three and a half years on stage in New York and London portraying Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady." After a year's hiatus, she stepped gracefully into the role of the magical nanny in "Camelot," a musical developed specifically for her.

During "Camelot," a film version of "My Fair Lady" was in production. There was a great deal of talk about who would get the part of the magical nanny. Julie felt herself a likely candidate. She opted for the part, and Audrey Hepburn.

Consequently, Julie was cast in the run of "Camelot" and the title role in his second musical, "Poppins."

Gene Hackman Tries Other Side of Law in New Film, 'Scarecrow'

Gene Hackman, having done the very best that an actor can do on the right side of the law, is trying it now on the wrong side. Last year, Hackman won an Academy Award for his doings as a detective in "The French Connection." So why not give it a go as a drifter who bounces in and out of jail in "Scarecrow"?

As Max starts on his strange cruise across America, he is accompanied by another drifter called Lion, who is played by co-star Al Pacino. Together they go from California to Reno and Denver to Detroit, hoping to find a life that will loose all the skidrows and jails that they've known in the past.

Having come a long and tortuous way to reach prized things like the starring role in "Scarecrow," Gene Hackman sits cool but hardly smug.

GENE HACKMAN stars as Max, a drifter who dreams of owning his own car-wash, in "Scarecrow."

AL PACINO, Academy Award Nominee, stars with Academy Award-winner Gene Hackman in "Scarecrow."

Brooks says it'll be close

Coach Bill Brooks, whose baseball nine are currently enjoying being the best team in the Carolina's Summer Baseball Conference, feels although his team is now in first place by a game and a half that the race is still gonna be close. Brooks went on to say that he has been pleased with the performance of his boys thus far this summer. The Seahawk coach elaborated on the deftness of his pitchers and defensemen; on the preseason poll, these were the downfalls of the summer hopes.

Coach Brooks looks for more hitting as the 'hawks in recent weeks have been a little short in that department. Greg Dalton and Robbie Ivey, early going batting leaders have given ground to the likes of Swain Smith (who by the way has plugged the big hole at short-stop) and Howie Edgerton. At present, Dalton is still the team leader in hitting, but has seen his average drop from a phenomenal .375 to .300. Close behind Greg is Howie Edgerton, who at the outset of the season had his troubles with the stick, but in recent weeks has been getting his 'lion's share' of hits and raised his average several points.

Possibly the center of attention of the 'Hawk squad' this summer has been the fine pitching staff. Not only have the pitchers been impressive, but Duke Sanderson, Harry Kincaid and Paul Fulton were the top three pitchers in the league at the outset of the month of July.

It may be another close race. In fact, it is close now, but one thing can be sure-----the 'hawks' have played some great baseball this summer and have every indication of setting the summer loop on fire.

Wine is the child of sun and earth, the collaboration of art, patience, time and care, the triple communion: Firstly with the soil into which it sinks its roots and from which it receives soul and body. Secondly, communion with ourselves. It educates our taste, training us to turn our attention inward, from the mind, and illuminates the intelligence. Lastly, wine is a symbol and the means of social communion. Around a table, all points are at the same level as the cup goes round.

LARRY BROWN DOESN'T SHOW FOR TRAINING CAMP

Larry Brown, the driving force behind the Washington Redskins, has yet to appear for the opening of the 'Skins veteran training camp. Speculation has it Brown wants to renegotiate his '73 contract, but Coach George Allen says Brown has an excellent contract and that is not the problem. Allen would not make further comment. Brown's attorney, John Perazich told UPI reporters that Brown was not in a contract dispute, but was working on some personal matters that need immediate attention. Perazich went as far as to say that Brown was working out daily at Georgetown University and would continue to do so until his private affairs were settled at which time he would join the rest of the Redskins.

NEW HANOVER COPS DISTRICT BABE RUTH

New Hanover defeated Columbus County in the Babe Ruth tournament for the fifth district. The locals won by an extremely large margin as they defeated C.C. 14-2. The victors will advance to the Regionals in New Bern.

SMOKIN' JOE STRIKES AGAIN...NOT FRAZIER...THOMAS

Joe Thomas the new Baltimore Colt general manager, has struck again. This time his actions are more than questionable. Before Thomas has traded away such big-named, but old pros as Tom Matte and John Unitas, but now it appears he has really gone berserk. Thomas has traded Bubba Smith, probably football's premiere (if not premier certainly the biggest) defensive end. Seven years out of Michigan State, Bubba is one of the most feared men in football. The Oakland Raiders are now the proud owners of Smith and Ray Chester will come to Baltimore in a 2 player swap.

AILING BACK CURED BY 'LUBE JOB'

Atlanta Braves' slugging outfielder, was cured recently by Dr. Lyman Smith of a back injury which had caused him apparent semi-paralysis of his left leg. The process used completely does away with old theory of removing slipped disc. Dr. Smith applies an injection of an enzyme obtained from papaya leaves. This apparently reduces or shrinks the discs and relieves the terrible which accompanies such an injury. Bill Melton of the Chicago White Sox, has undergone the exact treatment for his own back problems and received this wonderful cure.

DUANE THOMAS IN....& OUT

Duane Thomas, controversial running sensation of the San Diego Chargers, reported to training camp 24 hours late and was sent home by head coach Harland Svare. Svare was quoted as saying, "no one is gonna' show at my camp whenever he feels like it." Just last week executive counsel, Ron Mix met with Thomas and reportedly had everything worked out for the flashy half-back and Thomas was supposedly to have signed his '73 contract Sunday.

Kincaid beats Camels, ends Hawks' skid

After consecutive losses to Pembroke, UNC-Chapel Hill, and East Carolina—the UNC Wilmington Seahawks, using a revamped line-up, whipped Campbell College by a score of 4-1. The three losses along the sole win of the week ran the 'Hawks' record to fifteen wins and eight losses. This was enough, however, to keep the 'Hawks' on top in summer play.

NOLAN RYAN....THROWING SMOKE angel's ace tosses 2nd no-hitter ties major league record

They are eating sour grapes in New York. Nolan Ryan former Met's fireballer was washed up. What happens to washed up ball players? Well, for one, they are traded or even released. Ryan had the good fortune of being traded. Now, why was Nolan Ryan washed up? Nolan was known as one of the hardest throwing pitchers in baseball while with the Mets, yet his control left something to be desired. It seems the righthanded fastballer could throw the ball so hard it could hardly be seen. It also seldom came over the plate. This lack of control gave Ryan a composite record of 29-37 during the 1968 through 1971 seasons. Not exactly impressive. This season, however, Nolan Ryan has already tied a twenty year-old record and has a good chance at setting a new one. The California ace has pitched two no-hitters this season (an effort accomplished only twice before).

The change in scenery must have been good for Ryan as it appears to be the "apocryphal of sugar" or the "miraculous cure" Nolan so desperately needed. Although he has amassed 230 strikeouts this season (which gives him more than any pitcher in baseball history at this point) Ryan can easily boast a .360 average. Nolan is currently showing an 11-1 mark on the season. This itself is not overwhelming nor is his earned run average of 3.05 anything to brag about. The main influence one has to take into account is the fact that the California Angels themselves have won only 46

Harry Kincaid is seemingly unbeatable this summer. The righthander has recorded five wins against only two losses in a league that is notorious for hitting excellence. Harry six-hit the Camels allowing only one run as he went the distance. The Wilmington ace did not have a typically Kincaid-type game as he gave up seven free tickets and whiffed only one Camel (Kincaid's games are usually marked by good control and an overpowering fastball.)

The Seahawk scores came on 13 basehits which were scattered throughout the nine frames. The 'Hawks drew first blood in the second inning on a pair of singles and added two more scores in the third on three hits. With sole runs in the sixth and the eighth, the Wilmington nine ran their total to four runs as two double plays, a sliding shoe-string catch by centerfielder Edgerton, and Kincaid's fastball held the Camels to only one run.

In other action earlier in the week, the 'Hawk fortunes were not so good. After another loss to second place Pembroke, the Seahawks traveled to Greenville to battle ECU. The Pirates had dropped four straight to the 'Hawks this summer until their victory last Thursday.

The Pirates had seemingly made up their minds to avenge earlier losses to the 'Hawks as they won after trailing 6-0. In action against the Tarheels of UNC-Chapel Hill, the Brooksmen lost a close one in eleven innings by a 2-1 score. The Seahawks scored in the seventh, ending Carolina pitcher Mike Merritt's bid for a shut-out.

The lead was short-lived as the 'Heels scored in the ninth to tie the contest. Duke Sanderson, then quietened the Tarheel outburst and the game remained notted at one until the home half of the eleventh.

In the eleventh, the Carolina lead-off batter walked and with two out moved to third on a single by Jim Baldwin. Duke ran the count to 2-2 on the next Tarheel batter and then sallied one by catcher Stenger to end the otherwise well pitched game.

The loss was the fourth consecutive for the 'Hawks who later got back on the track against the Camels of Campbell.

Weather Forecast for July 1973

AREA 3: Southeast States

Temperatures during July will range from 60 to 85° in Atlanta and from 67 to 97° in Jacksonville. This spread is typical and the month should average close to normal throughout this region. Since thunderstorms are responsible for most of July's rainfall, amounts will vary widely from one county to the next with few exceptionally dry or wet spots.

In New York the Mets pitching staff, especially the bullpen, have been faltering all season. Just maybe a little of Nolan Ryan's fastball is what the Mets and manager Yogi Berra need to revamp their unimpressive start. That point will have to be left up to the speculators as Nolan is very much at home with the Angels.....
.....throwing smoke in the American League.

UNC-W catcher Bruce Cavanaugh awaits his turn at bat while short stop Swain Smith is in the batters box against Campbell. The hawks won 4-1 to post victory number fifteen. (photo by t.r.)

Wilmington-New Hanover Museum African culture exhibit provides added interest

The "African Culture Exhibition" opened July 1 at the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum. Everyone is invited to come and experience the aura of African art which is a very integral part of their ceremony, dances, costumes, and music.

The great variety of objects on exhibition originate from three separate collections. Donors to the exhibition are Vincent & Elizabeth Hovanec who are with the state department in Africa and Charles & Kent Davis who toured Africa for six and a half months.

The Museum's Ida Black Collection is also part of the exhibition. The show features a slide show which presents an excellent look at present day tribal life in Africa.

"Sculpture and Things", a ceramic sculpture show, will open July 8. The exhibition is by Nicholas Batounis, graduate of UNC-W. Batounis's exhibition is a unique and original collection of art.

The Wilmington-New Hanover Museum is located at 814 Market Street. Hours are: Tuesday through Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charged and groups are welcomed.

Carved elephant tusks from Central African Republic. Part of Davis collection on display at the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum.

MacMillan display

World War II paintings and drawings by Henry MacMillan will be on display in the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum until June 30.

After induction into the United States Army in 1942 MacMillan took Engineer basic training and worked on The Art Project at Fort Belvoir. Working on two murals while on The Fort Belvoir Art Project, MacMillan completed one, the subject being Camouflage. The other was completed but studies for it are in the current exhibition.

After going to North Africa as a replacement in June 1943, he was assigned to the 62nd Engineer Topographic Company, the only field topo company in Sicily. All paintings were done during this period while he was on pass. Most of the drawings and paintings were lost when The Fort Belvoir Art Project sent for them. A special messenger delivered them to Belvoir, Virginia, but their final disposition is unknown.

This exhibit consists almost entirely of paintings and drawings done during the year MacMillan was in the XDX Corps. They were presented to the Wilmington-New Hanover Museum by the artist.

Suspense key to Christie thriller

Sunday night will mark the final performance of Agatha Christie's long-run British mystery, "The Mousetrap." Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. in the air conditioned Kenan Auditorium on the UNC-W campus.

The play is about a group of strangers stranded in a boarding house during a snow storm, one of whom is a murderer. The suspects include a newly married couple who run the house (Melanie Mechele and Bill Lambert) and the suspicions that are planted in their minds nearly wreck their marriage.

Others are a spinster with a curious background (Rhesa Stone); an architect who seems better equipped to be a chef (Tony Rivenbark); a retired Army major (Joel Perry); a strange little man who claims his car has overturned in a drift (Roland Valentine); and a feminine jurist who makes life miserable for everyone (Margaret Chatfield).

Into their midst comes a policeman, traveling on skis (John Van Johnson) and no sooner arrives than the jurist is killed. Two down and one to go. To get to the rationale

Rape increasing

A member of the regular Seahawk staff returned from her vacation and told of being assaulted by a man with whom she hitched a ride. The sentiment that "it isn't worth it" was echoed by that student.

She stated that even in instances where the driver does not assault or rape his rider, he may "hassle" her.

With this circumstance, and the recent raping of an ECU coed in the county, in mind, we are reprinting articles that ran in an earlier edition of the Summer Seahawk, as well as related articles that will be of interest.

Not just in big cities, says the FBI about the committing of rape, according to an article by Rhoda Koenig in the July issue of McCall's magazine. Last year, the article states, rape crimes increased 11 per cent nationwide, with a 19 per cent rise in the suburbs, on the average—as much as a 26 per cent increase in some areas.

Hitchhikers find themselves victims, but neither they nor the women who prefer to walk dark streets late at night corner the market. Rapists may enter houses posing as delivery, repairmen, or salesmen. The backseats of cars left unlocked is a favorite hiding place, as well as in elevators and behind apartment building doors.

The McCall's article also discussed police mistreatment of rape victims. Women's organizations across the nation are attempting measures to alleviate this situation. These organizations feel that "the public attitude that rape is 'no big deal,' that most women 'ask for it,' that the best response is to 'relax and enjoy it,' lets the law treat rape victims like criminal and sets the real criminals free to rape again."

Women Against Rape (WAR) of Iowa City is one of many groups in the country to spring up after a rash of rape-assaults (3 rapes, 5 assaults within one month). These groups strive to secure better police protection and street lighting, more late-night transportation and a woman to help victims cope with difficulties during police investigation.

In Washington, D.C., victims can call 333-RAPE to receive help 24 hours a day. A Rape Crisis Center member will take the victim to the hospital, go with her to the police station, and refer her to a lawyer if necessary.

The Washington center offers a prevention tactics/how to start a rape crisis center pamphlet for $1.25. It is available by writing Rape Crisis Center, P. O. Box 21005, Kalorama Street Station, Washington, D.C. 20009.

"Stop Rape," more hints on self-defense, is available for 25 cents from Women's Liberation of Michigan, Room 516, 2230 Witherell, Detroit, Michigan 48201.

Hitchhikers play 'roulette' as rapes, beatings mount

Mounting evidence from police and highway officials across the nation indicates that violence against youthful hitchhikers—especially girls—has become a major crime wave.

Consider just these chilling statistics, noted in a July Reader's Digest article: nearly 70 percent of all rape victims in Boulder, Colorado, last year were hitchhikers; in Boston the figure was 33 percent. In Berkeley, California, 80 percent of the rapes committed in the first two months of 1973 followed the abduction of hitchhikers.

Writes author Nathan Adams in the article: "In the case of a girl who hitchhikes, the odds against her reaching her destination unmolested are today literally no better than if she played Russian roulette. Police estimates, victim interviews and a polling of young hitchhikers reveal that one out of every six will become the victim of some category of sex crime, ranging from indecent exposure to forcible rape."

Nor is rape necessarily the worst fate a ride-thumper can suffer. In Boston recently, seven girls were murdered in as many months; six had been abducted while hitching. And more than a quarter of the hitchhikers victimized by sex criminals were beaten, slashed or shot. Since last fall, six young women in Santa Cruz, California, have been the victims of grisly murders.

"So tempting a target is the single hitchhiker that some criminals regularly patrol roads frequented by hitchhikers—usually near cities where major universities or colleges are located," he writes. Some highway rapists even prepare to "welcome" their victims by removing inside door handles from their cars to prevent girls from escaping, and by pre-scouting

"...The biggest (campus) problem today is crime—not student demonstrations or vandalism, but assaults, armed robberies and rapes.

"Such incidents have increased on campuses across the country by 50% in two years, according to John W. Powell, Executive Secretary of the International Association of College and University Security Directors." Time Magazine—March, 1973

COMMUNITY PROFILE

WILMINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA

Mid-way between New York and Florida, one finds the port city of Wilmington dominating North Carolina's smallest county, New Hanover. The county forms a peninsula bounded on the west by the Cape Fear River and on the east by the Atlantic Ocean. Wilmington, the county seat and the county's only city, is situated on the east bank of the river with its eastern residential areas extending almost to the ocean. The entire area is now bustling and booming with vitality.

The city boasts unusual variety in the basis of its economic vitality. It is part of a major resort area, a busy seaport, a light-manufacturing center, a chemical-oriented industrial location, and the distribution hub of southeastern North Carolina. Truck crops and flowers sold regularly in Northern markets are products of the agricultural segment of the area's economy. There are five nearby ocean beaches, and in the midst of this resort atmosphere is an area dominated by three modern research facilities. Tourism is an important industry, largely because of Wilmington's rich heritage in colonial, Revolutionary and Civil War history. The city is the home of the U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship Memorial and the colorful annual North Carolina Azalea Festival. Wilmington is often described as North Carolina's balanced city.

Named for the Earl of Wilmington and founded in 1732, Wilmington was first settled by a group of people who moved up river about fifteen miles from the old town of Brunswick, which was seized by pirates in 1740 and eventually abandoned. From this beginning, the town grew through the Revolutionary War period and the early nineteenth century. During the Civil War, it was a major port for the Confederacy defended by Fort Fisher at the southern tip of New Hanover County. Wilmington survived the troubles of the Civil War, including a Union blockade and a yellow fever epidemic which wiped out more than ten per cent of its population, and struggled through reconstruction days.

By the turn of the century, it had become a major city of the Southern seacoast. During World Wars I and II, its shipyards produced hundreds of merchant ships, many of which were once in "mothballs" in a reserve fleet within sight of Wilmington's waterfront. The city's period of greatest development has taken place in the years since World War II.

Tourists have enjoyed for many years the natural beauty of New Hanover County's wide, white, sandy beaches. Warmed by the waters of the Gulf Stream just forty miles off shore, they are ideal for pier and surf fishing, bathing and boating. Just behind the ocean beaches lies the Intercoastal Waterway, which stretches from New York to Florida; fine pleasure yachts are seen daily stopping at one of the New Hanover County's several marinas. From Wrightsville Beach, located on the ocean seven miles east of Wilmington, the sport fisherman can try his hand at marlin, sailfish, dolphin and other big game fish on trips to the Gulf Stream. Meanwhile, beachboats out of Carolina Beach produce thousands of pounds of bottom fish for the angler who is less inclined toward big game fishing.

Located in a moderate climate with its weather influenced by the Gulf Stream, the greater Wilmington area has four pleasant seasons. Golf and tennis are enjoyed year 'round because of its moderate climate. Sailing, motorboating, hunting and freshwater fishing are other outdoor activities constantly enjoyed. The more fearless have extended the surfing season to an almost year-around activity under special conditions.

More than three million persons have visited the U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship Memorial since its location on the Cape Fear River in Wilmington's downtown area in 1961. This memorial to North Carolina's fighting men and women of World War II features the Sound and Light Spectacular, an impressive evening attraction which outlines the exciting history of the famous battleship.

Not far from Wilmington are the lovely formal gardens of Orton Plantation and Airle Gardens, two estates visited by thousands of flower-lovers each year. These privately owned gardens are open to the public and feature azaleas, camellias, dogwood and other flowering trees and shrubs. Located within the city limits of Wilmington is municipally-owned Greenfield Gardens with its moss-laden cypress trees and its five-mile lakeshore drive. In the spring Greenfield is a showplace of azaleas, dogwood and wisteria and is open to local citizens and visitors alike at no charge. An area has been devoted especially to the displaying of roses and this feature is attracting rose-lovers from everywhere.

Wilmington has a well defined historic section. The city officially designated an historic area in which there are located many homes of architectural and historic distinction, as well as pre-Civil War churches. The Burgwin-Wright House, which served as Lord Cornwallis' headquarters during the Revolutionary War, is open to visitors. Also noteworthy is St. John's Art Gallery. Two of the fine old churches within the historic area are St. James Episcopal and First Baptist Church.

Abundance of fresh water and ready access to the sea have made Wilmington's deep water port area along the banks of the Cape Fear River a favored location for industries, especially the chemical industry.

Among these are Carolina Nitrogen Corporation, Federal Paper Board Co., Inc., Riegelwood Operations, Ideal Cement Company, Allied Chemical and DuPont. Through the N. C. State Docks, goods flow steadily to and from the United States and foreign ports. This modern port facility can dock a dozen ships at once and is undergoing continuous expansion to accommodate increasing traffic. Terminals of many major oil companies occupy Wilmington's southern waterfront.

Wilmington has a number of textile mills for the manufacture and processing of cotton and synthetic goods, pile fabrics, hosiery, and wearing apparel. Located here, also, are Babcock & Wilcox Company's Wilmington Works which manufactures boiler equipment, and American Standard-Wilmington Coil Dept., who manufactures refrigeration components. Other giants of industry with plants in Wilmington are Corning Glass, Timme Corp., General Electric, Diamond Shamrock Chemicals and Hercules, Inc. It's easy to understand why Wilmington is regarded as a city with a "well balanced economy."

Wilmington looks forward to growth and progress in every area of economic and civil life. Sophisticated publications have predicted a phenomenal growth rate for this area, so it is little wonder why the future has never looked brighter, its leadership has never been stronger, and its people have never been more united and enthusiastic. Wilmington, North Carolina is truly a dynamic city of the South.

RAPE RAPE RAPE RAPE RAPE RAPE RAPE RAPE

Rape has become a serious problem on many campuses. The physical layout of campuses--wooded areas, many corridors and buildings--and campus life itself--young women walking alone to their dorms after an evening meeting or trip to the library--are good conditions for rapists. Rape is the violent crime most on the increase. In 1971, there were almost 42,000 REPORTED rapes. Only 3 to 10% of all rapes are reported according to President Nixon's Omnibus Commission on Crime.

IDEA FOR CURBING RAPES

An idea for curbing rapes and assaults in the campus community of Berkeley, Calif., comes from an organization known as Bureau of Enlightenment Enforcement Patrol (BEEP). Posters depicting a screaming are being distributed with the suggestion that residents hang them near their doors along with a 496 correctiond their doors along with a 49¢ police whistle on a string. A person under threat of attack can go to the nearest door displaying the poster, grab the whistle and "blow it until she is out of her skull" to summon aid.

Some campuses have established rape counseling centers to offer rape victims a 24-hour telephone service providing the psychological, legal and medical aid that they can't find elsewhere. If desired, a woman volunteer from the center goes with the rape victim to the police and hospital to give moral support. Help is also given finding the proper legal services.

The first counseling center, called the Rape Crisis Center, was organized last June in Washington, D.C., by a group of concerned women. The Center hopes to eventually move from a post-rape service to a pre-rape one, so all women are being encouraged to be trained in self-defense. One of the originators of the Center, 21-year-old Karen Kollias, gave a workshop on rape at the National Student Assn. Congress last August. Coeds attending the workshop took two booklets offered by the Center back to campus with them: "How to Start a Rape Counseling Center," and "Stop Rape." Counseling centers have been formed at Antioch College, the U. of Washington and the U. of Kansas. Iowa State's feminists are in the process of setting one up. Since this is a relatively new concept, more will undoubtedly form on other campuses. Other methods students are

NOT ALL VICTIMS OF RAPES ARE TWO-BIT BARFLIES, GRANDMOTHERS, WEALTHY DOWAGERS, COLLEGE CO-EDS, AND LITTLE SISTERS ARE VULNERABLE TO ATTACK.

Consider yourself warned

Don't laugh at the warnings, hitchhikers. It's happened here.

Late Monday night, two ECU co-eds were picked up on the way from Wrightsville Beach by a man they described as in his "forties." One of them got off with a good scare.

One was raped. Anyone, but especially girls, hitching anytime, but especially late at night, deserve what they get.

True, as you say, we should be able to hitch a ride anytime, anywhere if we want to. A free country, right? The American way of life!

Too bad it doesn't work out that way. And let's face it, all the "we should be able to" in the world are not going to alter the fact that, like it or not, hitchhikers are subject to an alarmingly high rate of rapes, muggings, beatings, robberies, murders - you name it.

On a recent showing of Truman Capote's CRIME WATCH, one of the leading authorities on the avoidance of injury and death at the hands of violent attackers, Frederick Storaas, was asked by Capote what a girl should do if she wanted to be raped. "Hitchhike," was Storaas's answer.

Consider this fair warning. The raping of female hitchhikers is not something that "just happens in big cities." It happens here.

Ride with friends. Get a car. Use some form of public transportation. But don't hitch. You're taking your life in your hands.

using to combat rape are women's self-defense classes and escort services. Most experts feel that rat-tall combs, tear gas guns, portable alarms and other such devices are largely ineffective because they are generally in the victim's purse which usually gets dropped in the scuffle. Karate, many believe, is the best defense. Many campus groups, such as the U. of Kansas Women's Coalition, offer free karate classes.

At Miami U. of Ohio, the Associated Women Students funded a "Rape-Guard." The $750 allotted will be used to hire a telephone operator whom women can call for an escort during certain evening hours. Presently there are various independent escort services offered by dorms on that campus, however, Rape-Guard would centralize them.

At the U. of Colorado, a coed formed a group of "People Walkers,"--20 men and five women who will escort women around the heavily wooded campus. The Boulder police chief says 99% of the reported rapes there are from either coeds or young street people who were hitchhiking.

Hitchhikers play 'roulette'

remote locations to which they can drive their young victims.

Despite the mounting evidence of danger, says Adams, girls are turning out on the roads in greater numbers than ever before, motivated by lack of funds for scheduled transportation and an astonishing naivete about what could happen to them.

Although every state has some form of anti-hitchhiking law on its books, legislation that would ban the practice entirely has been vigorously opposed by students lobby groups, and many law makers are convinced that an outright ban would be unconstitutional. Moreover, enforcement would be a nightmare for police.

A better answer would be to improve public transportation services near colleges and universities. The Digest also recommends overhauling legal procedures to spare rape victims the ordeal of embarrassment they suffer when they report the crime. (An estimated four out of every five hitchhikers who have been raped do not even report the incident!) Wider use of police-women in rape investigations, and curbs on courtroom voyeur-spectators might help. Finally, the article urges, a nationwide educational campaign is available, authorized under the Highway Safety Act of 1966.

Don't scream!

---Storaska

On a recent edition of Truman Capote's ABC show "Crime Watch," and in his numerous lectures throughout the country, Frederic Storaska states that screaming is the worst thing that a rape-assault victim can do.

For the most part, Storaska states, attackers are unbalanced, and their first desire is to silence the victims' screams. Unfortunately for the victims, few attackers consider rustling up a gag, so the silencing comes in the form of strangulation, a bump on the head, a bullet through the heart or a knife in the gut.

The best move for the victim, according to Storaska, is to bide one's time until she can get a clear shot at one of the two vulnerable areas, one of which will always be exposed. Poking an eye out will distract the victim at least, but usually results in an immediate condition of shock. While the attacker is out cold, the victim can flee for help.

The second vulnerable area, the genitals, can often be kicked or kneed. Generally, the eyes are a better target at close range, since the hands can swiftly be manipulated from a caressing of the head, to a swift poke. With the genital area, the victim will have no second chance. A failed attempt may produce the same effect as a scream.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

QUESTION: What type of treatment is given to rape victims. Especially, what is done to prevent pregnancy. When a rape victim comes in, does the hospital have to report it to the police? Will they refuse to treat the woman or call the police against her will if she doesn't want the rape reported. I was once the victim of a sex offender and the worst part of the experience was going over the incident with the police. Women should be allowed to avoid this if they wish.

ANSWER: Rape is commonly defined as sexual contact between a man and an unwilling woman other than his wife, with violence or the threat of violence. Many women are probably coerced in a variety of subtle and not subtle ways into having sexual intercourse in situations that do not legally meet the definition of rape, but functionally are hard to distinguish from the more brutal crimes.

Medical attention to the rape victim consists of a careful physical examination, including a pelvic exam, to be sure that the woman has not sustained physical injuries in need of immediate attention. Such an examination might provide an initial check to see if the woman contracted venereal disease and also help establish further legal evidence of the existence of rape. If a woman is not on contraceptive pills she would most likely be offered the opportunity to receive medication to prevent a pregnancy ("morning after pill"). The immediate attention to the victim should also include an assessment of the woman's psychological needs. Few personal crimes represent the type of cruel assault and violation of person that exists in rape. The psychological after effects of a rape can be fairly severe, but can almost always be lessened greatly by a few talks with someone knowledgeable in this area.

In many states, a hospital does not have to report rape to the authorities unless the victim is severely physically assaulted in an obvious fashion, in which case such a crime must be reported whether rape has occurred or not. A case of rape cannot be prosecuted unless the woman who is raped chooses to file a complaint. Although recounting details of an assault is unpleasant, the protection of future victims of the rapist makes it nearly essential that a victim cooperate with authorities. Rapists tend to repeat their attacks and failure to prosecute exposes other people to possible harm. Enlightened police officials and prosecutors try to make the investigation of such crimes as painless as possible for the victims. Names of victims are never released and if the assailant is caught, trials are usually held in closed courtrooms. The victim is merely a witness, not the person on trial.

Ounce of prevention

- 1) Walk quickly and keep alert when alone at night.
- 2) Never hitch rides with men.
- 3) If you live by yourself, put only your first initial and last name on your mailbox and in the telephone book.
- 4) Don't admit an unexpected caller.
- 5) If attacked, use anything handy as a weapon—an umbrella or heavy pocketbook on the street; a hammer, rolling pin or poker at home.
- 6) You can also carry "legal weapons" with you. Keep a plastic lemon filled with ammonia or a deodorant spray can in your pocket. Pin a hatpin on your blouse. Try to ward off, not incite, a fight to the finish. And scream, scream, scream as loud as you can.

Ernest Borgnine as Shack, a brutal trainman, attacks kid hobo Keith Carradine, unaware that he will soon have to battle Lee Marvin, king of the hoboes in 20th Century-Fox's "EMPEROR OF THE NORTH"

Lee Marvin is A-No. 1, "Emperor of the North"

"It's about bums and I've always been a bum," says Lee Marvin with a straight face, talking about his starring role in 20th Century-Fox's "Emperor of the North."

As usual, Marvin's self-depreciation masks a lively interest in the American scene, in this case 1933's railroad hoboos "in a half-forgotten time," as he says, "when the Depression forced many middle-class men to ride the rails."

Marvin, as A-No. 1, the tough, canny hobo whom his peers dub "Emperor of the North," plays one of his most violent roles — but with no weapons except his brain and brawn. Such zest for Americana once prompted him to make "Cat Ballou" and thereby win an Oscar.

This major motion picture reunites Marvin with executive producer Kenneth Hyman, director Robert Aldrich and co-star Ernest Borgnine for the first time since "The Dirty Dozen." Aldrich previously had directed Marvin in "Attack!"

"Emperor of the North," filmed entirely in Oregon, was Marvin's third time on location in the state. He starred as bearded Ben Rumson in Paramount's "Paint Your Wagon," shot around Baker. Earlier, at Bend, Marvin played a minor role as a soldier in Universal's 1958 "Pillars of the Sky," starring the late Jeff Chandler.

Lee Marvin was born in New York City, the son of advertising executive Lamont W. Marvin and Courtenay Marvin, a fashion and beauty editor. His brother, Robert, is a noted artist. Lee ended a spate of fitful schooling — including expulsion for pushing a classmate out a window — when he left St. Leo's Benedictine Academy in Dade City, Fla., in 1943 to join the Marine Corps.

He saw action at Kwajalein, Eniwetok and Saipan during World War II.

After the war Marvin met E. J. Ballentine who operated the Woodstock little theater. He cast the young veteran in an off-Broadway version of "Roadside." This debut inspired Marvin to enroll, under the G.I. Bill, at the American Theatre Wing in New York. He did a score of off-Broadway plays, then landed a featured role in the Broadway production of "Billy Budd."

Later, Marvin toured in the national companies of "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "The Hasty Heart." In New York, director Henry Hathaway cast Marvin in 20th Century-Fox's Gary Cooper starrer, "You're In The Navy Now," his screen debut, which brought him to Hollywood for added scenes.

That was in 1949, and Marvin has worked fairly steadily ever since. He estimates he has appeared in more than 250 "live" and filmed television shows. During three seasons Marvin starred in 117 episodes of "M Squad." Before "Cat Ballou," he had played in some 30 films.

"Cat Ballou" was, of course, the turning point for Marvin. In a dual role he gave a most inventive comic twist and won an Academy Award for "Best Actor."

"Ship of Fools" brought Marvin fresh critical acclaim. While starring in "The Professionals," he accepted the offer by Hyman and Aldrich to star in "The Dirty Dozen." Then, after "Point Blank," Marvin co-starred with Toshio Mifune in a two-actor tour de force, "Hell in the Pacific."

Recent roles include those in "Monte Walsh" which co-starred Jeanne Moreau; "Pocket Money" with Paul Newman; "Prime Cut" with Gene Hackman.

It Takes More Than a Name, But That's Important, Too

Twenty miles north of Durango, some 6,000 feet up in the rolling high desert, seems an unlikely place to find a noted London journalist. But there he was on a cold November morning, another in the endless stream of newsmen who seek and find John Wayne no matter where in the world he goes.

The sun was just inching above the purple hills and the crew was setting up for the first shot on "Cahill, United States Marshal," a Batjac Production for Warner Bros., starring Wayne, George Kennedy, Gary Grimes and Neville Brand, with Andrew V. McLaglen directing for producer Michael A. Wayne.

Big John had folded his 6'4" frame into the high-seated leather director's chair he always uses. The name "Duke" is burned into the back. The Britisher pointed to the name and asked how it came into being.

As if sorting out his thoughts to tell the story for the first time, Duke pondered for a moment. "A big old dog back in Iowa and a bunch of firemen did me that favor," he grinned, "and I thank them every time I think of it."

"I loved that dog and he loved me and we played together all the time. His name was Duke. He'd walk partway to school with me as far as the firehouse on the corner and he'd be waiting for me when I came home. The firemen began calling us Big Duke and Little Duke. I weighed about 50 pounds then, so I was Little Duke. When we moved to California a few years later, the name came with me and I've had it ever since."

The Londoner had one more question. Why, he asked, was Duke so thankful for the nickname?

"Well, hell," rumbled the world's all-time boxoffice star, "my real name is Marion Michael Morrison. And if you were my size, wore cowboy boots and a big hat, outrode, out-fought and out-shot all the badmen in the West, how would you like to climb down off a horse, throw your saddle over the corral rail and then walk off-camera and sit in a chair labelled 'Marion?'"

Director Peter Yates Takes New Form Of Action

the real underworld," he explains. "But the greatest violence is not what men do with machines but what they do to each other."

To dramatize "the feelings of men who live in the underworld from day to day," Yates has filmed the Higgins novel in its Boston settings. "If these words were written in the Boston area by a Boston man you must come to Boston to film the story," the director points out.

So Yates, his cast, headed by Robert Mitchum and Peter Boyle, and his crew spent this past winter filming "Eddie Coyle" completely on location, exteriors and interiors, in Boston. Victor Kemper, his cinematographer, focused on the city's various bars and cafes, the ultra-modern Government Center, the Boston Gardens hockey stadium and even a rock quarry.

Before the actual filming began, Yates rehearsed his actors for two weeks. During the filming, Yates says, "I give the actors freedom, let them run and develop the characters themselves."

"Making films is fun," Yates continues. "I'm thankful that I can be a director, I enjoy it. And seeing films is fun and shouldn't be spoiled by a lot of pompous explanations. Let the audience have the pleasure of discovering the meanings themselves."

CHURCHES

There are more than 145 churches which include major denominations within New Hanover County.

PARKS AND RECREATION

Parks & Sports: Wilmington has an extensive recreation program that includes 370 acres of parks, including 14 parks, 15 ball fields, 16 tennis courts, 2 stadiums and an amphitheatre. Municipally owned Greenfield Lake, is one of the South's finest gardens that includes a 6 mile scenic drive. The world's largest Rotary Emblem Garden, a rose garden and a fragrance garden for the blind are included at Greenfield. A Kiddle Zoo and amusement park attracts thousands of youngsters. In addition to an 18 hole municipal golf course, there are 4 private 18 hole golf courses.

Museums & Art Galleries: St. John's Art Gallery, the Wilmington/New Hanover Museum, Fort Fisher Museum, Brunswick Town Museum and the privately owned Blockade Runner Museum, are open to the public daily. The USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial including a museum, permanently berthed in the Cape Fear River at Wilmington, is open and viewed by thousands annually.

Theatres: Thalian Hall, the area's first legitimate theatre, built in 1853, is used regularly by the Thalian Association. Dramatic and musical performances are given in the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. The UNC-W Drama Department performs at S.R.O. Theatre on campus. There are 7 indoor motion picture theatres and 3 drive-ins.

Special Annual Events: The North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington is held each spring near Easter, at the peak of the spring bloom. Over 200,000 visitors annually enjoy the 4-day program and beautiful flowers.

Fishing Tournament New Hanover Fishing Club: The largest fishing club in the world conducts a year-round tournament. Trophies are awarded for about 40 species at their annual meeting held during the first of each year. Membership open to anyone for a nominal fee.

Recreational Facilities: Miles of white sandy ocean beaches, the Intracoastal Waterway, sounds and bays as well as miles of fresh water rivers provide relaxation, fishing, and life boating for residents and visitors alike. Through the fall and winter months, excellent hunting attracts bird, water fowl and small game hunters from afar.

TOURISM ATTRACTIONS

Airline Gardens: An outstanding showplace. Its famed gardens of azaleas are set among ancient oaks and are open all year to visitors. Fee charged.

Blockade Runner Museum: An authentic presentation on the great supply line to the Confederacy during the War Between the States. Dioramas, displays, pictures, scale model ships, and artifacts on display. Fee charged.

Fort Caswell: Began in 1828 by the U. S. Government as a coastal fortification protecting Cape Fear River, and named after Richard Caswell, first governor of North Carolina. The post was decommissioned after World War I and reactivated for use in artillery training during World War II. It is now a Baptist retreat.

Fort Fisher: A shrine of the War Between the States. Fort Fisher was the site of the largest naval bombardment in history until the Battle of Jutland in World War I. Armament relics raised from blockade ships sunk for 180 years can be seen in the Visitor Center-Museum on the site.

Greenfield Gardens: Rated by many as the most beautiful municipal lake and gardens in the south. It affords a five-mile scenic drive around a picturesque lake. With its millions of flowering plants, mostly azaleas, camellias, dogwood, wisteria, and others. It has a playground, picnic area, rides, and kiddie zoo.

Moore's Creek Battleground: The Moore's Creek National Military Park near Currie, N. C. is maintained by the National Park Service and is the site of a Revolutionary War Battleground that was significant as the first patriotic victory in the South. Open daily 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

National Cemetery: Here lie the dead of the Union Army, mostly Michigan and Wisconsin volunteers, who died in the assault of Fort Fisher in 1865. Veterans of the Spanish-American War and World War I and II dead have been placed at rest here also.

Oakhurst Cemetery: Serene and beautiful, especially in the spring when thousands of dogwood trees are in full bloom. Many historical and unusual graves make it significant.

Old Brunswick Town: Now being excavated and principal structure foundations restored as historic site by N.C. Department of Archives and History. "mural" for historical-minded visitors. This community was established in 1728 and walls of original St. Philips church are still standing. Visitor Center-Museum open daily.

Orten Plantation: This original southern plantation dates back to 1728, and a perfect example of antebellum southern architecture. Gardens are open all year but home is not open to public. Fee charged.

Burgin-Wright House: A completely restored colonial house built in 1772. In 1891 Lord Cornwallis used the house as his headquarters and the basement as a prison. Authentically furnished. It includes a separate three story kitchen. Fee charged.

World's Largest Living Christmas Tree: A large water oak considered the "World's Largest Living Xmas Tree. Succeeding years have seen the number of adorning lights increased as well as additions to amount of Spanish Moss used until now the tree is annually decorated with over 5 tons of Spanish Moss and thousands of multi-colored lights.

Messmore State Park: Along man-made section of the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway. State Park for camping, fishing, boating, with small boat launching facilities. Fee charged for camping.

KINCAID DEFEATS CAMELS

The UNC-W nine lost and regained possession of the league lead in this week's summer league action. The Braves of Pembroke State were the victors Monday night and the 'hawks defeated the camels of Campbell College in a Wednesday nite game. Although the verdict was not the same the score was; the 'hawks lost, then won 4-3.

The 'hawks win gave them a season mark of 17-12. The Wilmington nine were lead by pitcher Harry Kincaid. Kincaid garnered his sixth victory of the summer play.

With the score knotted at three, Bobby Schupp drew a walk to open the 'hawks half of the ninth. Greg Dalton followed with a bounce to first, forcing Bob at second. Catcher Bruce Cavanaugh doubled to left center driving in Dalton, who beat the throw to the plate.

ALL-STARS MEET DOLPHINS

The 1973 college all stars and the Miami Dolphins will clash tonight in the 40th annual Coaches all-star football game.

Both teams feature the hard nosed running games, although both show their poise through fine arial assaults.

The Dolphin's running game will be somewhat hampered due to an injury to Fullback Larry Csonka. Csonka has sustained a muscle pull and will apparently miss this mid-summer classic.

N.L. Captures All-Star Tilt

The American League continued to be dominated by the N. L. in the all-star baseball competition last Wednesday as the Nationals won decisively 7-1. The victory was the tenth in the last eleven contests for the n. l. the game was the 44th in forty years as the Nationals took a decisive edge in all-star play. There was little for the host A. L. fans to cheer about as even fireballing Nolan Ryan could not quieten the national's bats. Homers by Johnny Bench, Bobby Bonds, and Willie Davis were enough to win for the embarrassed americans as they could muster but a run.

Things got off to a bad start for the A. L. as starter Catfish Hunter was hit by a blast off the bat of Billy Williams. Hunter was not seriously injured, but his departure marked the beginning of the americans nightmare. Seven pitchers were used by A.L. manager Dick Williams, but little success was realized.

Summer League statistics

Averages through July 19, show two UNC-W pitchers are leading the summer loop in earned-run average. Duke Sanderson and Harry Kincaid have the best ERA in the league.

In recent weeks, UNCW centerfielder Howie Edgerton, has been slugging like a house afire. The slim speedster, has raised his average some 75 points from a slow start. Howie is followed closely by slugging third baseman Greg Dalton.

Swain Smith, shortstop, has picked up his average from a lowly .210 to a more impressive .265. Swain's bat has been the difference in recent Hawk wins.

THOMAS IMPRESSES ALLEN

Duane Thomas completed his first workout with the Washington Redskins and immediately pleased Coach George Allen. The reason for Allen's happiness is Thomas' attitude. "Duane reported in good shape, better than I thought," Allen said. "We had a good workout this morning. We anticipate no problems with Duane, his agent Abner Haynes, or anybody."

Mike Dowless pitched a two hitter as the Hanover Center little leaguers captured the regular season title. The game took place at the Supper Optimist park with the Hanover Center nine defeating Coca-Cola 4-1.

RENTZEL SUSPENDED

Lance Rentzel has been suspended by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle for the entire 1973-74 season. The league office said Rentzel was denied the privilege of playing due to conduct detrimental to the NFL. Rentzel will be allowed to return in the 1974-75 season should he desire to do so.

KINCAID COOLS CAMELS

Harry Kincaid has defeated the Camels of Campbell College four times this summer. The hawks' hurler has posted a 6-3 record.

KILLEBREW TO RETURN SOON

Harmon Killbrew, star slugger of the Minnesota Twins, will be back in action within the next six weeks. Harmon is recuperating from recent knee surgery.

PROJECT RECYCLE SLATES MEETING AUGUST 1

by bill renn

All students interested in re-establishing Project Recycle should meet Wednesday, August 1, at noon in the SGA office located in the Student Services Building (Pub).

A committee has been formed to investigate the possibilities of starting the recycling project after the first was halted last March. The original project collected newspaper and glass and sold it back to local manufacturers. The project ran previously for 16 mos. and displayed great success by proving that a large percentage of solid wastes are completely recyclable and is economically profitable to boot.

The only reason the former project closed was a lack of manpower. Local citizens responded so well that there were too many tons of newspaper and glass for the staff to handle and process in one day. The collection was held twice monthly at NCNB in the Hanover Shopping Center.

Due to the overwhelming participation by so many local contributors and the obvious need for a recycling center in Wilmington, positive action must again be resumed. It is the dual goal of this committee to re-establish an efficiently operating Project Recycle, primarily for benefit in the present, but in the long run it is necessary for the Wilmington City Council to establish within the existing Sanitation Department a recycling program.

The committee feels that the city is much better equipped to handle the long term goal or recycling the ever-increasing amounts of solid wastes. Through the Dept. of Sanitation, a program should be established so that newspaper and glass containers could be collected and stored separately while trash collectors maintain the same routes. This would mean only slight modifications of existing trash pick-up routines, but the environmental contributions would be tremendous.

Success of such a project is measured by active support and participation. There must be a reliable source of manpower.

What work is involved? The work involved is considerable but is an expected product of the active participation previously mentioned.

On one Saturday during the height of the original Project Recycle, the citizenry contributed from 4 to 6 tons of newspaper and an equal amount of glass. This is a mountain of material that has to be bundled or broken properly and loaded onto trucks. It takes a large work force to handle such incredible amounts of recyclable material. Every other Saturday, a reliable group of volunteers must be responsible for the handling of these returnables.

At this time, the committee is formulating plans to avoid the pitfalls of the original project and to incorporate many new ideas into the new Project Recycle.

Hopefully, civic groups, fraternities, sororities, various clubs and organizations, merchants, and a large number of other people will join this committee to form the vital source of manpower necessary to hold collections on a twice-monthly basis. New ideas and members are actively sought.

The next meeting will be Wed., Aug. 1, noon, in the SGA office, Student Services Building, UNC-W campus. Interested citizens and students are urged to attend. If unable to meet at this time, one should leave word with Bill Renn at 791-8055, Worth Bolton on campus, or Paul Herrington at 256-3214. Messages may be left on the door of the SGA or Seahawk offices.

Wine is the child of sun and earth, the celebration of art, patience, time and care, the single communion. Firstly with the soil into which it sinks its roots and from which it receives soul and body. Secondly, communion with ourselves. It cleanses our taste, training us to turn our attention inward, from the mind, and illuminates the intelligence. Lastly, wine is a symbol and the means of social communion. Around a table, all guests are at the same level as the cup goes round.

'Brigadoon' - favorite fairy tale

Sunday evening, August 5, will mark the closing of the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award winner, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" at the SRO Theatre in Kenan Hall on campus at UNC-W. Curtain time for the final performance is 8:30 p.m. in the air-conditioned theatre.

Opening on Tuesday, August 7 at Kenan Auditorium for a week run is the final offering of the SRO Straw Hat Summer Theatre season, the Alan Lerner - Frederick Loewe musical "Brigadoon."

Always a favorite fairy-tale musical about the mystical town of Brigadoon and the people who live there, the SRO production features Peter Smith as Tommy Albright and Sam Garner as Jeff Douglas, the two travelers who become involved in the dreamworld of Brigadoon. Wyatt Rider is Fiona MacLaren and Fran Keenan is Meg Brockie, the two residents of Brigadoon who meet the travelers and introduce them to the Brigadoon story.

There is something in Brigadoon for everyone; a love story, a Scottish wedding ceremony, a traditional escape dance, an attempted escape which ends in tragedy, and music which is well known and dear to many. Among the songs from Brigadoon are

"Almost Like Being in Love," "There But For You Go I," "Come To Me, Bend To Me," and the title song, "Brigadoon."

The settings for "Brigadoon" are being designed by Cam Baird; Mary Mac Moore is stage manager for the play and will be assisted by Bill Lambert; lighting will be by Alicia Aycott; and properties are being handled by Karla West.

The orchestra for Brigadoon is being conducted by Bob Alexander and piano will be by Nancy Allen. Choreography for the play is being directed by Cam Baird and the dancing, singing, and story of the play will make "Brigadoon" one play the audiences will not want to miss.

Reservations for "Brigadoon" may be made by calling the SRO Theatre Box Office at 791-9695 during the weekdays from 2 til 5 p.m., or 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Teenage N.C. To Visit Battleship

Miss Monta Mackie, Miss North Carolina Teen-Ager, will be in Wilmington at the Battleship USS North Carolina August 5 between noon and 4 p.m.

Miss Mackie, 17, is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Mackie of Hickory and is a rising senior at Hickory High School. She won her title April 7 in Charlotte in competition with 65 other girls. She will represent North Carolina in the Miss American Teenager contest to be held in Atlanta, Ga. starting September 1.

During the month of August, Miss Mackie is making public appearances throughout the state in behalf of three popular travel attractions in northwestern North Carolina - Land of Oz at Beech Mountain, Grandfather Mountain in Linville, and Tweetsie Railroad at Blowing Rock.

COSTS OF FRAT LIVING

As an example of the costs of being a fraternity member, figures have been borrowed from the local DU colony, Alpha Delta Upsilon.

Residents of ADU house pay $20 monthly dues, $3 per semester IFC dues, and a monthly rent of $30. This is a total of about $60.75 monthly. DU members who do not reside in the house pay the IFC and ADU dues, and a $3 monthly house tax. Thus, they pay approximately $23.75 monthly.

OKLAHOMA CRUDE

On the eve of his 40th year in movies, producer-director Stanley Kramer offers one of his most satisfying films—his best in some time and a certain moneymaker for Columbia. Star names of George C. Scott, Faye Dunaway, John Mills and Jack Palance are a powerhouse combination that few patrons will want to miss. Just by coincidence, Scott and Mills are the male winners of 1970s Academy Awards, while Miss Dunaway and Palance have three Oscar nominations between them. Each one is in top form. Original screenplay by 31-year-old Marc Norman earned the second highest price ever paid for such a script and it's a first effort at that. Resorting to out-house humor once or twice, the earthiness of the dialog, particularly Miss Dunaway's, is enough to keep the customers satisfied. Almost completely unglamorous, Miss Dunaway plays many scenes clad in long Johns. Scott matches her in unkempt appearance. The Oklahoma oil fields of 1913 were photographed in color and Panavision near Stockton, Cal., by Robert Surtees. Henry Mancini did the score and music for the theme song. Those who speak of moviemaking in the classic Hollywood tradition of action, comedy and drama will delight in "Oklahoma Crude" as a perfect example of a neglected art.

Cycling in the City; or Demise of the Automobile?

(Editor's note: With the campus revitalization of an environmental group, this article from the UNC-Charlotte JOURNAL by Patrick Miller might be of interest.)

The summer of '73 has brought some interesting developments concerning transportation, both locally and on a nationwide scale. The biggest news, of course, comes from the Environmental Protection Agency of the federal government, in the form of new anti-pollution regulations that seek to reverse America's intense dependence on the automobile. Out of these regulations comes one almost sensational suggestion that private automobiles be practically banned in Los Angeles by 1977.

Such a ban would be implemented by restriction of gasoline sales, and when it is implemented (a time extension is likely), it will represent perhaps the greatest anti-pollution step taken in a city that has been struggling with dirty air longer than any other in America. In THE closing circle, a very instructive paperback written by Barry Commoner (the "Paul Rever of ecology") a chapter entitled "Los Angeles Air" outlines the history of that city's experience with air pollution.

Industrial controls on air pollution were instituted in Los Angeles as early as 1947, to control the amount of sulfur dioxide poured into city air by smokestacks. By the mid-fifties, however, some scientific surveys proved to L.A. officials that the real culprit of the air pollution situation was the automobile and shortly afterwards the city's health officials began to trade letters with the country's automobile manufacturers in the first attempts to secure emission control devices for American cars.

The auto industry was slow to react. By 1960 positive crankcase ventilation was available on cars delivered to California, a mostly ineffective development. True exhaust-control devices did not appear on California automobiles until 1966, when emissions were finally somewhat reduced. But then events took an ominous turn; it began to be noticed that the new emission control devices reduced hydrocarbons while increasing the emission of nitrogen oxide. The gas nitrogen oxide readily reacts in sunlight to form nitrogen dioxide, a gas toxic to most living things at sufficient concentration. Peak levels of nitrogen dioxide in Los Angeles began to come close to that concentration.

The next significant occurrence in the battle has actually been the recent announcement by the EPA. The time occurring in between has been one of industry promises, judicial litigation and delayed deadlines. In the end of his chapter on Los Angeles Barry Commoner remarks that air pollution serves as a reminder to man that his "most celebrated technological achievements", including, of course, the automobile, have only turned out to be failures in the natural environment. The new regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency speak in new recognition of that failure.

What about Charlotte? Apparently the EPA has set no guidelines or suggestions for our city, and it also appears that little else is being done here about the problems of air pollution and transportation. There are the signs of concern, however, signs that give definite portent of what will be done in the future.

One example involves a tiny civic event that occurred not too many days ago, sometime in early June. A group of air and transportation conscious commuters abandoned their automobiles for a day that they called "Bike to Work Day". About twenty-five cyclists actually braved the city streets of Charlotte to ride their machines to and from work. The purpose of the event was to demonstrate the interest in and need for construction of bike routes in Charlotte.

The incident received some newspaper and other media coverage, and additionally received some bad vibrations from particular Charlotteans -- mostly motorists who were slowed down by the bicycle group. Radio and television station WSOC seemed to summarize the motorists' feelings by remarking in an editorial that the cyclists "may have saved a little gas, but they sure burned up the tempers of motorists trying to get to work on time." The editorial further noted that the cyclists risked their own safety as they moved into busy city streets. Of course, it is important to realize that the hazard of city cycling is one of the points the riders were attempting to illuminate.

The WSOC editorial concluded: "In the interest of safety, tempers, and punctuality, we say, please, no more mass assaults on Charlotte with bicycles!!!!!!" This statement demonstrates an interesting attitude. For the sake of accuracy, 25 cyclists riding in one group down Charlotte streets can hardly be called a "mass assault"; in the words of a cycling friend, it is somewhat more like a "poor showing". The attitude of the statement, however, points out some significant values.

First of all, it seems primarily important that motorists get to work on time, come hell or high smog levels. If they are held up by anything as trifling as a demonstration of civic and environmental concern, they're going to get mad, and thus possibly wax ignorant of any concerns save their own of speed and punctuality. Therefore it is going to be even less safe to be around them, even for other motorists. The inherent message seems to favor preservation of the status quo, even at the cost of an increasingly asphyxiating quality of life.

(It might be valuable to note that a cyclist who spends any travel time in the city necessarily develops a different set of values. He values the cleanliness of the air, because he so vitally depends on it. He values safety and consideration for other travelers, because he experiences so little of either. And he becomes very concerned about the condition of the city because he is in close contact with it, rather than being sealed off in a high-speed air-conditioned chamber. The cyclist smells the fumes, feels the accumulation of grit on his face after a city ride, and occasionally experiences disturbing feedback from the

Jeans don't have monopoly

This spring Glamour Magazine took a cross-country poll of five hundred girls in random colleges, large and small, rural and urban, to find out just how many items they had of everything from jeans to long evening dresses. What we learned they owned is likely to come as a surprise to anyone who thinks jeans have some kind of monopoly on campus.

IN CLASSES: One student tallies it up precisely when she says, "Anything goes-- from jeans to long skirts." Jeans, by far, lead as being the most popular, with all types of tops -- tailored shirts, knit tops, sweaters, sweaters layered over shirts, turtlenecks, body shirts, corrections, turtlenecks, body suits, smocks, T-shirts, shrink tops, work shirts. Other toppings are blazers, battle and various shaped jackets. But right next to jeans are skirts, dresses ("sporty"), pant suits, "nice pants" (wool and knit), "baggies" and cords.

ON FEET: clogs, loafers, and boots head the list followed by platform soles, heeled shoes of all kinds (high, chunky), tennis shoes, sandals, saddle shoes, crepe soles-- all of them chiefly in leather and suede. Brand names dropped: "Loafers," "Waffle Stompers," "Charlie Browns," "Weejuns," "Buster Browns," and "Fred Braums."

Apparently jewelry is sometimes as much in evidence in class as on dates-- watches, rings, bracelets, earrings, necklaces. Also scarves, handbags, totes.

ON INFORMAL DATES: Most girls say that what they wear to classes they wear on informal dates, too, with jeans and the same tops mentioned before leading again, followed by all the other in-class items. The only additions are an occasional dressy short dress, a long but not dressy dress, velveteen pants with a blazer. The informal dating situation has become a more relaxed extension of co-ed integration where men and women live side - by - side, easily, without a lot of role interference between them.

ON FORMAL DATES: For proms and big or very special parties, the long dress or "formal" is most popular; halter - necked and backless are the shapes singled out, while fabrics are crepe, velvet or chiffon. Second in line are long skirts with dressed shirts or blouses. Many girls mention that they occasionally wear short "dressy" or "Sunday" dresses, midi dresses, mid palazzo pant outfits or velveteen pants with blazers or matching jackets.

Shoes again have enormous range: sandals with heels and platforms; "matching shoes," matched that is to the color of the formals, in satin or peau de clog; silver evening shoes; clogs; patent and suede heeled shoes.

IN BED: Long nightgowns are way ahead of anything else, and in second place, pajamas. What follows is a mixed bag, including men's old shirts (father's or boyfriend's), baby doll p.j.'s, T-shirts (long and short), short nightgowns, pajama tops, underpants, and "au naturel."

The numbers in the sketch represent the college girl 1973's yearly supply of clothes and accessories for all seasons. These are average statistics -- not absolute musts -- to be used as a guide. There are a lot of variables that go into putting together a really workable college wardrobe -- such as the size, location and style of your campus, your own tastes and activities. Your best bet is to be sure you start off with a few of each of the items you consider basic on the list (plus, of course, an appropriate coat, rain gear and other common sense essentials not singled out on the list). Then as you become familiar with the campus customs, you can start adding the extras you'll need. (Photo reproduced with permission from GLAMOUR magazine)

Puritan Life offers hospitalization plan

COVERAGE

The plan protects students at home, at school or while traveling 24 hours a day, for the entire year.

1. This insurance becomes effective at 12:01 A. M. on August 24, 1973, and continues until 12:01 A. M. on August 24, 1974.
2. Protection is in effect during all vacation periods.
3. All school sponsored activities are covered except intercollegiate sports.

BENEFITS

$1,500.00 Major Hospital Protection

When by reason of accident occurring or sickness contracted and commencing during the policy period the student is confined within a hospital, the company will pay the following expenses incurred within a 52 week period, to a maximum of $1,500.00 per accident or sickness.

1. Hospital room and board, but not to exceed per day the normal semi-private room charge, to a maximum of $35.00;
2. 100% of hospital miscellaneous expenses, to a maximum of $200.00 and 80% of the balance;
3. Treatment by a legally qualified physician or surgeon in accordance with the applicable surgical schedule on file with the school, to a maximum of $300.00; in addition, anesthetists will be paid up to 25% of the charge for the applicable surgical procedure;
4. Use of professional ambulance service;
5. Employment of a registered graduate nurse (R.N.);
6. Doctor's calls to a maximum of $10.00 per day;
7. Dental treatment to sound natural teeth if caused by accident.

EXTENSION OF COVERAGE

All surgical benefits included on surgical schedule will be payable on an in-patient and out-patient basis.

SUPPLEMENTAL OUT PATIENT ACCIDENT MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSE

When the student is not hospital confined, the Company will pay for all necessary and prescribed miscellaneous expenses incurred within 26 weeks of the date of accident at a hospital, clinic or Doctor's office to a maximum of $100.00, provided however, that no such expenses are covered under this section of the policy when coverage is afforded elsewhere in the policy.

ELIGIBILITY AND COST

All students attending The University of North Carolina at Wilmington are eligible for participation in this plan. The cost for the entire twelve months is $27.00 per student.

CLAIM PROCEDURE

In the event of accident or sickness the student should:

1. If at school, report immediately to the school health service so that proper treatment can be prescribed or approved.
2. If away from school, consult a doctor and follow his instructions. Notify the health service as soon as possible.

Claim Forms and instructions on claim procedure are available at the health service and local insurance agency.

EXCLUSIONS

The benefits of the policy will not be paid for the following:

- dental treatment, except treatment resulting from injury to sound natural teeth;
- services rendered by the policyholder's infirmary, infirmary employees or salaried physician.

'Lady, Take Warning'

(Editor's note: We had much reaction as a result of the news-feature on rape/assault last week. Jerry Hobbs, a UNC-W student, came by the office to discuss the Karate and Jujitsu clubs, campus organizations for students who are serious about studying the arts. Hobbs indicated that he hoped any interested female students would join the groups.

Also discussed was the possibility of a crash course in basic self defense techniques for women. Further information on this may be released after the beginning of fall semester.

Printed below is an example of how U of Texas is attempting to deal with attack/defense procedures.)

Austin, Texas-(I.P.)-At a football game, 100 coeds can make quite a cheering section. But ask those coeds to practice screaming and their unified vocal chords produce a sound that is barely audible. That was the discovery of two University of Texas at Austin police officers when instructing dormitory coeds in defense measures.

So, to teach coeds how to protect themselves and their property, they created a multi-media program called "Lady, Take Warning!" The University Police Department's only female commissioned officer, Mrs. Lyn Croshaw, and Sgt. Charles Wright have simplified the problem of convincing a coed of the dangers of being careless and then teaching her how to be careful by using a series of specifically produced slides depicting various attack scenes and the prevention or defense for each.

The program opens with a sobering picture of the body of a young woman, who has been raped and murdered. Although the last rape on the UT Austin campus was two years ago, 66 rapes were reported in the city of Austin last year, and more than 2,000 women were assaulted in the city.

University police have scrutinized the campus for poorly lighted areas and areas of heavy brush and hedge growth and have eliminated most problem areas. As a result assaults have become less frequent.

But the program warns, "All too often, women are victims of crimes which might have been prevented--if consideration had been given to simple precautions." "Lady, Take Warning!" emphasizes three defenses open to a woman who is being assaulted: screaming, running, and striking. Most women "don't realize that if they come face to face with someone, they can just scream and that will usually frighten them off," Sergeant Wright said.

As Mrs. Croshaw told the UT Austin coeds, "Screaming will draw attention to your situation, and even if it turns out to be a false alarm, it's better to be a little embarrassed and safe--because it might someday save your life." Running to a lighted residence or a place of business is also advised. "Even running out in the middle of the street to attract attention discourages the attacker from further pursuit," Mrs. Croshaw explained.

When being assaulted, a woman should also strike out with any available object--such as a rolled-up newspaper, magazine, book, umbrella, her fingernails or her foot--aimed for the nose, throat, stomach, groin area, knee cap or instep. "Then keep screaming and run like mad," Sergeant Wright said.

Mrs. Croshaw demonstrated how she could quickly remove from her arm from the grasp of an assailant by taking advantage of another weak point--the thumb. It is difficult to maintain a hold when sudden pressure is exerted on the thumb, she said, which can be achieved by taking a free hand and pulling the rasped hand downward.

Campus defense problems usually involve walking--often late at night--driving at night and dormitory living. The "Lady, Take Warning!" program notes that irregular hours maintained by University students often make it necessary for them to walk on campus "during the hours of darkness, when the majority of crimes are committed."

The following preventive measures are suggested:

Avoid dark, unlighted areas, such as between buildings, parking lots and alleys.

Walk close to the curb; avoid bushes and hedges.

Stay away from short-cuts between buildings where the lighting is poor.

Don't prolong or even start conversations with strangers. These "Innocent" exchanges can reveal pertinent information such as one's address, destination, or if anyone will be there.

If possible, walk with a friend.

For walking alone purchase a small pocket flashlight to examine dark places, shadows. It will also momentarily blind a would-be attacker.

Always inform another person about one's destination and time of return. "This may save your life," the tape warns.

Maintain a secure grip on one's purse. A loose swinging purse is an easy target for a purse-snatcher.

Do not under any circumstances, accept a ride from a stranger. "Many women have been sexually assaulted and even murdered because they accepted a ride," Mrs. Croshaw said.

If being followed by a vehicle, try to get its description and license number, turn and walk in the opposite direction (the car will have to turn around to follow, giving the victim valuable time), run to a lighted residence and notify the police, or flag down a passing motorist for help.

Rules for driving at night are:

Park in well-lighted areas.

Always check the back seat of the car before entering.

Keep windows up and doors locked.

Avoid driving alone when possible.

Don't pick up hitchhikers.

Never leave the keys in the car.

Don't stop to aid a disabled motorist. Observe his location, stop at a service station, remain in the car with doors locked and sound the horn. Report the incident to the police.

Look around for loiterers before leaving the car.

The third major section of the program defines methods of protecting personal property in the dormitory. Sergeant Wright demonstrated that it takes only eight seconds to walk casually into a room, take a wallet from a purse, hide it under his shirt and walk out.

Always keep the door locked when leaving.

Don't encourage thieves by leaving purse, wallet or loose money.

Keep windows locked and blinds shut.

Don't leave clothes in the laundry room. Remove them from the washer and dryer as soon as they are finished.

Register valuables with the University police, who will engrave property with driver's license or Social Security numbers for identification.

Another important area of concern in the dormitory is privacy. "Lady, Take Warning!" suggests keeping blinds and curtains drawn to discourage peeping toms. Telephone numbers should be listed under a woman's initials, and one should never give correct number, address or other information to wrong-number callers. If the call is obscene, the best deterrent is to hang up and contact the police. Women are reminded never to open the door without establishing who is on the other side--this includes coeds in dormitory rooms.

1. CITY HALL - THALIAN HALL. Northeast corner, Third and Princess Streets. This Classic Revival building was designed by John Trimmel of New York, and the cornerstone was laid December 27, 1851. Corinthian colonnade illustrated in this folder faces Third Street, and Thalian Hall, in which the first theatrical performance was given October 12, 1858, faces Princess Street. The Thalian Association was formed and had commenced theatrical performances by 1788; its first home occupied the Innes Academy, located on the same site.
2. NEW HANOVER COUNTY COURTHOUSE. Southwest corner, Third and Princess Streets. The courthouse is a red brick Victorian structure built in 1892.
3. ST. JAMES EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Southeast corner, Third and Market Streets. St. James Parish was established in 1729, construction of the first church edifice having been authorized in 1751. The present Gothic Revival building was designed by Thomas U. Walter of Philadelphia, and the cornerstone was laid in 1835. During the Federal occupation in 1865, the keys were seized, the pews removed, and the building used as a Federal Hospital.
4. BURGWIN-WRIGHT HOUSE (CORNWALLIS HOUSE). Southwest corner, Third and Market Streets. This colonial house was built in 1772 by John Burgwin, merchant, Clerk of Council, and member of the upper house of the North Carolina Assembly. Foundation of the building was the town gaol. Authentic furnishings are used throughout the house. There is a separate three-story kitchen. In 1741, Lord Cornwallis used the house as his headquarters and the basement as a prison. Now owned by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in North Carolina, the building is open from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday at an admission charge of $1.00 for adults and 25¢ for students.
5. deROSIER HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Dock Streets. This Classic Revival house was built about 1815 by Dr. A. J. deRosier.
6. ST. THOMAS ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. 208 Dock Street. The cornerstone of this Gothic Revival building was laid in 1846, and the church was dedicated July 18, 1847. The noted James Cardinal Gibbons was vicar here in 1868.
7. MACRAE HOUSE. 108 South Third Street. This Victorian house was built about 1850 by Donald MacRae.
8. HART-KENAN HOUSE. 111 South Third Street. Built about 1810 by Levi Hart this Classic Revival structure has a carriage house which faces Cottage Lane.
9. SAVAGE HOUSE. 120 South Third Street. Col. Alfred Moore Waddell, historian, lived at one time in this Victorian house which was built about 1851 by Edward Savage.
10. ZEBULON LATIMER HOUSE. 126 South Third Street. This dwelling is a Classic Revival structure built for Zebulon Latimer in 1852 by R. B. Wood, on land purchased from Henry Savage. It is a fine example of the double house, with quarters and carriage house in the rear.
11. FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Third and Orange Streets. The original First Presbyterian Church was erected in 1817 on Front Street. The present building, designed by Hobart Upjohn, was completed in 1927. The Rev. Thomas Wilson, father of President Woodrow Wilson, served as minister of this church from 1874 to 1885.
12. HENRY G. LATIMER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Third and Orange Streets. This Victorian house, built in 1881, is now occupied by students of a local business college.
13. EDWARD LATIMER HOUSE. 208 South Third Street. This Victorian dwelling was built in 1881 by Edward Latimer.
14. DIOCESAN HOUSE. Southeast corner, Third and Ann Streets. This house was built by David R. Murchison in 1876 and was presented by his daughter to the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina.
15. DR. WILLIAM J. H. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Second and Orange Streets. Of Classical Revival design, this dwelling was built, about 1850 by R. B. Wood.
16. ST. JOHN'S ART GALLERY. 112 Orange Street. This building was originally occupied by St. John's Lodge on December 12, 1805. According to the minutes of the Lodge, the original deed was signed January 27, 1803 and the cornerstone laid June 12, 1804. The building was designed by Joseph Jacobs and erected by Benjamin Jacobs.
17. ANDERSON HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Orange Streets. Built about 1830, incorporating an Eighteenth Century corner house, this was later the home of Dr. Edwin A. Anderson, Confederate States Army Surgeon. Dr. Anderson's office still stands in the rear, facing Front Street.
18. BROWN-LORD-GROOVER HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Ann Streets. Alterations and additions have given this house a Victorian character, but the oldest part seems to date back to the Revolution. It was owned by Robert Wells, prior to 1790.
19. GOVERNOR DUDLEY HOUSE. Southwest corner, Front and Nun Streets. A Georgian structure built about 1830, this was the home of Edward Bishop Dudley, the first Governor of North Carolina elected by the people. Plans for building the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, of which Dudley was first president, were formulated here. Among outstanding guests entertained by Governor Dudley was the Hon. Daniel Webster, a guest in 1847.
20. CASSIDY-NEWBOLD HOUSE. 1 Church Street. This house was built in the early Nineteenth Century. In 1828 James Cassidy bought the lot, extending from Front Street to the channel of the Cape Fear River. Cassidy Brothers Shipyards and Marine Railway was located at the foot of Church Street.
21. CAMERON-DIXON HOUSE. 6 Church Street. Colonial architecture of the rained cottage type characterizes this late Eighteenth Century house which was bought by Captain George Cameron in 1800. An unusual hanging stairway adds charm to the interior.
22. BEERY HOUSE. Southwest corner, Second and Nun Streets. Built by Captain Benjamin W. Beery prior to 1818, the Beery House was used by Federal troops as a hospital after the fall of Fort Fisher.
23. COOK-WHITTED HOUSE. 121 South Fourth Street. There is an outside brick kitchen at the rear of this Colonial cottage, built in the late Eighteenth Century. This was the residence of Captain Silas Martin during the Civil War.
24. THE CATHOLIC CHURCH OF ST. MARY. Northeast corner, Fifth and Ann Streets. The cornerstone of this church was laid in 1909. The building was designed by Rafael Quastavina, Spanish architect.
25. SUTTON-HOWEY HOUSE. 222 South Fourth Street. Of Colonial design, this was the residence, prior to 1800, of Martha Moore, and her husband, Ephraim Sutton.
26. EILERS HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Orange Streets. Built by H. B. Eilers in the 1810's, this Victorian residence is a brick town house, known for its excellent cast iron work.
27. HATHAWAY-BONEY HOUSE. 120 South Fifth Street. Jacob Wessell built this Classic Revival residence about 1850. It was sold in 1858 to James L. Hathaway, a merchant who resided there until about 1865.
28. PRICE-TOOMER HOUSE. 121 South Fifth Street. This house was constructed in 1840 by Richard W. Price.
29. FARTHING HOUSE. Northwest corner, Fifth and Dock Streets. Constructed about 1850, the Farthing house has a well-designed porch with curving steps at either end.
30. WILLIAMS HOUSE. 10 South Fifth Street. Now known as the Azalea Apartments, this house was built by George W. Williams about 1869.
31. PRICE-GAUSE HOUSE. 514 Market Street. A Victorian structure with simple decorative details, this house was built around 1845.
32. ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH. Northeast corner, Sixth and Market Streets. This church was organized in 1858; cornerstone for the Gothic Revival building was laid in 1859. It was used by Federal forces as a hospital in 1865.
33. BELLAMY HOUSE. Northeast corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Rufus H. Bunell designed this Classic Revival mansion, and it was built by Dr. John D. Bellamy in 1859. It was used as officers' quarters by Generals Porter, Terry, Colfax and Hawley after the fall of Fort Fisher. Of particular interest are the double parlors with original Confederate Period furnishings. The mansion is open to the public from 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission charge is fifty cents for adults, twenty-five cents for children.
34. FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH. Northwest corner, Fifth and Market Streets. Congregation of this church was organized in 1808. The lot was purchased in 1818, and the Gothic Revival edifice was constructed during the period 1859 to 1869.
35. WILMINGTON PUBLIC LIBRARY. 409 Market Street. Built about 1840, by John Allen Taylor as a residence, this building was bought in 1892 by the Wilmington Light Infantry and given by that organization to the City in 1951.
36. MARTIN-HUGGINS HOUSE. 412 Market Street. Built in 1869 by Alfred Martin, this was the residence of Captain John Newland Maffitt after his marriage to Emma Martin in 1870. Original carriage house still stands.
37. TEMPLE OF ISRAEL. Southwest corner, Fourth and Market Streets. The first Jewish congregation in North Carolina was organized in Wilmington in 1867. The Temple was erected 1875-76.
38. ST. JAMES CEMETERY. Southwest corner, Fourth and Market Streets. This cemetery contains many interesting headstones of Colonial citizens.

Project Recycle re-established

by Bill Renn

If you have any interests in saving what is left of our environment, here is an opportunity to take action. Project Recycle, with new director Donald Massengill, is being re-established in our community. Don and the Environmental Awareness Committee he works with have cited an early September date for putting the solid wastes recycling program, Project Recycle, into operation.

Students, citizens, and anyone else interested are urged to attend a meeting Wednesday, August 8, at noon in the SGA office located in the Student Services Building (Pub).

Those not able to attend the meeting, but who want to become involved, should contact Massengill at 791-4528, Bill Renn at 799-3105 or Worth Bolton on campus. Messages may be left on either the SGA office door or the Seahawk office door.

CYCLING IN THE CITY

psychological effects cars have on their operators. The cyclist's senses alert him to such conditions because he is not continually shielded from them, and is thus not desensitized.)

But WSOB was probably correct in its implication that bicycling will not be the final answer to this city's transportation problem. The editorial suggested car-pooling as a temporary measure to improve traffic and air conditions, a suggestion which deserves to be seconded. But the final answer to the transportation problem of Charlotte must deal with changed commuter life styles that could well include personal bicycle transportation, but must certainly include an effective mass-transit system. And the changes must begin soon, for the problem of air pollution by itself is becoming ever more critical. More than temper and punctuality may have to be sacrificed in coming months and years in order to replace some dangerous customs and habits.

In the meantime, such efforts as are being made deserve notice and publicity. An ad-hoc group of experienced cyclists, businessmen and media men has formed in Charlotte to further the safety of future bicycle travel in Charlotte. Organizations involved include First Union National Bank, Knight Publications, Inc. and WBT (WBT having already sponsored a city-wide Bike-In last fall). Now this group is planning a Bicycle Safety Clinic Day, to be held on or around September 14 at many locations in the city. Emphasis will be placed on providing the public with guidelines concerning bicycle operation, traffic rules, registration, and other concerns that make up safe cycling. Watch for further publicity from the media involved for specific times and locations of the clinics.

A final note: If you have the time, energy, and equipment, try taking a bicycle ride in some relatively urban section of Charlotte soon. If you've been a dedicated user of the automobile, you may become suddenly aware of some conditions that are invisible and intangible when one is under glass.

'Brigadoon' - favorite fairy tale

Opening on Tuesday, August 7 at Kenan Auditorium for a week run is the final offering of the SRO Straw Hat Summer Theatre season, the Alan Lerner - Frederick Loewe musical 'Brigadoon.'

Always a favorite fairy-tale musical about the mystical town of Brigadoon and the people who live there, the SRO production features Peter Smith as Tommy Albright and Sam Garner as Jeff Douglas, the two travelers who become involved in the dreamworld of Brigadoon. Wyatt Rider is Fiona MacLaren and Fran Keenan is Meg Brockie, the two residents of Brigadoon who meet the travelers and introduce them to the Brigadoon story.

There is something in Brigadoon for everyone; a love story, a Scottish wedding ceremony, a traditional sword dance, an attempted escape which ends in tragedy, and music which is well known and dear to many. Among the songs from Brigadoon are "Almost Like Being in Love," "There But For You Go I," "Come To Me, Bend To Me," and the title song, "Brigadoon."

In supporting roles which tell the tale and create the important action of the play are: Cam Baird, Thom Clemmons, Tony Rivenbark, Joel Perry, Ben Thomas, John Van Johnson, Frank McNeill, Tom Jones, Mike Reld, Roland Valentine, David Brown, Melanie Michele, Mebane Baird, Janice Butler, Emma Mahn, Pat Keenan, Sheila Brooks, Jeni Adcock, Sarah White, Gwenn Warren, Nancy Thomas, and Mary Jones.

The settings for "Brigadoon" are being designed by Cam Baird; Mary Mac Moore is stage manager for the play and will be assisted by Bill Lambert; lighting will be by Alicia Aycott; and properties are being handled by Karla West.

The orchestra for Brigadoon is being conducted by Bob Alexander and piano will be by Nancy Allen. Choreography for the play is being directed by Cam Baird and the dancing, singing, and story of the play will make "Brigadoon" one play the audiences will not want to miss.

Reservations for 'Brigadoon' may be made by calling the SRO Theatre Box Office at 791-9695 during the weekdays from 2 til 5 p.m. or 763-7922 on Saturday and Sunday.

Beyond counters of school supplies, shirts, etc., the Southeastern Community College bookstore shelves protect textbooks used by the colleges 1300 students enrolled in 2 year academic studies, 2 year technical and 1 year vocational programs.

See photos and article "Everything You Always Wanted To Know About The bookstore" on pages 4,5.

NOCR studies activity fees

The student activity fee, that small sum tacked onto the tuition-room-board bill at registration time and earmarked for the support of extracurricular activities, was the subject of a recent NOCR study. The fees, the study estimates, add up to the whopping figure of over $240,000,000 nationally every year. And the study did not include fees paid for student health services, intercollegiate or intramural athletics, routine operating costs of student union buildings or activity costs paid out of a college's regular operating budget.

Likewise, the study did not include revenue from activities such as concert admissions, retail store or vending operations, newspaper advertising sales, insurance commissions or any other of a number of self-sustaining operations student groups are becoming involved in. A student concert committee receiving a $10,000 fee allocation, for example, might have a cash flow of well over $100,000 during the school year; the $10,000 allocation from student activity fees is merely a subsidy covering the difference between expenses and ticket sales.

The NOCR study included a detailed analysis of 32 college and university student fee allocations. The proportions of funds allocated for different activities varied widely among the schools surveyed and there was no apparent geographical location or enrollment-size reasons for the variance. A rough idea of the typical distribution of student activity fee funds - which average $25-$35 per student per year - can be obtained from the following figures:

*Popular Entertainment (16-30% of the total activity fees collected)-subsidies for big-name entertainment, popular speakers, movies, etc.

*Student Government Administration, including sub-governments such as residence halls and fraternities (13-27%) - officer and staff compensation, travel, membership dues in national organizations, telephone and other office expense and a surprisingly high cost of conducting student body elections.

*Student Newspapers (12-20%) - the subsidy, usually including an automatic subscription for all students, covering costs of publication over ad revenues, if any. *Student Services (10-18%) - includes items of direct service such as campus bus service subsidies, day care subsidies, legal departments, consumers boards, course-teacher evaluations, etc.

*Fine Arts (8-15%) - dance, theatre, classical entertainment, etc.
*Ethnic Organizations & Events (5-15%)
*Yearbook Subsidies (3-10%)
*Community Projects (3-8%) - tutoring programs, off-campus environmental projects, free breakfasts, voter registration, etc.
*Other Clubs (3-6%)
*Other Publications (5%) - humor and literary magazines.

When school begins in the fall, the allocation of student activity funds will be the first order of business for many student government committees charged with this task. The process usually consists of a series of marathon sessions during which representatives from various campus organizations will outline their budgeted financial needs. After the final allocations are announced, a traditional period of grumbling by the groups that

Summer papers rare on campus

Virtually all student newspapers either stop their operations or publish on a reduced frequency for the summer months. And even on a decreased schedule, campus editors are hard-pressed to find good local news to fill their pages. But one weekly feature that started as summer filler has become so popular that it will undoubtedly be carried regularly throughout the year. The Penn State U. "Daily Collegian" has been running a series of half-page interviews with students selected at random. It takes more than just the natural human curiosity about peers to make such a feature a success, however. Top-notch writing ability is the secret and the author of the Penn State series displays plenty as he tags along with his subjects describing their daily routines in surprisingly interesting accounts.

Your money's worth

Well, friends and neighbors, here you are--the REAL facts--hot off the presses. In the story "NOCR Studies Activity Fees," you see that the subsidy for student newspapers averages from 12-20 per cent. Right here, the total is--get this --less than ONE per cent.

The Seahawk is the one organization/activity that requested LESS MONEY from the Student Government Association appropriations for 73-74 than it received for 72-73. Yet it is one of the FEW organizations/activities which has had greatly increased interest and participation.

It might not also be unwarranted to call attention to "Summer Papers Rare on Campus" which states that "VIRTUALLY ALL STUDENT NEWSPAPERS EITHER STOP THEIR OPERATIONS OR PUBLISH ON A REDUCED FREQUENCY FOR THE SUMMER MONTHS."

Not true here. Except when our printer has trouble with his presses (as he did last week) the Hawk happily greets you early Friday morning--or in the case of last week, early Friday afternoon.

For the "exorbitant" rate of 3 1/3 cents per week, students receive free classified advertising privileges, often valuable coupons (see McDonald's ad on p. 12 for coupon worth 20¢ in french fries and Sav-A-Lot ad on same page for a 29¢ savings on toilet tissue --For what it's worth, we all gotta go sometimes), and a host of interesting and informative articles, as well as weekly movie info.

Face it--during the summer, or during the regular school year, students get their money's worth from THE SEAHAWK.

'Signal Victory' hailed in NWF highway lawsuit

A three-week legal contest initiated by the National Wildlife Federation which could have paralyzed ongoing federal-aid highway construction in several states recently ended when a consent judgment was entered against the Federal Highway Administrator and the Secretary of Transportation.

Hailed as a "signal victory" by NWF, the July 23 judgment focuses on Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) rules which have exempted highway construction from the National Environmental Policy Act's requirements for preparing environmental statements where the proposed federal-aid highway received FHWA "design approval" before February 1, 1971.

"Nobody knows exactly how many highways are involved in this side-stepping of the law," NWF Executive Vice President Tom Kimball stated. "Informed estimates range between 500 and 1,100. The consent judgment represents the FHWA's belated agreement with us that the date of 'design approval' has no significance in determining whether environmental statements should be prepared for ongoing federal aid highway construction—none whatever," he added.

Section 102 of NEPA, which took effect January 1, 1970, requires the preparation of a detailed statement on the environmental impact of any proposed major federal action "significantly affecting the quality of the human environment," including proposed federal-aid highway construction.

The judgment, entered in the U. S. District Court for the District of Columbia, was the result of a lawsuit filed by the NWF in late June. "We're delighted that the FHWA decided to settle this lawsuit so quickly," Kimball said. "Although the agency's prolonged violation of NEPA has caused untold environmental damage, we weren't forced to rub salt in these wounds with a blanket injunction that might have resulted in severe hardship in some areas of the country."

Included in the consent judgment is a settlement agreement which requires the FHWA to identify the federal-aid highways where preparation of environmental statements under NEPA would still be meaningful. As of August 15, 1973, the agency is prohibited from authorizing most proposed right-of-way acquisition or physical construction work on these highways pending case-by-case determination of the need to prepare environmental statements for them. The procedure for making these determinations includes publishing descriptions of the highways in local newspapers and a 30-day period for public comment.

Kimball explained that the decisions will be made at the state level. "It's up to every concerned citizen to express his views on the need for environmental statements. We're encouraging conservationists across the country to participate, and we're confident that the FHWA will require impact statements to be prepared for a large majority of the highways covered by the settlement agreement. We will, however, be watching the FHWA's decisions closely to be certain that they are made in compliance with the terms of our agreement."

Ingenuity and $500,000 Create Town in Middle of Barren Desert

There was a time when a tourist driving north out of Durango, Mexico, would pass a sign about 20 miles along the way reading "La Joya." If that tourist happened to be adventuresome and turned off the road in search of the town, he would find only an assortment of burros, cattle and horses, browsing sparsely in the high desert hills covered by cactus, scrub oak, mesquite and sagebrush.

As of November, 1972, however, there is a difference. $500,000 worth. That same sign is still on the highway but what you can get now is a look at what is probably the finest and biggest western street and motion picture town in Mexico or any other country.

The man behind it all is producer Michael A. Wayne and the reason for it is the Batjac Production of "Caballero, United States Marshal," a western drama for Warner Bros., starring John Wayne, George Kennedy, Gary Grimes, Neville Brand and Marie Windsor.

The script called for such a setting, so producer Wayne had it built.

He put things in motion by contacting art director Walter Simonds and telling him what he needed. From the first sketches on Simonds' drawing board it took 26 weeks, 250 skilled artisans of all crafts from the United States, Mexico City and Durango, and a half-million dollars American before the town came into being. However, one look at this period Western town gives immediate justification to the time, labor and expense involved in its creation.

There is a school, jail, barber shop, pharmacy, bank, boarding house, saloon, hotel, livery stable, general store, town hall, church, fire house, depot, blacksmith shop, three-quarters of a mile of railroad track and a vintage train. Naturally, it's brand new, but it has been aged by expert craftsmen to look a century old.

A new, spacious, carpeted bookstore serves the 1300 (fall 72 figure) commuter students of Southeastern Community College in Columbus County, a scant 50 miles away. Yet here at UNC-W, with better than 2000 enrollment, the bookstore is cramping itself out of room for anything but textbooks.

The problem, as we see it, grows more crucial with each added student who enrolls, because for each one, an additional three or four textbooks must be added to the store's inventory.

It would be nice to have a generous selection of paperbacks from which to draw reading either recreational or supplemental to course studies. It would be very convenient if dorm students could run in and make a quick purchase of toothpaste or deodorant.

But even if there were no way humanly possible for the University officials to arrange the niceties. . . . It is becoming increasingly more dangerous to purchase textbooks during the rush as racers cross the registration finish line and enter the winner's circle as classes start. To elbow or be elbowed is the by-word at these hallowed times. Undoubtedly, countless toes have been crushed, and when all are duly textbooked, bookstore patrons and workers breathe sighs of relief.

Check out the textbook shelves--they're so close together that there is barely room for two calm people on a quiet non-busy day to pass each other--multiply that by 20, add a dose of "back to school jitters," arm each with a few "worth its weight in gold" hardbound texts, and stir with educational enthusiasm and Voila! What results is a number of young people with FUNDAMENTALS OF BIOLOGY, HISTORIA DE LA LITERATURA ESPANOLA, etc. permanently imprinted on their chests, bellies, backs.

Even if there's no "bookstore building" in sight--there's bound to be a way that more space can be found for the essentials, and while we're at it--why not a little convenience? There's got to be a better way.

*BUT WERE AFRAID TO ASK

"The bookstore has been the same size ever since I can remember--since '67 or '68 when I first came out here," one student complained to THE SEAHAWK recently. Not quite so--it was enlarged a bit (to include the office/storeroom which once housed The Seahawk) a couple of years ago.

"It's way too crowded," another student observed. Bookstore manager Mrs. Pat Gaskins agrees. "We don't have room for anything," she stated.

When they close for "lunch" during the busiest times--registration and the beginning of classes--workers replenish the textbook supplies on the shelves.

Bookstore patrons may remember the "good old days" when the store sold candy bars, gum, health foods, etc. But alas, "competition for the (vending) machines" and again space problems eliminated this service.

Mrs. Gaskins has been pondering the possible "hours" for fall registration/classes. There has been a problem with handling money after 5 p.m., but there is a possibility that the store will allow "charges" after that time.

Currently the bookstore handles texts and supplemental books; school and art supplies; current magazines; the old standbys--t-shirts, sweat shirts, jackets, etc; greeting cards; and a limited supply of paperbacks, toiletries and gift items. Again, lack of space limits the service availability.

One of the services that remains constant (and is a great help to many students) is the cashing of small checks. The limit on this service is $20. If a student wishes to cash a check for $20 or less, he may do so in the bookstore upon presenting proper identification (UNC-W ID) and supplying the necessary information requested by the cashier.

If a student is purchasing supplies or books and wishes to cash a check simultaneously, he may make the check out for up to $20 above the price of his purchase.

There's plenty of room in the SCC bookstore for sweatshirts, tee-shirts, jackets, etc. Also available are jewelry, gift items, patches, as well as school supplies and books.

Though the 1300 students are all commuters, SCC bookstore manager Mrs. Harriss Bullard told THE SEAHAWK that a very small supply of toiletries (toothpaste, hose, headache remedies, etc.) will probably be added.

Open continuously from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., the store is staffed this summer by Mrs. Bullard, one part-time work-study student, and one full-time work-study student. Aiding Mrs. Bullard in the fall will be probably several part-time work-study students.

Activity fees

didn't get all the funds they requested (and that includes just about all of the campus organizations) passes, and the school activity year is underway.

The number of students who are directly involved in the dispensation of activity funds is small. And the number of students who understand how the fee system on their campus works is even smaller. Most students make no attempt to question the fee or its allocation since it is painlessly collected at registration time and seldom comes out of a student's discretionary bankroll.

While ignorance or apathy of the subject is the rule, students, when asked, do express opinions about student activity fees. At Illinois State U., a student survey showed that 86% favored mandatory fees for a speakers program and 84% were willing to fund the student newspaper and radio station. But 74% opposed mandatory fees to support cause-oriented groups such as women's lib and 82% objected to fee support of religious organizations. Similar surveys from other campuses reveal that only the campus newspaper and popular entertainment programs are consistently favored by a majority of students as legitimate recipients of student fee funds.

There is a significant national effort to have mandatory activity fees eliminated altogether and a number of schools have made this step in recent years. In the Illinois State U. survey, 48% of the students opposed mandatory fees in principle and 62% favored a pay-as-you-use system for activities.

When a student government must collect fees on a volunteer basis, participation runs 20-60%, although the voluntary fee is usually quite small, probably no more than $4 per year. All activities other than the administrative cost of student government must be self-sustaining in this case. Opponents of mandatory fees object to paying for services that they do not use, and more vehemently, to contributing involuntarily to organizations whose beliefs and purposes they consider hostile to their own. But supporters of mandatory fees argue that many services funded through the fees are conducive to a well-rounded campus atmosphere, even though they may not be directly used by most students. They also contend that the elimination of mandatory fees would simply continue many student activities through higher tuition, but with university rather than student control.

by rocky lane moore

W. A. Butler, famed executive secretary of the Delta Upsilon International fraternity recently visited Alpha Delta Upsilon, a local fraternity located at 5223 Market Street, W. A., who is regarded as one of the foremost executives in his field, attended a special summer meeting of the ADU chapter and presented the Chapter President, David Smith, with a copy of the Delta Upsilon Installation guide.

W. A. travels close to 60,000 miles a year to visit select chapters and colonies within the Delta Upsilon International. His first visit to Wilmington comes almost 4 years since Alpha Delta Upsilon first began to petition DU in 1969. For that length of time the executive branch of Delta Upsilon has reviewed the records of ADU here at Wilmington. This July they decided it was time to act. A tentative date for installation has been agreed on.

Brothers and alumni traveled great distances to participate in the seminary-type meeting and Shrimp-a-roo held in honor of W. A.'s visit. Local DU alumni from other well known universities were on hand to help ADU welcome W.A.

The Shrimp-a-roo was the first event which followed W. A.'s arrival. The little sisters of ADU instructed him on the proper way to eat shrimp. Also visiting with W.A. Butler was his field secretary, David Novelli, and former president of the Rutgers chapter of DU. Both W.A. and David were briefed on ADU's more recent activities. David talked with each of the officers separately, and commented later that he was generally pleased with what had been accomplished this past year.

The Shrimp-a-roo was followed by a meeting held in the DU house. W.A. addressed the brotherhood and alumni that were assembled there. He talked about the influence that the Delta Upsilon International had in the interfraternity council. He attacked the Tau Kappa Epsilon national by saying that they were little interested in standards of any kind and pointed out the weaknesses of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, since its growth is restricted only to the South. W.A. further indicated that if Delta Upsilon makes good at UNC-W, it will attract some of the bigger and better name fraternities to the campus. The meeting ended with a question and answer session that left a favorable impression on the fraternity.

The next day W.A. met with Dr. William Malloy, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, and Dr. Rogers, the fraternity adviser, before leaving on Monday, July 30. Several jubilant brothers were on hand at the airport to see him off. W.A. came with much praise for the ADU Colony. His arrival was meaningful to all the brothers who truly love the DU fraternity. His departure was the beginning of a long-awaited dream of the founding brothers of Delta Upsilon at Wilmington. The dream of affiliation with a great national.

Birth of a new fraternity

by rocky lane moore

The idea of a new fraternity began in 1967 when James Haphazzard and Bill Chapman and one other boy who did not pledge DE were discussing the two fraternities that were on the Wilmington College Campus at that time. After visiting both fraternities James Haphazzard and Bill Chapman decided they were not for us. It was James Haphazzard who originally came up with the idea to start a new fraternity. Bill immediately agreed. Later that night they contacted Rodney McGuire who approved of the idea also. This was the actual beginning of our fraternity.

The three founding brothers worked hard and thought over the idea for many days. They researched school requirements, they asked for advice from the other fraternities, and they began the arduous task gaining the school charter.

The original name of Delta Epsilon was picked by James Haphazzard. DE was a southern fraternity before the civil war. It was disbanded because of the war and was never started again. Our chapter was to be the Alpha-Omega chapter of Delta Epsilon. (First and last chapter of this fraternity since we were local.)

At first the school insisted it was not large enough for three fraternities. Chapman argued that it would take the old rivalries off the other two fraternities. Pi Kappa Phi then Pi Sigma Nu and Tau Kappa Epsilon then Sigma Phi Kappa. The three realized that they must have a constitution, basic ideas, backing from the faculty and community, etc. This didn't dampen their spirits. They went out into the student body and approached the students and asked what people thought about a new and different fraternity. There was considerable criticism on campus of this move. Some felt the idea of a third fraternity would not work, but after much work they stirred enough interest and acquired a good number of brothers and submitted their constitution to the school. The constitution was the result of many nights of burning the midnight oil.

Finally in February of 1968 DE got its charter. For the first time DE could display its letters in front of the fraternity house and get its just recognition from the community. Earlier meetings were held in school buildings, people's houses, Shields ice cream parlor, or anywhere they could find space to meet.

Early offices in the fraternity were called by different names than they were later. For instance the President was called the Master. The Treasurer was called the Keeper of the Exchequer. The historian was called the Keeper of the Annals. The Sergeant of the guard was called the Sentinel. The Secretary was called the Scribe. Other offices included the Keeper of the Scholarship, Keeper of the House, Keeper of the Rush, Pledge Master, and Social Chairman.

The original shield of DE is totally symbolic. Inside the shield are the Greek letters DE which stand for Delta Epsilon. On the top of the letter Delta on its triangular formation a balance bar rests. On one side there are two hands clasped. This is representative of brotherhood. On the opposite side is the lamp of knowledge symbolizing scholarship. The two together represent a healthy balance of both. And if either of these get out of balance you will have death to the fraternity as characterized by the skull and crossbones on the top of the shield. You have the sword of Temper and the sword of justice symbolizing a balance of posers and legality within the offices of the fraternity.

Our greatest Advisor was Dr. Shinn. He spent much time and energy with the fraternity when it was first organized. Although poor health increasingly diminished his efforts, the fraternity is gratefully indebted to him. He has been removed as an active advisor, yet he instilled into the fraternity the ideals of scholarship. Our first year as Delta Epsilon we took the scholarship award from all the fraternities. At that time we had an over-all Quality Point Average of 3.2.

Despite DE's great start, problems later befell it. Leadership in the executive council level deteriorated. Its true sense of accomplishment and belonging was lost. Improper planning made concrete goals impossible. Its growth fluctuated and became endangered at times. But it has survived and persisted. Conscientious brothers of DE worked hard to clean their house of undesirables. Accounts Receivables were reviewed and decisive action taken.

During this period of time the school made the requirement that DE had to affiliate with a national within two years. During this period we wrote every major national. There was a great division in the fraternity as to which fraternity to petition. Half the fraternity preferred Kappa Alpha, a good strong southern fraternity, and the other half did not want to affiliate with something which would restrict them to the south. During this period there was much controversy over selection of nationals. Votes were cast and they real 11 for 1 against.

It was a Bible salesman who came by the DE house one day who introduced us to Delta Upsilon. He was working his way through college selling bibles. On his own he wrote the national about our chapter down here. He expressed much interest and convinced DE to write Delta Upsilon International. They came down and gave a little presentation. Two days later a vote was taken at a called chapter meeting. The vote was unanimous that we affiliate with Delta Upsilon, our constitution and ideals, our thoughts and motives, and desires were reflected in those of Delta Upsilon.

The reasons for our selection concerned the fact that DU does not have strict guidelines. They are completely autonomous. They were large and well established. William D. Chapman was then president when he wrote the Delta Upsilon International. We received a reply in two weeks so in February '69, we became ALPHA DELTA UPSILON.

W. A. Butler, standing, executive secretary for the Delta Upsilon International fraternity, addresses members of Alpha Delta Upsilon local at a recent meeting ing in ADU house on Market Street.

"Sssssss"

IS SPINE-TINGLING

TERRIFYING BIZARRE MOVIE

A terrifying story about a bizarre experiment to transform a man into a snake will screen in Wilmington this week. Universal's "Sssssss" (Don't say it, hiss it!) is Produced by Dan Dresner and directed by Bernard L. Kowalski, the picture co-stars Strother Martin, Dirk Benedict and Heather Menzies.

Striepeke has centered his suspense tale around Martin who is a respected expert in the field of snakes and snake venom. His obsession with the questionable future of mankind leads him to perfect a serum designed to enable man to survive by transforming him into the deadliest creature on earth — a King Cobra. To achieve the change on the screen, Striepeke, formerly head of the make-up department at 20th Century-Fox during the shooting of "The Planet of the Apes" and the series which followed, called upon John Chambers (winner of an Oscar for the "Apes" make-up) to help him create and develop the mutation changes throughout the picture. The executive producers of "Sssssss" (Don't say it, hiss it!), Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown were also involved with "The Planet of the Apes" when they were at 20th Century-Fox.

Almost 100 poisonous and non-poisonous snakes were required for the production. It marked the first time snakes were used as "actors" working with human thespians. The owner of the renowned Hermosa Reptile and Wild Animal Farm was employed as technical expert and trainer. All the players underwent several weeks of "Get acquainted" orientation with the crawling serpents, prior to the start of production.

Martin was awarded his first stellar role as the scientist. Among his recent co-starring credits are "True Grit," "The Wild Bunch," "Cool Hand Luke" and "Red Sky At Morning." Benedict who as the laboratory assistant becomes the subject for an incredible experiment, was on Broadway for six months as the blind hero in "Butterflies Are Free." His only prior motion picture appearance was in "Georgia, Georgia." A former child and teenage actress who appeared in "The Sound of Music" and "Hawaii," Miss Menzies is seen as the daughter of the scientist.

For Zanuck and Brown, "Sssssss" (Don't say it, hiss it!) marks the start of a 20-picture, five-year pact with Universal.

"S s s s s s s" (Don't say it, hiss it!) has been rated "PG" — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers."

Now at the Colony Theatre

Heather Menzies and Dirk Benedict, both laboratory assistants, watch uneasily as Strother Martin (not shown) prepares to corral a King Cobra to extract venom in a public demonstration in the Zanuck/Brown thriller, "S s s s s s s" (don't say it, hiss it!), a Universal picture in Technicolor.

We think "Butterflies Are Free" should have won an Academy Award. "40 Carats" should have, too.

CLEMENTE INDUCTED

Waving the mandatory five year wait period, the board of directors of the Baseball Hall of Fame allowed the Baseball Writers Association of America a vote which unanimously inducted Roberto Clemente into the hall. Clemente was killed in a tragic plane crash while on a mercy mission to earthquake stricken Nicaragua. Clemente's widow and three sons were in attendance at the induction ceremony.

HAWKS FIRE GUERIN

The Atlanta Hawks of the N.B.A. fired General Manager Richie Guerin Saturday and named Pat Williams, general manager of the Chicago Bulls, as his successor. Guerin's firing is the second major shakeup of the Atlanta management in thlast month.

Spokesman for the Hawks said Williams, 33, will take over immediately. The team also announced Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons would be given the additional responsibility of player personnel.

"There's none of these do-mine boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so enervate their blood...that they fall into a kind of male greenness; and when they marry, they get wenches. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and addict themselves to sack".

SNIPER SOUGHT

Police are still searching city-wide in Baltimore for a sniper who shot and wounded two fans at an exhibition football game Saturday between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Baltimore Colts. Wounded was Charles H. Cooper and Rose Marie Dell. Cooper a former A.L.L. American from Duquesne U. was taken to Allegheny Hospital where he had a bullet removed from his thigh. Mrs. Dell was treated for the broken toe at the Three Rivers Stadium emergency station.

HANK'S CHANCES GETTIN' SLIMMER

Hammerin' Hank Aaron's chances of catching and passing the Babe this season have dwindled to a remote possibility. The Atlanta Braves slugger has by his own discretion played in only ten of the Brave's last eighteen games. The Braves star insists there is no injury or illness keeping him out of the lineup. Hank figures to play in the remaining 40 games. He attributes his sitting out games his own doing. He has paced himself he says to get to this point in the season. Aaron feels now that most of the double headers are gone, and there are alot more 'off' days, he will be starting more. He feels if he remains healthy he could possibly break the Babe's record this season. If he doesn't, however, Hank knows he will once again have the opportunity to become the premier homer swatter of all time.

GIBSON OUT

Bob Gibson in a recent game against the New York Mets, twisted his knee and suffered a torn cartilage. The St. Louis team physician stated Gibson should return to work in five to six weeks. Joe Torre, Card third baseman, said he felt it was a very demoralizing blow. He went on to say, it would affect the team, but after coming back from ten games out of first place to take a five game lead, the Card chances were still good.

MCQUIRE SIGNS

Former Marquette backcourt ace Allie McQuire, hoping to continue in his father's footsteps, Tuesday signed a contract with the N.Y. Knickerbockers of the N.B.A.

McQuire, who played for his father, Al, at Marquette for three years and holds that school's record for most assists in one season (322) was picked by the Knicks in the third round of the free-agent draft. His father played for the Knicks for three seasons in the early fifties.

SANDERSON TO MISS PLAYOFFS

As lefty Duke Sanderson will miss the C.C.S.L. tournament this weekend. No, Duke is not ill, at least not physically, but is on his honeymoon. Duke and wife Cokie were married last Saturday and are currently touring the Western regions of the U.S. The fireballing lefthander, will make his home here in Wilmington for at least one year as he will be a senior this coming year.

SECRETARIAT BEATEN IN

$53,850.00 WHITNEY STAKES

Hobeau Farm's Onion led all the way at Saratoga to score a one length victory over heavily favored Secretariat in the $53,850 dollar Whitney Stakes. Secretariat meeting older horses for the first time after dominating the 3 year old ranks last season, appeared to have no trouble in catching Onion after a typical slow start. He could however, not gain a lead. The chestnut son of Bold Ruler, was again ridden by Ron Turcotte, and as usual well paced. Turcotte seemed to feel Secretariat may have been affected by a bump on the head he received as he broke through the starting gate.

The loss gives Secretariat a 7-2 mark plus the triple crown for his efforts thus far this season. The three year-old colt will be retired to stud this fall.

UNC-W SIGNS SAM ROBINSON

TO CAGE GRANT-IN-AID

University of N.C. at Wilmington head basketball coach Mel Gibson, announced the signing of New Hanover cage star, 6-5 Sam Robinson to a grant-in-aid to attend school and play ball at UNC-W.

Robinson had earlier this year announce his intentions of attending the University of N.C. at Chapel Hill. His change of plans was a most fortunate decision for UNCW cage fortunes as coach Gibson brought to a close a very successful recruitin season.

Gibson feels Robinson is just beginning to realize his potential. Furthering his thought, Gibson continued in saying he believes Robinson has as much physical potential as any player he has ever recruited.

Seahawk recruits, 6-6 Rick McKay of Hoggard high, 6-2 Willie Jackson---transfer from Spartanburg Junior College, and three other recruits, will join last years ten man squad still intact. With Gibson putting his sights on still one more blue chip recruit, the Hawks hope to improve on last season's 10-14 mark.

Album Review

by John Wilkins
APPROXIMATELY INFINITE UNIVERSE
Yoko Ono
Apple Records SVBB 3399

Like Flo and Eddie, Yoko has never been given credit for her talent, and then again, she has never shown her talent as she does on this album. With this album Yoko has proved that she can write as well as sing. "Death of Samantha" and "Catman (the Rosies Are Coming)" could well become hit singles (if you are into that bag) yet the words could never make the airwaves.

The lyrics are the best she has written with "Death of Samantha" heading the list. They range from the simple, as in "Kite Song" to the complex, as in "What a Bastard the World Is." "Samantha" could well be the fact as they are in Yoko's life. ("yes, I'm a cool chick baby" and "all that bull and she knows it too.") "What a Bastard" is purely Women's Lib with a change at the end (she just can't do without her man.)

As for the backup, I have never heard the Plastic Ono

FLO & EDDIE
Mark Volman and Howard Kaylan
Reprise Records MS 2141

Frank Zappa's Mothers of Invention has been the beginning for many fine performers, who once separated from the group, fight for their existence in the music world. Volman and Kaylan's first album, THE PHLORESCENT LEECH AND EDDIE, could never be found unless you look under the Mothers. This second album could make the break final as well as with the Turtles. However, it should be interesting to see which group this one is hid under.

Being a Mothers fan, I bought this album because of Volman and Kaylan's association with them. The first time I played the album I was surprised to hear how very little they sounded like the Mothers except on two songs, "Carlos and de Bull" and "The Sanzine Bros.". As for the other songs, they are like a combination of the Mothers and the Turtles, yet they have a pure, strong, very rock sound.

The first side starts with a song called "If We Only Had the Time" and by the end of the side you wish they had more time too. "Afterglow", the last song on this side, only prepares you for the other side which is even better.

Band and Elephant's Memory sound better. The sax in "Catman" and "Approximately Infinite Universe" is master work in it's field and the other instruments combine to form a sound you just can't sit still to.

All in all, this one should be heard. Anyone with an open mind and a belief in a new experience in rock music will love it. You never can tell; maybe even the hard to please among you will like a few cuts from this one.

Side two begins with a strong drum beat played by Aynsley Dunbar (ex-Aynsley Dunbar Retaliation) that enters into "The Best Part of Breaking Up", by far the best rocker on the album. "Marmendy Mill" ends the side only to leave you wishing there was more. The song itself is a favorite and is one of the best produced on the LP.

The only thing left to say is that anyone would like this album. Maybe with its release, the hoax on Flo & Eddie will soon be over.

The U.S.S. NORTH CAROLINA Battleship Memorial is open every day of the year. In the summer months, you may tour the Battleship between 8 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Visitors report a period of about an hour should be allowed to adequately inspect the Showboat's many features. Open to the public are such typical areas as the crew's living spaces, an engine room, 16-inch gun turrets, anti-aircraft gun mounts and the pilot house. A museum and adjoining room memorializing the names of North Carolina's 10,000 World War II dead are highlights of the tour.

The route through the Battleship is clearly marked, making tour guides unnecessary and the self-guided tour may be taken at your leisure and areas of special interest may be revisited. In addition to explanatory plaques located about the ship, there are automatic speakers to describe certain especially interesting areas.

Something For Everyone

Natural and man-made diversions make Greenfield Lake a delight for the entire family.

Acres of camellias, magnolias, live oaks, dogwood, wild plum, wisteria, crepe myrtle and water lilies may excite naturalists. And this and more may be seen on a five mile drive around the lake, as well as by strolling well over a mile of shaded walks.

A zoo, many rides, and playground equipment entertain the children. And for the older sportsmen, there are tennis courts.

Picnic tables watched over by high shade trees encourage all-day outings, and there are restrooms and refreshment stands.

Unfair-y tale 'The 2 Little Freaks'

UNC, papers offer new course idea

Readers of THE WILMINGTON STAR-NEWS newspaper will have access to a new concept in college study, beginning the last week of September.

The paper is cooperating with UNC's Extension Division at Chapel Hill to present a college-level course, America and the Future of Man.

Ten UNC campuses and newspapers in eight North Carolina cities are combining to offer the course to North Carolinians.

Underwritten by a $96,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, this project originates at the University of California in San Diego.

The first course by newspaper will consist of 20 lectures, each written by one of the nation's distinguished scholars. One 1400-word lecture will be printed by the STAR-NEWS each week.

America and the Future of Man will concentrate on such topics as the impact of change on society and value systems, biological and ethical implications of advances in medicine and genetics, and the future of technology and its effects on the quality of life.

The course by newspaper is intended to serve three audiences: the casual newspaper reader whose interest is caught by the information presented; the reader who wants to explore the subject further and will send for a $10 kit of supplementary materials; and the reader seeking college credit for the course.

Students seeking credit may enroll at any one of the ten U of NC campuses. These include Appalachian State U, Elizabeth City State U, East Carolina U, Fayetteville State U, NCSU, NC A&T U, UNC-A, UNC-G, and UNC-W.

Each university will provide a faculty instructor to meet with the students in campus contact sessions of three hours each. These will be held after the tenth lecture and again at the end of the course. The kits are required for credit students, and mid-term and final written work will be given.

North Carolina teachers can earn two certificate renewal credits by successfully completing the course with one of the UNC schools.

Cahill directs local Course by Newspaper

Additional information about America and the Future of Man may be obtained by writing to:

Dr. Charles Cahill,
Program Coordinator
Course by Newspaper Office of Academic Affairs
UNC-Wilmington
Wilmington, N.C.
28401

The Course by Newspaper is designed with the belief that the newspaper is an ideal medium for reaching the thousands of North Carolinians who cannot attend regular college programs and who are eager to continue learning throughout life. The newspaper has several advantages as a medium for presenting college-level courses. It comes to the home in permanent form; it can be kept indefinitely; it can be read and re-read in the student's own leisure and at his own speed.

THE LEGEND OF TUESDAY'S

It was fall 1863—the South was desperately fighting to save its heritage.

Wilmington, N. C. at this time was one of the major port cities for receiving war supplies from other countries.

The Confederate dollar was rapidly depreciating in value and gold was needed to "carry on".

A small group of volunteers was making ready to depart from this area to cross the New Mexico border. Their purpose—find gold and return to Wilmington. Knowing the importance of their mission, these men fought the elements as well as the bitter thoughts of defeat. Upon reaching the border they were exhausted, but able to continue with the thought that gold was close at hand.

Nearing the mining town of Strawberry, New Mexico, they were ambushed by a band of desperadoes, and left for dead. One survivor, more dead than alive, was dragged by his horse into the mining town on Tuesday, the fifth day of December, 1863.

The people of Strawberry took this boy by the hand, and slowly, painfully, nursed him back to health. No past remembered, and for lack of a better name, Tuesday seemed to fit this boy who survived.

Tuesday began to think of Strawberry as his home. The years took their toll on the town, and as the mines began to play out, the people began moving away to greener pastures.

Working as a miner in the last producing mine, Tuesday was in a mine cave-in, and was struck on the head by a falling timber. His memory returned.

On returning to his home in Wilmington, he learned that his family had all died in the war. Left with only an inheritance, he returned to the only home he knew. Tuesday, faced with survival of Strawberry as a town, decided that a casino might revitalize traffic to Strawberry. (Thus, TUESDAY'S was born.)

ROBERTA FLACK RECEIVES AWARD

Atlantic Recording artist Roberta Flack was recently voted Female Vocalist of the Year at the Second Annual Soul and Blues Awards Ceremony in Los Angeles. The presentation was made to Miss Flack following her sellout engagement at Los Angeles' Universal City Amphitheatre by another Atlantic Recording artist, Nikki Giovanni. Roberta Flack's new album, "Killing Me Softly," will be released August 20.

RICK SPRINGFIELD ON ABC, KIDDIES!

Capitol recording artist Rick Springfield debuts in his first network television series this fall entitled "Mission: Magic". The animated ABC-TV show by Filmmation airs Saturday afternoons beginning September 8 and features main-title and songs penned by Springfield based on the story line of each segment. Springfield also appears as a character on the series.

By involving the established singer-songwriter in educational situations, the show strives to elevate the quality of youth oriented programming on ABC-TV.

CAPITAL COUNTRY AGAIN FOR AUGUST

Capitol Record's 7-album release for the month of August will again be highlighted by 4 Country albums, and include new product from Rick Springfield and Marc Wirtz, along with a debut LP from Sherman Hayes, announces Brown Meggs, CRI Vice President, Marketing.

July's "This Is Capitol Country" campaign is proving so successful that the label is continuing the promotion to include August's crop of new albums by such noteworthy Country artists as: Dorsey Burnette ("Dorsey Burnette"), Tony Booth ("This Is Tony Booth"), Dick Curless ("The Last Blues Song") and Brush Arbor ("Brush Arbor 2").

Singer-songwriter Rick Springfield makes his second outing for the label this month with "Comic Book Heroes", while composer-producer Marc Wirtz is also showcased on his second Capitol LP titled "Hothouse Smiles".

Completing the release is Sherman Hayes' initial Capitol album, "Vagabonds Roost".

MCCARTNEY UNHAPPY WITH STIGWOOD'S SGT. PEPPER

Paul McCartney announced today that he has not authorized and is opposed to the proposed Stigwood stage presentation of "Sgt. Pepper" based on the songs which were written by him and John Lennon.

This stage presentation is apparently a dramatization created by Stigwood, not Paul McCartney and John Lennon, of the compositions recorded by the Beatles on the album "Sgt. Pepper" and was created by Stigwood without the consent of either Paul McCartney, John Lennon or the Beatles.

McCartney has instructed his attorneys, Eastman & Eastman, to take all necessary steps to protect his rights.

AZALEA COAST

Attractions . . .

The City of Wilmington, nearby beaches, and the entire Azalea Coast area offers the tourist-vacationer an amazing variety of ways to enjoy his visit. As this booklet clearly shows, there is also a wide variety of accommodations for any budget. And not the least of the area's attractions is the friendly, gracious nature of its people. You'll enjoy your visit to the Azalea Coast.

BEACHES—Wrightsville Beach, Carolina Beach, and Kure Beach offer access to miles and miles of the finest strand along the Atlantic seaboard. All the customary seashore activities are available, plus the opportunity to relax in solid comfort under the bright Carolina sun.

FISHING—Fine charter fishing boats with experienced skippers are available for deep sea fishing at Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches. You may fish for the big ones in the Gulf Stream, or enjoy a short off-shore trip. There are six ocean piers and many miles of clean strand for surf fishing. New Hanover County boasts the world's largest fishing club.

GARDENS—The Azalea Coast is famous for its lovely gardens which reach their peak of beauty in the spring. The formal gardens surrounding the historic house at Orton Plantation are world famous. Airline Gardens is a wonderland of azaleas, camellias, charming lakes and walkways. Beautiful Greenfield Gardens surrounds a lovely lake and is open to visitors, admission free. Each April at Wilmington the height of the flower season is celebrated with the four-day North Carolina Azalea Festival.

SPORTS—Protected water and the broad Atlantic are both readily available to the boating enthusiast. Fine marinas and launching facilities are available for the smallest dinghy or the largest cruisers—power or sail. Water skiing, surfing, and swimming are quite popular. Golfers enjoy the Azalea Coast courses the year around. Tennis and hunting also are popular outdoor activities.

AMUSEMENTS—A variety of amusements, especially at the beaches is yours to enjoy. There are rides, miniature golf, par 3 golf, and many motion picture theatres. Excellent bowling facilities are available, and there are many fine restaurants, especially for seafood. The area boasts two television stations and several radio stations.

Danger in the national park system

Take a minute to read these simple, but important safety rules.
Then go on to a pleasant experience in the national park system.

protect your park and yourself

Your visit to one of the areas in the National Park System can be a most pleasurable and rewarding experience—or it can be a time of vexation, distress, or even tragedy. Much depends on how you and your family observe these simple rules and avoid hazards. Park regulations are designed to protect the natural beauty of the area and to provide for your safety, comfort, and convenience. The use of snowmobiles, all-terrain vehicles, and fires, and the participation in such activities as fishing and swimming are governed by regulations that take into account local conditions and problems. Park rangers are here to help and advise you as well as to enforce regulations. If you need information or are in difficulty, see a park ranger. Complete regulations can be read in the superintendent's office.

don't swim alone

Be alert for underwater obstructions, and when swimming at national seashores, be wary of tidal currents. Never swim or dive alone; always take a friend. Stay within rescue distance of another person and within protected or guarded areas, and always let someone know exactly what you intend to do. Know your capabilities and stay within them. Don't take chances.

register your boat

In all parks where boating is permitted, safety regulations are strictly enforced. Ignoring such rules will not only place your vessel in jeopardy but will endanger your life and the lives of others. You must register your boat with park authorities, and you must meet certain safety standards. It is well worth a few moments to familiarize yourself with the rules.

heed fishing regulations

There is relatively little danger in fishing in any of the parks except in deep water and rapids. Follow posted signs and warnings, and obey park fishing regulations, which, in most cases, are in accordance with State regulations.

be cautious of thermal pools

In thermal pool areas, stay on the trails or boardwalks at all times. The boiling heat is deadly. Keep children under restraint. Leave pets behind.

drive carefully

Park roads were deliberately designed for slow-moving vehicles. Stop at overlooks; don't try to see everything from behind the wheel. Be a considerate driver and watch out for those who are not.

dress properly

Even in the heat of summer it is often cool in the mountainous parks. If you are hiking on rough terrain, be sure to wear sturdy shoes or boots. Some swamp and forest areas are plagued with mosquitoes. An advance check with park employees about protective clothing and repellents will help prevent problems.

songs on the album with Jan Akkerman, lead-guitarist of Focus.

Featured releases from Sovereign include "Out Of Our Hands" by Flash, "Ashes Are Burning" by Renaissance and "Public Foot The Roman", the debut LP by the group of the same name.

WILDFLOWER SPREADS DYNASTY

Capitol recording artist Skylark, whose LP and hit single, "Wildflower" garnered top positions on national sales charts, added a new member to the Canadian-based group on July 29. Amy Skylark Foster, weighing 9 lb. 3 oz., was born at Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria, B.C., to David and B.J. Foster, who formed the seven-member band two years ago.

FLASH NOW TOURING

In conjunction with the release of their "Out Of Our Hands" LP, Flash embarked on a 15-city, four week tour of the U.S. on August 9th. Stops for the group include Pungo Fairgrounds in Norfolk, Virginia; the Midnight Sun in Charlotte, North Carolina; and the Sunshine Inn in Asbury Park, New Jersey.

CONCERTS AND THINGS

Two big concerts are scheduled for North Carolina on August 18th. The first, in Charlotte at Memorial Stadium, features Leon Russell with Mary McCrary and Blue Grass Revival. The second, called Peachtree II, happens at the Jaycee Fairgrounds. Featured performers include Carlos Santana, the Tower of Power, Mott the Hoople, White Witch, and Foghat. Both of these are better than average shows even though promoters shows even though promoters all over the country seem to be trying to feed the public too much of a good thing. Promoters and American Rock bands are on a money making rampage while they drive around in their large, expensive, gas drinking chariots. Yet how many of shell out $5.-$10 every time one of the recently cool bands comes to this part of the state. How many of us attend outdoor concerts where thousands of people leave five to ten beer or wine bottles apiece and the premises that used to please the eye with green grass and flowers now upsets the stomach with what now looks to be a vacated Sanitary Landfill area. Yet some of these same people have the gall and audacity to tell others of us how to live and where our heads should be at. Some of today's rock generation is two faced and has two different sets of ideals—one for them and the other for everybody else. How many denounce other people having clics of friends yet have their own impenetrable group of friends themselves. Try to convince one of us younger set that we're not doing exactly what our own sub-society tells us to do. Concerts are only one way to show us that we're human beings like everybody else even though no one can convince us that anyone else's ideals are as high as ours.

End of editorial for this week and end of column for the summer. It's been nice!

Julie as Maria

Winner of five Academy Awards including Best Picture and Best Direction, Robert Wise's production of "The Sound of Music" stars Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer, and co-stars Eleanor Parker, Richard Haydn and Peggy Wood. The Todd-AO and Deluxe Color musical was produced and directed by Wise. Richard Rodgers wrote music and lyrics for two new songs for the film production, which has a screenplay by Ernest Lehman.

Wise took his cast and crew to Salzburg, Austria, to film the story of the famous Von Trapp family singers against the authentic background of the world-famed "City of Music." They spent 11 weeks filming in many of the city's landmarks such as Mirabell Gardens, Nonnberg Abbey, Winkler's Terrace and the Mozart footbridge.

During the course of the location shooting, which occupied virtually one-half of the production schedule, "The Sound of Music" company utilized historic Frohnburg Castle, now a dormitory for music students at the Mozarteum, to simulate the Von Trapp villa. The actual home of the family was occupied by Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler during World War II and is now surrounded by a high wall, making it useless for filming purposes.

'The 2 Little Freaks'

Once upon a time*

*All UNFAIR-y tales start this way.

There were
2 Little Freaks*

*This story similar in certain ways to 3 little pigs.

Students at WCNU, the freaks spent the better part of each day apartment hunting, and the rest of the day earning the bread to pay the oftentimes exorbitant rent.

FREAKY

said Terry one day. "I've found an apartment and already moved in, signed the lease and everything." But alas, the landlady, who was not a bad chick, huffed and puffed and blew that dude right out of the apartment. "Some of my older clients saw you moving in and say you're an undesirable."

HUFF PUFF

HEY

cried little Terry. "You can't just kick me out!"

"Sure I can," the landlady replied. "Read the fine print in your lease."

WELCOME TO WORMINGTON POPULATION
30,000 GOOD GUYS
10,000 DAMN YANKEES
5,000 FREAKS

Meanwhile, elsewhere in the same city (a medium sized Southern town called Wormington), another freak named John tried to find a nice pad.

Sorry, kid. You look like a freak to me.

He tried.

No Students Need Apply

And tried.

WE DON'T LIKE YOU #%@!!#!
KIDS. YOU GOT NO #%@!!#!
RESPECT AND YOU USE #%@!!#!
TERRIBLE LANGUAGE.

HUFF PUFF***

*Notice all the huffing and puffing going on? We said it was like the three little pigs.

Why didn't the two little freaks try the Wormington College Housing Office?

Reading the fine print, we see:

"Give me your tired, or rested, your poor, or wealthy, your hungry, or fed . . ."

It seems that HEW and all those cool dudes got to have a paper from anyone offering a room or apartment that says "I don't discriminate."

That's a GREAT idea!

Considering the problems that Terry and John had, that's a pretty good idea.

MY NAME IS KILLER. I'M A HELL'S ANGEL & I WANT THE ROOM.

But consider the widow who wishes to rent a room to a female student.

ARE YOU GONNA GIVE ME THE ROOM OR DO I HAVE TO USE FORCE?

HELP!!!!!!

That, friends, is discrimination.

I sort of like sleeping on the beach, but I gotta admit that thunderstorms cramp my style.

So now the only people discriminated against are the students.

At any rate,

The moral is

WORMINGTON IS A NICE PLACE TO GO TO SCHOOL

BUT DON'T

BANK ON LIVING HERE!

Housing hassles students

Finding a decent place to live while going to school is not exactly the easiest part of the UNC-W experience, as many students will testify.

Recently, THE SEAHAWK talked with several students who complained of housing headaches.

'I ain't believin'

One junior, fresh from an interview with the manager of a local apartment complex, shook his head sadly. "I ain't believin' some of the things he told me."

The student had gone to pay a deposit for a one bedroom apartment which he planned to occupy with one other student until a two bedroom apartment in the same complex was vacated. "He said they didn't like students living there, but that I could have the apartment as long as nobody moved in with me. But if they caught a roommate moving in or living there, they'd evict me."

At another complex very near the campus, the same student was again told that they preferred to rent to families rather than students.

Later, happily enough, the guy found an apartment. After living secure in the dorm for two years, he found the rigors of apartment hunting "a pain." He's pleased with his new arrangement, stating that his neighbors as well as the "landlord" are likable and helpful.

"Do you know what I have to do to get the power turned on?" he asked, and given CP&L's service number, he went on his way.

Recently another student discussed his housing problem with THE SEAHAWK. "I moved in Tuesday night," he stated. Upon returning from a field trip Wednesday evening, however, he learned that he would have to move again. "Some of the landlady's older clients saw me moving my stuff in and decided I was an undesirable."

Though the lease said that the management could require an "undesirable" tenant to move, a lawyer that the young man contacted checked into the matter. As a result, he did not have to move.

The result could have been very different had he not called the lawyer.

The status of the housing problem now lies in the hands of students who are interested enough to want to do something positive about the situation.

Hands are tied

Unfortunately for a lot of students, the University hands are tied by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, who, in trying to prevent discrimination against the underdog, are themselves putting pressure on the widow who would like to rent a room to a female student, or on the family who would like to have a girl look after an elderly mother in exchange for free room and board. Before listing any student housing, the University must have the person listing sign an affidavit of "non-discrimination." Many local citizens are unwilling to sign such a document either for the reasons stated previously or the fact that they would prefer to choose who will be living in a room in their home.

From their standpoint, that is understandable.

But the fact remains that in the meantime, many students are adversely affected by the critical housing lack.

Technically, it would seem that the affidavits are relatively worthless, since there are laws protecting against discrimination in housing. Why have prospective renters sign affidavits to protect rights already protected under law?

Currently, several students are discussing possible alternatives for students with a housing problem. Some alleviation for the strain which has been discussed is the regular compilation of a list of apartments or rooms available to students.

Students who have a problem with housing should leave a message in the Student Government or Seahawk offices, both located in the Student Services Building or Pub.

Mark Twain's Classic 'Tom Sawyer' Brought To Screen As A Musical

Celeste Holm is Aunt Polly in the musical film version of the Mark Twain classic, "Tom Sawyer."

"Tom Sawyer," a musical adaptation of Mark Twain's classic, has been brought to the screen under the aegis of a creative team with proven success in reaching the leisure-time public.

The picture is the first film venture of Reader's Digest magazine, which is presenting "Tom Sawyer" as a joint effort with United Artists, one of the leading motion picture companies. The film was made as an Arthur P. Jacobs Production, and follows Jacobs recent successes, "Play It Again, Sam" and "The Planet of the Apes." The screenplay, music and lyrics are by the Academy Award-winning songwriters, Robert B. Sherman & Richard M. Sherman, who won an "Oscar" for "Mary Poppins."

Heading the cast is a company of talented youngsters and noted adult performers, including Johnny Whitaker as Tom, Celeste Holm as Aunt Polly, Jeff East as Huckleberry Finn and Warren Oates as Muff Potter. "Tom Sawyer" is an APJAC International Picture.

Don Taylor directed "Tom Sawyer" after completing "Escape From the Planet of the Apes," and Music Supervisor John Williams took on his assignment fresh from his Academy Award-winning work on "Fiddler On The Roof," which, like "Tom Sawyer," is released by United Artists.

"Tom Sawyer" is based on Mark Twain's novel "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," which was first published in 1876, and for the past 97 years has continued to delight people of all ages, races, educational and social strata.

Obviously, so popular and visual a story was fair game for the infant film industry, and Oliver Morosco brought Tom Sawyer to the screen for the first time in a 1917 silent version with Jack Pickford as Tom. Several years later Jackie Coogan played Tom, and in 1937 David O. Selznick, shortly before he made "Gone With The Wind," produced his own version with Tommy Kelly in the title-role.

Johnny Whitaker has the title role in Reader's Digest musical adaptation of "Tom Sawyer."

Celeste Holm Back In Films As Aunt Polly In 'Tom Sawyer'

After an absence of several years from the screen during which time Celeste Holm starred in her own television series and on the legitimate stage, she returns to play Aunt Polly in the film musical adaptation of Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer."

It took producer Arthur P. Jacobs' record as a successful film-maker (he is responsible for the highly profitable "Planet of the Apes" movie as well as Woody Allen's hilarious hit, "Play It Again, Sam") and an exciting screenplay, music and lyrics by Richard M. Sherman and Robert B. Sherman (who won an Oscar for "Mary Poppins") to lure Miss Holm back to pictures. There is very little in show-business she cannot do—and has not done. She owns an Academy Award for her fine performance in "Gentlemen's Agreement" with Gregory Peck, and two other nominations for "Come To The Stable" and "All About Eve." Her performance as Ado Annie, the gal who couldn't say no, in the original company of "Oklahoma!" was a show stopper throughout her long run.

In 1966 she was named U.S. Performer of the Year. She received the Sarah Siddons Award for her starring role in the stage musical "Mame." Her performance as the Fairy Godmother in Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein's TV production, "Cinderella," is a highlight of the video offering which is screened almost every year.

Miss Holm was starring in the national company of "Butterflies Are Free" when she received the call to play Aunt Polly in "Tom Sawyer." When she learned who was making the film she accepted the role without even seeing a script or hearing a song.

Nicklaus surpasses Bob Jones

With 14th career major title

(taken from the August 13th issue of the "Wilmington Star-News.")

Jack Nicklaus became golf's all-time leading winner of major championships when he won the PGA by a record-tying margin for the third time Sunday, but it took a loser to put things in perspective.

"It took the best in the world again to beat me in a major championship," said runnerup Bruce Crampton, and no one was going to argue with him.

"It's very difficult," Crampton went on, "to beat the best player in the world when he doesn't make a mistake."

Nicklaus didn't make a mistake, either. He hit every green, shot a two-under-par 69, and finished with a 72-hole total of 277, seven under.

Crampton, runnerup the last three times Nicklaus has won a major championship, was at 281 after an 18th hole birdie for a 70.

Crampton said he enjoyed "being in on history," but Nicklaus, who has been trying to win his 14th major title for a year and a half, said that was being a little too dramatic.

"Fourteen is just a number," said Nicklaus, who surpassed the legendary Bobby Jones and ended doubts that his tremendous success may have killed his desire.

"Bobby Jones won his in a much shorter period of time, so there's no telling how many he might have won," Nicklaus said.

"It's bordering on the unbelievable," said Crampton, "that a man still so young, in his early 30's, could have won as many major championships as he has, with such ease."

The 33-year-old Nicklaus, who began the final round with a one-stroke lead, moved within hailing distance of $2 million in official earnings on the U.S. tour with this, his fifth victory of 1973 and 49th of his career.

Nicklaus, leading by a stroke at the start of the day, shot an easy two-under-par 69 and finished the 72 holes at 277.

That was four strokes better than Bruce Crampton, who earned the runnerup spot with an 18th-hole birdie and now has finished second to Nicklaus in the last three major championships Nicklaus has won.

The Golden Bear, whose last major triumph was the '72 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, had been beaten five times in search of that elusive No. 14 and some critics suggested that was because he had become satiated with success.

He used to practice for a week or more at a time at the site of a major championship but here, Jack just showed up two days before, insisted "I'm better prepared for this tournament than I was for the others," and went out and proved it.

His previous rounds were 72, 68 and 68, and he never was in any danger of suffering the type of morale-shattering letdown that killed his bids in the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open this year. He had rounds of 77, 74 and 78 in those tournaments.

For Nicklaus, whose previous PGA victories were in 1963 at Dallas and in 1971 at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., the triumph was worth $45,000, raising his 1973 earnings to $245,424, and moved his career total to $1,949,129.

His brilliant record includes three U.S. Open titles, four Masters, two British Opens and two U.S. Amateurs.

Jones won 13 major titles as an amateur including the U.S. Open four times and the British Open three times. Walter Hagen is third on the all-time list with 11, Ben Hogan has nine and Arnold Palmer—who failed even to survive the 36hole cut here—has eight.

Nicklaus has finished in the top six in 12 of the 15 tournaments in which he has played this year.

Now, about the only world left for him to conquer, outside the $2 million career earnings mark, which he'll surely be the first to pass, is a triple "Grand Slam."

One more British Open championship would give Jack a triple sweep of the four major professional titles, and if you don't realize what that means, just consider that only three other players have even won them all once, and no one else has won them twice.

The victory also put Nicklaus in the World Series of Golf for the ninth time—he has won four times and finished second four times—with U.S. Open champ Johnny Miller, Masters winner Tommy Aaron and British Open titlist Tom Weiskopf. The 36hole competition is scheduled for Sept. 8-9 at Firestone, Country Club in nearby Akron, Ohio, and the winner will receive $50,000.

The four-stroke victory margin for Nicklaus equalled the record since the PGA changed from match play to stroke play in 1958. Al Geiberger won by four strokes in 1966.

There was a three-way tie for third place at 282 among Mason Rudolph, the cigar-chomping veteran who had second place to himself until he took a double-bogey six at the final hole—which cost him $13,125—and Lanny Wadkins and J.C. Snead.

HAWKS.....

look to future

The Seahawks of UNC-W had virtually won the summer championship, but finally twenty three innings of baseball in a six hour period took its toll on the former summer league champs. In semi-final round action, the hawks were within one out of winning the title.

Two extra-inning ballgames, both hawks defeats, saw the Brooksmen losing to Pembroke (6-5) and Carolina (2-1). Both games were drawn out affairs, both of which saw the hawks lose the lead and eventually the game.

Coach Bill Brooks, said, "I have no complaints. We could have won the playoffs."

Brooks admitted he was surprised at the performance of his team. As we all know, Brooks speculated, in May, his team having a lack experience and play around .500.

A great many factors influenced the Seahawk fortunes. The key to the success was infact the word "team".

The rookies, veterans, and even walk-ons each contributed.

The win and two losses drop the hawks to a proud 21-17 mark for the summer. This is definitely a feather in the cap and sign of good things to come for UNC-W athletics.

AARON OFF PACE

Hank hasn't hit a home run since July 31 and if his current rate should hold out, he isn't likely to break the mark this summer. The Babe hit 714 career homers while Hank has hit 701. Aaron hopes to hit atleast ten more homers this season. The Braves have forty or more games to play this summer.

NORTH BRUNSWICK PICKS COACHES

North Brunswick High School athletic director Frank Bua announced the addition of three new members to the staff. Bruce Pfeiffer, Jim Nelson, and ed to coach baseball, football, and track respectively. Bua adds basketball coach to his duties. Bob Joyce have been added.

ALTHEA GIBSON ANNOUNCES HOPES

Althea Gibson, winner of both the U.S. Amateur and Wimbledon championships in 1957 and 1958, said she would like to play in this years U.S. Open at Forest Hills. She expressed desire to play mixed doubles with Arthur Ashe.

POWER BOAT RACES SET

The Wilmington Powerboat Association announced plans for a September 2 race on the Cape Fear River. The event will be sponsored by the National Outboard Association and local officials expect the top power boat racers in the country to be on hand.

JIMMY THE GREEK PICKS PROBABLE WINNERS

Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder, Las Vegas oddsmaker, has picked the Chicago Cubs and Los Angeles Dodgers as likely pennant winners in the National League, while his choices are the New York Yankees and The Oakland Athletics in the American League. Snyder feels his choices are virtually shoo-ins, but feels the Yankees will receive a close challenge from the Baltimore Orioles.

CHARLIE O. GIVES WILLIAMS CONTRACT THRU 1975

Amid locker room squabbles, personal outbursts against the management, and a complete state of disorder, the World Champion Oakland Athletics are managing a slim lead in the American League's Western Division. Although the season is marked by apparent player discontent, owner Charlie Finley seems very contented with his system and manager Dick Williams.

Finley has extended Williams contract through 1975. Williams becomes the first Athletic manager under Finley to not lose his job after a season or less, Williams is Finley's 10th manager since he purchased the A's.

Album Review

by John Wilkins
A PASSION PLAY
Jethro Tull
Chrysalis Records CHR 1040

To the Tuli fan, this has been a long awaited album and not a wasted wait at that. The recording style resembles that of THICK AS A BRICK (without a stopping point until the end.) As to other similarities, there are none between the two albums. THICK AS A BRICK is written as an epic poem. A PASSION PLAY is written as a play.

The material on the album seems as though Tull is stuck in a rut and may even sound bad the first time around, however, the frame of mind a person is in may have a bit to do with it also. The album does improve with play and the sound and recording quality also improve.

Flute and synthesizer highlight the overture and as the lights go down and the curtain slowly begins to rise, Act I, A PASSION PLAY begins:

'Do you still see me even here?'
(The silver cord lies on the ground.)

'And so I'm dead,' the young man said, over the hill (not a wish away). My friends (as one) all stand aligned, although their taxis came too late. There was a rush along the Fulham Road.

There was a hush in the Passion Play.

Act I, the funeral of Ronnie Pilgrimes, starts as above and consist of two songs with instrumental breaks between them. It is an average beginning which quickly enters into Act II.

Act II captures the audience and places them in the play so fast that at first you are not aware of what Tull has done. This act contains the best material on side one which is played with a magic only Tull can perform.

We've got you taped... you're in the play. Here's your I.D. (Ideal for identifying one and all.)

Invest your life in the memory bank...ours the interest and we thank you.

The act is called "The Memory Bank" so beware, your number may be in it too. As the act comes to an end, the curtain falls and there is a short interval.

The interval is a T. Rex. type song, 'The Story of the Hare Who Lost His Spectacles'. The song becomes uninteresting after the first or second time played so its only real success is in getting you up to turn the album over. As it ends, the curtain goes up and Act III is before your eyes (or ears).

We sleep by the ever-bright hole in the door eat in the corner talk to the floor...cheating the spiders who come to say "please," (politely). They bend at the knees.

By Act III, 'The Business Office of G. Oddie and Son', we find that Ronnie Pilgrimes was not an angel on earth and has less chance of becoming one in his present home.

Flee the icy Lucifer.
Oh, he's an awful fellow!
What a mistake!
I didn't take a feather from his pillow.

This act is made up of the best songs on the L.P., two of which have been put out as a single, 'A Passion Play #8 and #9'.

The last act of the play is more or less a summing up of the material in the play. It ends on a high note so maybe Tull has hope for the world as it is today. The curtain falls for the last time, the audience sits in silent amazement, and an average Jethro Tull album is over. But then again, the average Tull album is better than most anyway.

NIGHT LIFE in Wilmington? Perhaps, in addition to the community "places to go; things to do," there are increasing campus activities for students with variable interests. The Fine Arts Committee began its series of 28 movies with "Billy Jack" last Monday night. The next scheduled film is "Fritz the Cat" on September 7. The committee also has scheduled four live performances including the personal appearance of Pat Paulsen. The Concert

Committee will present a number of live concerts beginning in late September. The Dance Committee will have several free dances for students in the Pub. A new committee, the Video Tape Committee, will offer several closed-circuit Video Tape programs. The Drama department will present a number of productions. The University Music Series will also offer a concert series.

Soccer goal - improve for '73

This year's Seahawk Soccer team under Coach Calvin Lane will be trying to improve on a misleading 5-8-1 record last season. Last year's Seahawks opened to a miserable 0-6-1, but rallied to win five out of their last seven matches and fall one game short of making the playoffs.

Last year's most improved player, David Wychel, along with most valuable defensive Hal Goodson head the list of Seahawks returning for the '73 campaign. Others returning who have looked sharp in early practice include Joe Maskery, John Jordan and Charlie Wells.

New and impressive faces on the '73 team include Solomon Bennett, Gene Borowski, Tim Chance and Tim Willette, are exceptional goals from Maryland who should do well to help with the Seahawks' defensive problems.

This season the Seahawks will be playing on a new soccer complex which will be officially opened September 14 against East Carolina in the opening round of the UNC-W Soccer Kickoff Tournament.

With school support and a few breaks, this could very well be the year of the 'Hawks. Come out and bring a friend.

SGA seeks volunteers

by Keith Hales

The S.G.A. is looking for people to work on various committees and with several new projects and activities and invites any interested persons to stop by the S.G.A. office, in the Pub, and fill out a form stating what type of activity they would be interested in working with. This year the S.G.A. is offering many opportunities in which students will be able to work.

President of the Student Body, Bill Renn, has been working this summer on starting a new Consumer Advocate Group on campus and needs people to work on this. There has also been a rebirth of last year's project recycle which will be of interest to any student with ecological interests. The S.G.A. is also looking into the possibilities of starting a Housing Committee on campus to try to locate off campus housing and to stand up for student rights in housing contracts. There has also been some reference to a legal counseling program being started on campus to provide students with legal aid.

These are only some of the activities that the S.G.A. has considered for projects on campus. We are eager to get student response and feelings toward these ideas and would like students with new ideas to please stop by the S.G.A. office and talk about them. We in the S.G.A. look forward to seeing and hearing from all of you.

We, having been coerced into writing an article about Open House and not being able to come up with any catchy, flashy, cutesy, tricky beginnings, have decided to forego all that bullshit and just tell you something that should interest you. It has as many meanings as there are people.

There was once a revolution in America because of a war. That time has passed. The violence of rebellion has been replaced by more passive means of change. Open House of many types across the country have helped in a constructive way to bring people together. The media say that the new thoughts of youthful America no longer exist. Untrue. People are still trying to find ways to promote understanding and communication.

Open House is Wilming-

ton's first try at getting it together. However, since there are always more problems than solutions, Opbouse needs people in order to continue. Our services include telephone and person - to - person counseling, legal counseling, arts and crafts in a free once-a-week health clinic, and the establishment of better communication between school kids and college (kids). Everything from giving advice on how to get rid of crabs to suicide prevention. There is growth in Wilmington; we would, and hope you would like to be a part of that growth.

As a child I understood how to give. Have I forgotten? Is it still possible to give as much as I can receive?

Project Recycle to resume

Plans for re-establishment of Project Recycle will be discussed noon Monday, Sept. 3, at a meeting of the Environmental Awareness Committee, SGA office, Student Services Building.

Halted last March, the project collected newspaper and glass. Newspaper was sold for recycling to Wilmington Scrap Iron and Metal Co., and the glass was shipped to Laurens Glass Co., in Henderson, N.C.

The project was a tremendous success for 16 months until it was halted due to a lack of volunteer help. Four to six tons of newspaper and an equal amount of glass were contributed every other Saturday last year when the project was in full swing.

According to Robert Coleman, Wilmington's Director of Public Works, the city will soon initiate a program to pick up newspapers for recycling. Pick-up stations will be located at the city's fire stations.

Since the city is initiating this program, Project Recycle will collect only glass, which must be clear or green. The first pick-up is tentatively planned for Saturday, Sept. 15, at Hanover Shopping Center.

Volunteer workers are now being sought. Open House has already volunteered, and APO and local Boy Scout troops are considering volunteering.

Crisis Line training to begin September 13

Thursday, September 13, will mark the beginning of six weeks of training for new Crisis Line volunteers. Saint Andrews Presbyterian Church is the site of the training, which will begin Thursdays at 7:30 p.m.

There will be one Saturday workshop.

"This (Crisis Line) is a really fantastic opportunity for college students to get involved in the community and practice what they preach," states Mrs. Carolyn Gruelle, executive director of Crisis Line.

Volunteers, who must meet the 18 year age requirement, are asked only to work 8 hours monthly -- and they can pick the time they'd like to work.

UNC-W's own Drs. Andy Jackson and Jim Slager are playing an active part in the training sessions. According to Mrs. Gruelle, the training in non-directive counseling is fascinating. It centers on the arts of listening, enabling volunteers to better communicate, and in becoming more empathetic.

The bulk of the training is handled in small group sessions so each trainee can play a very active part.

Average calls to Crisis Line, Mrs. Gruelle states, increase each month. For '73 the monthly average is running 414 calls.

If interested, students should call Crisis Line or the Drug Abuse Committee.

GRAY DAYS are really few and far between, though it may not seem so, with the past week's rain. When the gray is not apparent (and sometimes when it is), students enjoy various beach and water sports, including fishing, boating, surfing, swimming, girl-watching, and flirting with lifeguards. If you haven't figured out rainy day extra-curricular activities, nothing we could say here could possibly do any good. (photo by jeannie loveale).

Crisis in 5 years

Cities suffocating

America's waste disposal cup "runneth over" and nearly half of its major cities will run out of places to dump their trash within five years, a recent study has found.

The significant report by the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors shows that federal action is critically needed to avoid strangulation of cities on their own wastes.

While annually accumulating a trash pile of 250 million tons, including 28 billion bottles, 48 billion cans, millions of tons of plastic, 30 million tons of paper, 100 million tires, and over 3 million junk cars, the nation's cities are running out of places to dump. About 46.5 percent of the cities will face what the study calls a disposal crisis in five years.

What we are throwing away doesn't really go away at all," warns John G. Hutchinson, mayor of Charleston, W. Va., and director of the three-month study. "It has to be put some place."

The study, titled "Cities and the Nation's Disposal Crisis," reports that while the amount of solid waste in the general population has doubled in the last 50 years, it has doubled in the cities in just the last 20 years.

The future looks even bleaker, it found, primarily because of the fascination with packaging, which the study predicts will have increased 63 percent between 1958 and 1978. Ninety percent of all packaging is tossed on the trash heap.

Not only do federal policies exacerbate the problem cities face in disposing of solid wastes, according to the study, but federal laws also effectively close off the best alternative solution--resource recovery.

Although an estimated 16 to 24 percent of the nation's solid waste is potentially recoverable and reusable, city officials assert, they now spend $6 billion annually (only 2 percent of which is provided by the federal government). There exists in the trash heap metals alone worth $5 billion if they were recovered and reused, they say.

"The markets for recycled materials," the study reports, "are severely limited due to federal policies which favor the use of virgin materials and discourage, even penalize, the use of recycled materials."

Such policies include depletion allowances for extractors of natural materials, capital gains tax structure that favors miners, and transportation freight rates that discriminate against shipment of scrap materials, the report says.

"It is not the choice of cities that only 1 percent of municipal wastes are recycled," city officials say. "It is an aggregate choice compelled by federal policies, limited markets and consumer preferences. And for a nation facing inevitable resource scarcity, it is highly significant that current federal policy shows no awareness of the relationship between the generation and disposal of solid wastes and the depletion of national revenue."

While local governments spend 50 percent of their environmental budget on solid waste management (garbage disposal), the proposed Federal Budget for 1974 earmarks only 1 percent of its environmental request for such programs.

As a first step toward easing the load, city officials say, the federal government must take the lead in slowing the mushrooming growth of the packaging industry that wraps, boxes, pads and conceals more and more consumer goods.

"Voluntary action directed at source reduction has been slow to happen," these critics argue, "and seems unlikely on a national scale. Packaging standards are a spectre to the private sector. Nonetheless, it must be done."

In addition, the cities are calling for federal policies that would promote experimentation -- like New York City's consideration of a plan to burn waste to generate power -- and promote recycling.

Among the report's recom-

FROM THE NEST

WELCOME AND WELCOME BACK -- To freshmen, transfers, and old friends, a hearty "hi y'all!" Hope the year will be profitable and enjoyable.

WHILE DRIVING DOWN MARKET STREET last weekend, was passed by a guy driving an LTD with Alabama tags - and an "ARRIVE ALIVE" sticker. Sort of funny, since he was zippling from lane to lane doing anywhere from 10 to 15 mph above the posted speed limit. uys like that get all the breaks-neck, back, a couple of ribs.

JOAN (MRS. MATT) HUNOVAL, who was a secretary in the Academic Affairs office last year, had her baby. Grapevine says it was a bouncing boy.

DID YOU SEE "BILLY JACK" Monday night? A great start for the 73-74 Fine Arts Committee Film Series. Chairman Raleigh Tod has lined up some flicks for this year that can't be beat, as well as four live shows featuring PAT PAULSEN, a Mark Twain impression by Jack Thomas, a cartoonist, and a musical rundown of the lives of Cole and Linda Porter.

By the way, if you haven't already bought a season ticket to the Fine Arts movies, you'd better get moving. Where else can you see a film for less than 7.5 cents? The next film will be that X-rated cartoon, "Fritz the Cat."

Bet your mother told you even less about this than about Ultrabrite...

WE WOULDN'T WANT TO GIVE IT AWAY, so we won't mention the name of the band that Wes Knap's Concert Committee is trying to line up for the first concert in late September, but it's initials are BADFINGER.

OH, AND ON WATERGATE...Squawk adviser and Questionable Activities Director Linda Moore poked her head in the door the other day and announced she had found a book which gets to the bottom of the Watergate affair. "The National Watergate Test," published by Price, Stern, Sloan, includes such revealing questions as:

- Gordon Liddy reportedly gave impressionable secretaries a poster with a photo of himself.
- posing in front of a police car with a bull horn
- posing in front of the Washington Monument with a chicken in his pocket
- fondling another person's Egg MacMuffin

Anyone care to attempt a correct answer?

NOT SO NEW HOBBY:

WAITING IN LINE

by darlene pearsall

Words cannot describe what a student experiences when he enters the school bookstore. After standing in line for over an hour doing nothing but looking dumb, the wait begins to get to you. You become fascinated by little specks on the walls and ceiling. You stare enviously at the students playing pool...miss, you think. . . miss that next shot. (The long wait increases your hidden sadistic qualities.) You give all the students leaving the store a dirty look. You become mesmerized by the music on the jukebox whether it be "Smoke on the Water" by Deep Purple or "Strangers in the Night" by Frank Sinatra. You begin to move with the music. And when it's "Strangers in the Night" that's bad.

Finally, you approach the door. You throw a sexy look to the cop at the door hoping he'll let you in early. To no avail!

Your mind wanders to the books you need once in the store. You know the price will be well over the amount of cash you have on hand. Should you try a five fingers discount? The cop looks in your direction. Suddenly, you're in the mood to write a check.

Moving inch by inch you eventually come directly to the door. You're the next one to enter! Your eyes fill with tears of happiness, and your body trembles with anticipation.

A student leaves the store and you dart inside the open door. There you behold every student's dream: books everywhere. Not ordinary, bland books but exciting ones like "Calculus, it's the Limit." (Appropriately named since at $10.95 a copy it proves to be the limit of your wallet.) Then, of course, there's "Physical Fitness, the pathway to healthful living" which you're momentarily too fatigued to look at.

Gradually, you finish your "shopping" and proceed to leave the bookstore. You look behind for one last time with fond memories and then exit. Leaving the store, you don't smile, however, because deep in the back of your mind you realize--- Next semester you'll have to do it all over again.

How were last year's concerts?

How could they be improved?

Ron Norton, Sr. - "I feel like we had a real good year. I would like for more money to be available in order to have better groups."

Lemetta Johnson, Jr. - "I didn't like the music presented last year. There were too many unknown groups. I would like to have better known groups."

Teresa Garner, Jr. - "The concerts were okay, but we need to have better groups."

Vernon Powell, Sr. - "The concerts were very good, but the committee needs more money to work with."

Spoon River: the human story

Anyone who has ever read Edgar Lee Masters' SPOON RIVER ANTHOLOGY is sure to have perceived the author's hatred of hypocrisy, his compassion and his uncompromising, concise view of the human experience.

SPOON RIVER ANTHOLOGY is a remarkable collection of free verse poems, each a frank statement about his own life and that of Spoon River by one of the persons buried in Spoon River Cemetery.

First published in 1914, it is the story of the people Masters dealt with in his own life. It is the story of people living in a time in American history when life was pervaded and characterized by widespread hopelessness.

A stage adaptation of Masters' poetry in the form of a drama with musical interludes will be presented by the University Theatre at the SRO Theatre in Kennan Hall.

Begun last night, the play will continue nightly through Saturday at 8:15 p.m.

Director for the production is Neal Bell.

The cast includes Edward Danilowicz, Kathleen Fitzgibbon, Lewis Musser, Lynn Tepper, and Pamela Simpson. Each assumes various roles as the occupants of the Spoon River Cemetery.

Student activities director supervises, coordinates

"In general, I'm a facilitator, not a doer," Director of Student Activities Linda Moore states. She coordinates and acts as a resource person to help plan and implement campus activities sponsored by student groups.

In coordinating the activities, Ms. Moore helps to avoid scheduling conflicts and helps cut red tape.

Hoping to help students realize the full value of their $10 per semester activity fee, she may make suggestions to the SGA for new and/or different kinds of activities. She tries to see that students receive "as much educational value as possible from the planning, executing and evaluation of activities."

Another of Ms. Moore's concerns is seeing that activity plans have some continuity from year to year. She also acts as the first source of information for any activity question or problem encountered by students, college personnel, and general public.

Her office acts as the campus branch of the Voluntary Action Center.

As a small part of her directorial job, Ms. Moore supervises the Student Services Building or "Pub" (janitors, equipment, ordering new equipment, scheduling rooms for activities). She also maintains a lost and found "corner" in her Pub office.

Ms. Moore also acts as Seahawk adviser.

Students with questions or suggestions concerning activities are encouraged to contact Ms. Moore in her office located to the left of the main doors in the Pub.

"Any time"

Crisis Line

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK--Larry Crowder reshuffles the deck as Linda Moore counts out her winnings from the last hand. They've got their roles reversed (Bass & Co. Pale Ale will do it every time), you may have noticed. Indeed, Crowder, the Director of Student Financial Aid, is the money man, and Ms. Moore, as Director of Student Activities, loans out cards, chess sets, etc., oversees the ping pong, pool, and foosball facilities in the Pub, and coordinates activities on campus involving students.

Student aid doubles

While other colleges and universities are experiencing some decreases in their federally funded programs, UNC-W has more than doubled its amount of aid available to students.

"The fact that the program has doubled in 12-18 months' time demonstrates Larry Crowder's dedication," says Dr. William Malloy, vice chancellor for student affairs. "I feel that this is an indication of Mr. Crowder's awareness relative to student financial needs on this campus."

Schools receive help on the basis of the financial needs of the students. But someone must compile and evaluate data for federal consideration. This is part of Crowder's job as Director of Student Financial Aid.

"There is aid for anybody who needs it, who wants it. The only thing is when they can get it -- maybe now, maybe spring semester." Crowder's office has for the past few weeks been a continuous chain of student after student after . . .

As a result of his reports and requests, allocations for the Student Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG) jump from $10,105 for 72-73 to a proposed $36,668 for 73-74.

For College Work-Study, the difference is better than $30,500. Tuesday Crowder was notified that the National Direct Student Loan allocation for the coming year has been projected in the neighborhood of $75,000. This figure has been tripled in two years' time.

Crowder has also put into play the use of the computer in analyzing financial needs. Information dealing with the student's financial situation is fed into the computer, which assigns the student a code number indicating the degree of need.

Computer use insures that each student will be treated fairly. The scholarships are then awarded to the most needy first, then to those of lesser need, until the money runs out.

In all, the total financial aid monies available to students exceeds $5 million.

The increased program has made necessary a larger office as well as the addition of a full-time accounting clerk for 73-74.

Research, loans offered in physics

Research opportunities and interest free loans are two characteristics of the UNC-W physics department.

Areas for research include:

1) Electricity and magnetism: The department has two 15,000 gauss electromagnets, several high voltage power supplies, and assorted electronics for the study of the effects of electromagnetic fields on mater-

2) Optics: The department has equipment for the study of light and optics.

gation of gaseous lasers and is currently studying both DC and RF excited modes. 3) Theoretical physics: general relativity and possible correlation with rotational gravity fields is currently being studied.

The department maintains a student loan fund which is available for physics majors. Loans up to $100, and in some cases more, may be borrowed by physics majors interest free, for one semester upon department approval.

Open Door opens fall season

The Open Door, Wrightsville Beach's recreation center, is now planning its fall and winter programs.

New fall hours are 7 p.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

One of the main projects of the Open Door for the winter is a drama program under the direction of Pat Parker. Several plays are slated for the season, and anyone interested in acting, stage production or lighting should contact Miss Debbi Bowen, Open Door director, for details. Production dates will be released at a later time.

Classes in yoga, decoupage, mobile construction and bicycle safety will also be taught this season.

New staff members are needed for the Open Door. Requirements are that a staff member be 18 years old and be willing to serve at least three hours per week. A training program in listening and drug awareness will be slated for later in the fall. Miss Linda Goodson, staff chairman, should be contacted at 791-8907 for those interested in working as staff members. "We would especially like to have college students as staff members because they can so easily relate to the problems of our high school students who frequent the Open Door," said Linda.

"Anyone with talents they would like to share with this project are also needed. People who play musical instruments or anyone with an interesting hobby they would like to share are also urged to call us. People are what the Open Door is all about, and it takes people who care to make it work," said Debbi.

The Open Door is under the direction of the Wrightsville Beach Recreation and Community Improvement Committee, which is under the auspices of the Board of Aldermen of Wrightsville Beach. Chairman of the Committee is Mrs. Virginia Wheeler. Anyone seeking more information on the Committee's work may call Debbi at 256-2334 or 256-9395 or Mrs. Wheeler at 256-8586.

APO is men's service fraternity

Alpha Phi Omega is a service fraternity. This campus supports the Upsilon Nu chapter, which is designed as a college level organization whose sole function is the provide college age men with an opportunity to provide service for the campus, community, and nation.

APO is open to any men on campus who feel they have the ambition to pursue APO goals.

I DIDN'T THINK I'd be studying so soon. So it goes, and this student takes advantage of one of the small-group study rooms upstairs. (photo by jeannie loveace).

IN THE TYPING ROOM of the library, students will find a Xerox copier, typewriters, and a calculator for their convenient use. (photo by jeannie loveace).

Institute of Religion

classes begin Aug.28

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints invites all UNC-W students to attend the Institute of Religion classes to be held this fall beginning August 28. The course of study will be the New Testament and will be held from 7-9 p.m. every Tuesday night. All that is needed is a copy of the New Testament and a will to learn. Hours credit may be given for any Institute of Religion course at Brigham Young University.

The course will be taught by Helen Henderson who has many years experience in teaching Institute classes.

Classes will be held at the rear of the L.D.S. chapel directly across the street from the UNC-W library. Any questions may be directed to Al Brunjes, Marlon Barnhiss, or Julius Metts.

Fine Arts Commitee provides culture , entertainment

The Fine Arts Committee at UNC-W has the responsibility of providing both cultural and entertaining events. The Fine Arts Committee was first introduced to the campus of Wilmington College in 1968 with a budget of $500. With this budget the committee was able to begin a cultural film series and bring in to the campus one, perhaps mediocre, lecturer. Today the committee has a budget of $9,800 and is second only to the Yearbook in senate allocations. This year, as for the past two years, the Fine Arts Committee will be sponsoring the N.C. Symphony for one concert on campus in the Fall Semester. In speaking of lecturers this year's program has four completely different performances in store for the students and residents in and around Wilmington.

Even though the Fine Arts Committee no longer has its cultural film series it now has a POPULAR FILM SERIES which began on a trial basis in the student services building (PUB) in the spring of 1971. Due to the tremendous success of this series it has now been moved to Kenan Memorial Auditorium where students enjoyed such movies as Patton, Catch 22, Bullitt, Love Story, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, and many more fine fulllength movies. This year we are looking forward to our best series since its beginning. The schedule for this year is:

book review

Laughing to survive

From the irrepressible scholar of humor who claims that it is better to teach English than Chemistry, since an incorrect mixture of authors will not blow you up, comes a mini-anthology of light verse and playful prose; it all started with

FRESHMAN ENGLISH--A SURVIVAL KIT FOR STUDENTS AND TEACHERS OF ENGLISH AND A RELAXED REVIEW FOR THOSE WHO ARE HAPPILY PAST IT ALL (McGraw-Hill, $5.95).

Author Richard Armour--it could not be anyone else!--gives the works to works from BEOWULF to THE FORSYTE SAGA, from the BAY PSALM BOOK to Allen Ginsberg's HOWL. New material dominates a few classic favorites.

In his 47th book Armour proves again that his yoke is easy, his burden is light. Mighty problems are not now and have never been the province of this emeritus English professor who pokes good clean fun at his profession, and at a host of writers both mighty and mitey.

As Armour notes, "Once you discover parody and are willing to be a little irreverent about books and authors you really love, and once you learn how good it feels to have students laughing with you rather than at you, English is better than anything. Anything, that is, that you are likely to do in a classroom."

English dept. offers free compositional lab

The Department of English offers a free service to all students who wish to improve their compositional skills. In the English laboratory students work independently with cassettes or programmed texts on a plan designed to meet their particular needs. Their work is evaluated but not graded. They receive help with such writing problems as grammar, punctuation, spelling, sentence structure, and paragraph development. By eliminating these basic deficiencies, students can write more effective exposition, a necessity for scholastic achievement.

The English laboratory opens in the fall in Arnold Kinsey King Hall, Room 202, Monday through Thursday 1:30 through 4:00 p.m., and Tuesday and Thursday 10:00 through 11:30 a.m. No appointment is necessary.

Investigate the Greeks

by rocky lane moore

"I am definitely anti-fraternity," commented one incoming freshman. "Fraternalities are not for me." When I queried him about his observations, I found that he had never really had any real contact with a fraternity. Therefore, his assumptions were not based on fact. I advised him to investigate the Greek system before he openly criticizes it.

Many incoming freshmen will mistakenly assume the chief goals of fraternities and sororities on campus are that of identity. In the past this has been true to some degree; however, there is a growing trend of individualism on campuses across the country, and the entrenched fraternity systems of the past are having to yield more and more to new concepts and ideas of the kinds of things a fraternity can offer a group of serious students.

Overall the Greeks on campus support the school, in many areas. A majority of the students in student government are Greek. You will find Greeks involved in just about every campus oriented activity. Alpha Phi Omega is a service fraternity entirely dedicated to serving the school. In previous years APO has demonstrated outstanding service to the community and school by raising large amounts of money for charities.

The three social fraternities offer much in the way of leadership development, of leadership development. Through varying programs, they challenge and prepare students to cope with many problems that could confront them during their careers. The fraternity experience is unique in that it allows students to test their abilities in a group setting without the consequences of failure that could possibly occur in a career.

Tau Kappa Epsilon, Pi Kappa Phi, and Delta Upsilon each have their own character. I invite you to visit all three social fraternities before you decide on any one. The Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity is the largest in the United States. Pi Kappa Phi prides itself on its traditions as a southern fraternity. Delta Upsilon is an international fraternity who is the first fraternity to seriously consider expansion into Mexico. All three challenge the student to become involved.

The Sororities on campus also offer the same challenges to young women who aspire to develop themselves beyond regular academic programs. Sororities have programs for social development with emphasis on school and community related activities.

All Greek organizations will be contacting individuals on a personal basis during the Fall rush which commences almost immediately. As Greek Lines Editor I invite you to investigate the Greeks on campus. They have a lot to offer you.

The Student Govt. Association Dance Committee sponsored quite a few dances last year including Homecoming and Beer Parties as pictured here. This year looks like a good year for dances. We'll have a few Beer Busts but they will not be announced. Only those regular dance goers or those lucky enough to show up at the right dance will even know about the beer. Our first dance of the year will be Saturday night, September 1st from 9:00-1:00. It's at the Pub (student services building) like usual. The band playing is White Harvest from Durham, N.C. so be sure to come to the first dance of the year. The Dance Committee, Barry Asbury, Vernon Powell, and Anne Nesbit, would like to personally invite you but the Seahawk is next best thing to a personal invite. See you Saturday.

Life only happens once. You get no second chances. So you go for all the gusto there is. Sometimes you can even taste it.

When you're out of Schlitz, you're out of beer.

Discover
Atlantis

Contrary to popular belief, the ATLANTIS is not a sunken city. It is a LIBERAL arts magazine published by and for the enjoyment of UNC-W students. It needs your help to rise again this year!

The magazine is under new management and hopes for enthusiastic participation from the student body. We would like a large and diverse staff and are offering editorial and staff positions.

Ideas for the new magazine include more photography, illustrative art, and monthly short story, poetry, and/or art contests. Interested? Help add to these ideas and create an improved magazine.

There will be an informal rap session with free refreshments Wednesday, Sept. 5, at 1:30 p.m. in the Student Lounge upstairs in the Student Union Building.

Watch for posters!

Counseling available without charge

Counseling and testing services are available to all University of North Carolina at Wilmington students without charge. Counseling is designed to assist students who have questions concerning educational and vocational decisions or personal problems of a more emotional-psychological nature. Counseling involves confidential interviews with a professional counselor and the use of vocational or psychological tests when appropriate.

The Counseling and Testing Center also administers group testing programs. These include entrance exams, placement tests, and tests required by graduate and professional schools. In addition, a current library of college catalogs, both graduate and undergraduate, is maintained.

The counselors at the Counseling Center, Dr. Darwin R. Newton, Director, and Dr. James B. Slager, encourage students to stop by whether they have a specific concern, or just want to talk with someone. In the near future, Dr. Newton and Dr. Slager plan to offer some growth activities through use of group experiences hoping to meet the needs of more students. Announcements concerning the groups will be made in the near future.

The Counseling and Testing Center is located in Room 217 of the Administration Building (Alderman Hall) and appointments can be made by stopping in the center or calling extension 242.

PRIMARILY A LISTENER, Dr. Darwin Newton is head of the Counseling and Testing Center in Room 217 of the Administration Building. His services are available to students without charge. Students with questions concerning educational-vocational training or problems which prevent them from realizing their potential are urged to drop by the Center, or to stop him on campus at any time.

CHEAP MAYBE, at least from the standpoint that Dr. Jim Slager's assistance at the Counseling and Testing Center is without charge to students. A psychological counselor, Dr. Slager urges students to drop by the center to discuss troubles and triumphs, be they in personal or school-related areas. (photo by Jeannie Lovelace).

FIRST X-RATED CARTOON

With nudity, four-letter words and brilliant humor, "Fritz the Cat" represents a great stride forward in animation maturity, by far the most drastic advance since "Snow White" introduced the world's first full-length animated feature in 1938.

A far cry from Mickey Mouse and Bambi, the cartoon's feline hero will come as a familiar figure to many up-to-date comic strip readers. His encounters with drugs, cops, Hells Angels, group sex and a Harlem riot are enough to start Walt Disney whirling in his grave. Supporting Fritz are other cartoon animals playing key roles as teeny-boppers, hard hats, hippies, Black Panthers and revolutionaries in a pointedly liberal satire aimed at today's sophisticated audiences.

The voice of Fritz is that of Skip Hinant, the same actor who voiced the Snoopy role in "A Boy Named Charlie Brown." In color, "Fritz the Cat" was produced by Steve Krantz and directed by Ralph Bakshi, who also wrote the screenplay. The rock musical score was written especially for the film by Ed Bogas and Ray Shanklin, and features Bo Diddley, Charles Earland, Billie Holiday, Jim Post, Bernard Purdie, Merl Saunders, Alice Stuart, Cal Jader and The Watson Sisters.
